"METROPOLITAN AREA" IS GETTING TO BE OLD STUFF

When a city is disappointed in the census figures of its population, it endeavors to seek solace in creating a "metropolitan area" that includes territory on all sides reaching out as far as there is any congested district. Pontiac has fallen for this sort of stuff and cheers itself up by heralding the fact that in its so-called metropolitan area there reside 81,559 people, and of course the claim is made that they naturally belong to Pontiac. They can claim them if it does them any good, but there are a whole lot of folks in Waterford and Independence townships, portions of which are included in the Pontiac Metropolitan area, who just naturally are loyal to their own communities and don't take any pride or satisfaction in being known as Pontiacers.

Dahlia Cultivation

Dahlia history commences in 1791, when Cavanilles, the director of the Botanic garden of Madrid, Spain, described the flowering of a set of dahlia roots received in 1789 from Vicente Cervantes of Mexico. Dahlias first reached England in 1789 through the agency of the Marchioness of Bute. This had little effect on the history of the plant, however, as all these plants perished from a lack of proper understanding of their needs. They were re-introduced successfully in 1804 through the interest of Lady Holland.

Elixir of Life

"No one need die—discovery of the true Elixir of Life"—was the colorful language used to introduce to the public of the nineties a new patent medicine, which was described further as "a miracle of modern pathological science and ultimate triumph of medical research and investigation—a remedy found at last which, if applied properly, will effectively prevent decay of the tissues, renew the brain, blood, bone and body, and produce a miraculous prolongation of life."—Detroit News.

POWER TOOLS WILL MEET FUTURE NEED

Advantage Is Adaptability for Covering Large Acreage

East Lansing, June 19.—Experience with multiple-row cultivators and the rotary hoe in caring for crops on the College farm and at demonstrations held in different sections of the State have convinced the agricultural engineering department of Michigan State College that these tools will become increasingly popular.

One of the chief advantages possessed by these implements is their adaptability for cultivating large acreages in a short space of time. A two-row cultivator is rated as able to cover from 15 to 20 acres a day, and the rotary hoe will cultivate from 30 to 40 acres a day when drawn with a tractor.

To keep a crop clean thru the use of the rotary hoe, it is necessary to work the ground just as soon as the weeds germinate, according to the agricultural engineering department. If the weeds are allowed to become established, the rotary hoe does not destroy them as effectively as when used earlier.

Successful work was performed with two-row cultivators in a demonstration held in Monroe county. The cultivators were pulled by tractors at speeds which varied from one and one-half to five miles per hour. At the high speeds more of the corn was covered by dirt but the cultivating was well done.

More demonstrations will be held during the summer in Michigan counties.

BANDED DUCKS

A male pintail duck, banded at the Bear River Marshes, Utah, on Sept. 10, 1929, and a female banded on the same day at Dawson, No. Dak., 500 miles to the northeast, were both killed on the same day by the same man at the same place—Toluca, Mexico. This interesting coincidence recently came to the attention of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture which directs bird-banding studies in this country as a means of obtaining information regarding the flights and life histories of native birds. Toluca, where the pintails were killed, is about 1,700 to 2,000 miles from the places where they were banded.

SIMILES OF TODAY

As welcome as frost to a hay fever sufferer.

As rare as a back-seat driver changing a tire.

As hard to find as a farmer who looks relieved.

As colorless as a detective story without a sneaking butler.

Glove Mode Is Varied; 24-Button Model Used

The glove that the modish lady throws into the arena of fashion this spring, what are its special attributes? How does it differ from the glove of a year ago? In the first place it has been feminized just as everything in the world of clothes has felt the influence of a mode that softens and flatters. It has become widely diversified. Fancy has run its merry course with the cuff styles, fitting them to the natural contour of the arm, slashing them for harmonizing inserts, ruffling them in gay ripples over the hand, notes a fashion authority in the Kansas City Star.

Sleeves and the caprices of sleeves have had a very definite effect on gloves and glove fashions. Since sleeves are accepted in every conceivable length gloves have been hurried to it to keep up with them. Long gloves for evening and day wear heralded months ago from that capital of fashion, Paris, have been accepted wholeheartedly and with charming results. Black gloves for the brighter colored evening gown and white for the pastels, that is the rule for evening.

And a lace mitt? A year ago lace mitts in smart society would have indicated but one thing—a costume ball was in progress with some winsome lass masquerading in the mode of a hundred years ago. But 1930 has done willful things with the lace mitt and fitted them into a modern scheme.

Daytime gloves are simple. In addition to the classic suede slip-on—which has taken the hint from a lengthened mode and become slightly longer—there are many glaze kid gauntlets, cut with a slight flare, which may be turned back to show a contrasting lining. White kid with chain embroidery effects in black and white is a favored glove. Stitched patterns are important as always, the diamond motif being much in demand.

Buttons appear to have taken the place of snap or other fastenings on gloves, and gloves in 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and 10, even 24-button lengths are seen.

It would take nearly thirty-five years for an airplane, traveling at two miles a minute, to fly from the earth to Mars.

America is learning good manners, but even yet there are many parents who speak disrespectfully to their children.

Instead of these makeshift prison sentences, it might be advisable to sentence murderers and bandits to a dance marathon.

No Freedom of Worship

Under Peter Stuyvesant

Early in his administration Peter Stuyvesant issued a proclamation forbidding the people to assemble for any religious service other than that of the Dutch Reformed church, which was the established church in the fort, writes P. B. Cole in the New York World, in telling "The Story of New York."

This law was vigorously enforced. Stuyvesant banished from the colony a Lutheran minister who had come from Holland to minister to the large number of Lutherans in the colony and even imprisoned Lutheran parents who failed to have their children baptized in the Dutch Reformed church.

Stuyvesant's iron hand fell heaviest, however, upon the Quakers, a large number of whom had settled on Long Island, in Hempstead. In this settlement was Robert Hodgson, who began conducting Quaker meetings among his townfolk. Stuyvesant halted him to New Amsterdam, and without allowing Hodgson to speak in his own defense, sentenced him to two years hard labor or a fine of 500 guilders.

Patent Leather Belts, Bags, Slippers, Smart

There is a patent on accessory smartness this spring, declares a fashion writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The shining importance of patent leather is seen in the number of bags, slippers and belts it is developing.

Of course the prevalence of black, and black and white in costumes of all types, and the popularity of shiny straws for hats accounts for the current vogue of patent leather. This was illustrated strikingly by a fashionably dressed woman wearing a coat of dull finished soft black wool cut with a deep capelet collar banded in lustrous black galyak.

She wore a shiny panamalaque hat with the brim flaring back from her face and carried on her black gloved hand a neat strapped bag of patent leather. Her pumps were of patent leather finished with a small leather bow at the instep.

A single white gardenia pinned to her shoulder indicated her delight in a beautiful spring day, and an intimate knowledge of late fashion details.

If you are stung—the stings of wasps and bees are quite different in nature and require directly opposite treatment.

A cruel parent told his small boy the other day that about the only reason schools close in the summer time is to give the teacher a rest.
