Novi dancer in select company

Murphy joins class at prestigious Juilliard

Matt Jachman
hometownlife.com

Jack Murphy has been thinking about Juilliard since last summer, but his journey to the storied performing arts school in Manhattan began about 13 years ago. Murphy, of Novi, is a Juilliard freshman, one of just 24 — out of more than 400 who auditioned — in the dance program's Class of '21.

The 19-year-old has been dancing since he was 6. "When I was young, I tried lots of different things: soccer, gymnastics, horseback riding. All over the place," Murphy said recently. "And then one day, my mom just asked me if I would be interested in taking a hip-hop class. ... That's where it all started."

Jack Murphy of Novi demonstrates a leap in Chicago, where he trained with the Joffrey Ballet during the 2016-17 season.

Getting ready for another year

Parkview Elementary School teacher Alexandra Sanchez (with her dog Breslin) and friend Vanessa Lepore walk through Novi's Parkview Elementary on Aug. 23 as they get ready to prepare Sanchez's classroom for the upcoming fall semester. This will be Sanchez's third year at Parkview when classes resume Sept. 5.

A bunch of desks line the halls of Parkview Elementary as the school begins to clean and ready rooms for returning students Sept. 5.

CC grad's fatal 2016 crash prompts cable barrier project

Ken Palmer
Lansing State Journal

State transportation officials are partnering with a private group to install a cable median barrier along a stretch of Interstate 96 in eastern Ingham County.

The work will be done this fall and involves about 1.7 miles of new barrier in the area where a Michigan State University freshman was killed in a cross-median crash nearly a year ago.

The Kiefer Foundation will pay half of the $300,000 project, with the Michigan Department of Transportation paying the rest.

State officials said it's the first public/private partnership of its type in Michigan.

"This effort will help reduce the potential for future tragedies along this busy stretch of freeway and hopefully others in the future," Lt. Gov. Brian Calley said in a news release.

The Kiefer Foundation is named for Mitchel Kiefer, 18, of Northville and a Detroit Catholic Central graduate, who was killed the morning of Sept. 19, 2016.

Police said he was driving west on the freeway near Dietz Road in Leroy Township when his car was hit from behind. The impact forced his car across the median and into the eastbound lanes, where it collided with a truck hauling an empty horse trailer.

A Kalamazoo woman was charged with a misdemeanor count of moving violation causing death. She pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to two years' probation.

Speeding and distracted driving were factors in the crash,

"He was just going to try dance in his life — and he loved it," said Dori Matkowski, founder of Dance Dynamics Performing Arts Center in Walled Lake, where Murphy studied for several years.

Just a year out of high school, Murphy already has two seasons of training with major companies on his resumé, first (while completing his senior year) with the American Ballet Theatre in New York City and, during the 2016-17 season, with the Joffrey Ballet in Chicago.

Even since then, he's completed a two-week "intensive" at Wayne State University with the dance company Complexions, plus a four-week internship with Hubbard Street Dance Chicago. Now, he's getting settled in at Juilliard.

Murphy has wanted to be a dancer for a long time, a goal his family has supported. (Parents Belinda and Mark also have three daughters.)

He is particularly interested in ballet and contemporary dance and is also looking at choreography and teaching. Murphy's favorite classical ballet is Peter Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake" and he was impressed recently by the contemporary Israeli dance company Batsheva.

"Their work is very intense, both physically and emotionally, so that's definitely a performance that I'll always remember," he said.

Murphy said he's drawn to dance as artistic expression and a discipline that means "constantly striving to better yourself as a dancer and knowing that the journey will never end and there's always room to continue growing."

"Jack was always very attentive, hard-working and receptive to getting his talents better and we have continued to help him train and give him opportunities so that he will reach his dream," Matkowski said.

His dance training, plus a home-schooling program for his last three years of high school, kept Murphy plenty busy. But Dance Dynamics gave him many opportunities to perform at competitions, dance conventions, schools and public events.

Murphy is the third student from Matkowski's school, which was established 35 years ago, to study at Juilliard.

"Juilliard has a lot of great information and knowledge and dance training to give me," he said.

He auditioned early this year, in Chicago, along with about 70 other applicants. After one round, in ballet, about half the students were dismissed. Next came contemporary and more brutal of cuts.

By the time they got to the interview stage, there were only nine applicants left, Murphy among them.

"It was very nerve-wracking to know that you've spent so much time preparing for this audition and knowing that it could be over at any moment," he said. "So, yeah, there were a bit of nerves, but also I was confident in my training and preparation."

1849 Michigan State Fair Cornerstone moves to Novi

A treasured relic from the original Michigan State Fair found a new resting place at the Suburban Collection Showplace in Novi, as part of the new 175,000-square-foot facility expansion now under construction.

A ceremony celebrating the placement of the cornerstone for the expansion project was held Friday morning. The massive, seven-foot wide, three-foot tall state fair cornerstone, featuring a blue marble ribbon flowing across the surface, was created in 1849 for the Administration Building at the Michigan State Fairgrounds at Eight Mile and Woodward Avenue.

In 2010, after the state fair was discontinued by then-Gov. Jennifer Granholm, county fair boards from across the state were invited to claim and re-purpose usable remnants from the state fairgrounds. With heavy hearts over the demise of the beloved Michigan State Fair, the Oakland County fair board traveled to Eight Mile and Woodward in search of livestock gates, benches and other items that might be put to use at the annual Oakland County Fair in Davisburg.

As they were preparing to leave, two members of the Oakland board, Mary Ann Floyd and Lori Bositti, approached L.C. Scramlin, the chairman, because they had glimpsed the massive cornerstone that remained unclaimed. "They had to talk me into saving it," Scramlin said. "It was enormous and we had a heck of a time finding a way to move it. In that moment, I really felt that the Michigan State Fair was gone, forever."

Since then, the cornerstone has been residing at the Oakland County Fairgrounds and, since 2012, Scramlin and his wife Jackie have been integrally involved in helping to revive and re-imagine the Michigan State Fair, LLC. The annual event has been a private entity since its inception five years ago, with no taxpayer funding involved. The Scramlins, lifelong sheep breeders and stalwart figures in the Michigan agricultural community, are beyond delighted that the new, private entity state fair has reached a milestone fifth year in 2017. In June, the Oakland County fair board voted to pass the State Fair Cornerstone along to the home of the Michigan State Fair, presented by Ram Trucks, at the Suburban Collection Showplace in Novi.

"As co-superintendents of livestock and lifelong members of the Michigan ag community, the Scramlins have been absolutely crucial in helping to provide continuity and bring legacy to the Michigan State Fair as a private event," state fair Executive Director Steve Masters said. "Their contribution to the success of the Michigan State Fair, LLC, simply cannot be overstated. We are so grateful to them for all their efforts and also for this gracious gesture by the Oakland County fair board. It truly feels as if we are celebrating a homecoming, to welcome the 1849 Michigan State Fair Cornerstone to a place where it will be revered for years to come."

Steve Kiefer, Mitchel's father and chairman of the foundation, said during a news conference Monday in Detroit. The foundation's mission includes raising awareness of the perils of distracted driving.

The median is just 52 feet wide in the area where the crash happened, he said.

Michigan has installed 380 miles of cable barrier since 2008 and is expected to add another 20 more miles over the next four years, MDOT officials said. The barriers have been highly effective in reducing cross-median crashes, they said.

The new barrier announced Aug. 28 will run from Doan Creek to east of Dietz Road in the Williamston and Webberville areas.

The project is the first public/private partnership involving "this type of safety infrastructure," MDOT spokesman Jeff Cranson said.

"There's a finite amount of federal safety funds available," he said. "This could lead to more such partnerships, with either the Kiefer Foundation or others. If foundations and nonprofits want to put a focus on safety, maybe there will be more of this."

NORTHVILLE POLICE BRIEFS

Taste for flavored vodka lands teen in lockup

A woman accused of stealing four bottles of flavored vodka — raspberry, blue raspberry, apple and peach — was arrested Aug. 22 on a larceny charge at the Meijer in Northville Township.

Police recovered the liquor, priced at nearly $61, and the 19-year-old suspect, a township resident, was later released on a $300 bond. She faces a Monday, Sept. 11, hearing in 35th District Court.

Police were called to the store on Haggerty when a security employee there reported having witnessed the shoplifting, a Northville Township Police Department report said.

The employee was watching on closed-circuit television, she told police, when she saw a woman walk into the liquor aisle, put two bottles in her purse and walk out of the store without paying. After stopping at a car, the employee said, the same woman returned to the liquor aisle, picked up two more bottles and again started to leave, the report said.

The employee followed the woman, confronted her about the theft and escorted her to the security office to await police, the report said.

Hospital trespassing

A 22-year-old Sterling Heights man was cited for trespassing after an officer found him on the Northville Psychiatric Hospital property the evening of Aug. 24.

The officer was performing a property check around 7 p.m., a police report said, and spotted two males on the hospital grounds near the main building. The officer yelled at them to stop, but they began running, the report said, and the officer lost track of them.

Using a patrol vehicle to search, the officer found one of them, who originally claimed to be from Canada and claimed to not know he was trespassing, police said. He also said he did not know where his companion had gone.

The man was released with a trespassing citation and a Wednesday, Sept. 6, court date.

Suspended — times five

A 40-year-old Detroit man was arrested for driving with a suspended license after being stopped for making a prohibited right turn at a red light early Aug. 26.

A police report said an officer monitoring traffic shortly before 2 a.m. spotted the man heading west on Seven Mile in a Dodge Charger. He turned right on Haggerty on a red light, the report said, and the officer stopped him nearby.

The driver told the officer the Charger was a friend's car, police said. Asked to show his license, police said, the man produced a state identification card.

Police found the man had five suspensions on his driving record. He was released after paying his own $300 bond, using cash he had with him, and has a Wednesday, Sept. 13, court date. The Charger was impounded.

Taco time! Los Tres Amigos opens in Livonia

David Veselenak
hometownlife.com

It's taken a little longer than Ruffy Ramirez would have liked to get the newest Los Tres Amigos restaurant open.

But he believes the wait will be worth it. "It's a lot of work," he said. "It's why it took forever."

The newest Los Tres Amigos Mexican restaurant opened Aug. 31 at the former Outback Steakhouse location at 29441 Five Mile in the Mid 5 shopping center. It's been completely gutted and redone, with the entire interior of the restaurant receiving a facelift. Poured concrete has given the inside the feel of an Aztec temple, while a lighting system will allow liquor bottles on the wall to shimmer with colored lights at the flick of a button.

Long gone is the teal awning from the Outback Steakhouse, which moved a mile down the street into a new building a few years ago. Now, the restaurant's exterior is covered in stone in a refresh for the site.

The interior will seat about 200, while the patio can accommodate about 70 patrons.

Los Tres Amigos operates more than a dozen restaurants, with others being located in Plymouth Township, Canton and Farmington, as well as places in mid-Michigan such as Lansing, Jackson and Howell.

JOHN HEIDER | HOMETOWNLIFE.COM
Livonia's Los Tres Amigos restaurant, at the southwest corner of Five Mile and Middlebelt.

Ramirez said it was important for him to bring his restaurant to the Livonia area, a place he's wanted to open in for a long time.

Step inside and guests are welcomed with a completely revamped interior. Ramirez and his crew have covered the inside of the restaurant with a finish made to look like stone with Aztec carvings and symbols. All that decoration, he said, was done in-house.

"Everything, we did here," he said. "Nobody has seen anything like that in Michigan."

Even the booths have a personal touch: Ramirez said they were designed by the restaurant and made in Mexico.

As for the food, Ramirez said the restaurant will serve all the same Los Tres Amigos classics, including authentic Mexican dishes such as pollo tapatio, tacos de carne asada, burritos, enchiladas and tacos. Takeout will also be available.

The presentation of the dishes, Ramirez said, will have a little more eye appeal at this new restaurant.

"It will be the same food, but we're going to decorate it a little more," he said.

It will offer a full bar and serve "the best margaritas in town," Ramirez said.

The restaurant will employ between 50-60 people, Ramirez said, with about half of the staff coming from other restaurants to help launch it. After a few weeks, those employees will return to their normal restaurants. Those looking for work can inquire at the restaurant.

Hours at the restaurant will be 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. every day. More information, including a menu, can be found on the restaurant's website, lostresamigosonline.com.

Top culinary exam in country coming to Schoolcraft College this autumn

hometownlife.com

What do the Culinary Institute of America, Le Cordon Bleu and Schoolcraft College have in common?

They all are the hosts for one of the top culinary exams held in the United States.

Livonia's own Schoolcraft College will join these ranks later this fall, when the American Culinary Federation's Certified Master Chef exam will take place in the college's VisTaTech Center from Sept. 30 through Oct. 7 and will feature 14 chefs vying for the certification.

The exam is the top-level of certification those in the culinary arts can receive. Only 67 other chefs have become Certified Master Chefs, and 11 have been named Certified Master Pastry Chefs in the United States.

"It's pretty big for us," said chef Brian Beland, an instructor at Schoolcraft College, the executive chef at the Country Club of Detroit in Grosse Pointe Farms and a Certified Master Chef who took the exam in 2010. "Historically, it has been at the Culinary Institute of America since its inception. 2014 was the first time it wasn't there."

"It's a great opportunity for the school to showcase its facility and its commitment to excellence."

The chefs will come to Livonia from across the country for that week to participate in the exam, which will test their skills when it comes to healthy cooking, buffet catering, global cuisine and baking, among others. Participating chefs will spend hours preparing food, working on presentation and managing their kitchen. Beland said it's expected the kitchens at the college could be operating for 16 hours a day during that week.

While practicing for the test, chef Shawn Loving stops to show students Zachary Bergquist, Karine Snyder and Jeff Shuarce the proper way to glaze vegetables. BILL BRESLER | HOMETOWNLIFE.COM

"The exam itself is based around the core fundamentals of cooking," he said. "It's a master exam of cooking."

Local competitor

One participating chef will have the benefit of knowing where everything is in the kitchen when the exam begins.

Chef Shawn Loving, head of Schoolcraft College's culinary arts department, will be one of the 14 chefs taking the exam. He said he's been preparing for this series of tests since he last took the exam in 2012 and did not meet the threshold.

"I think you get to a place in life where you have to put closure on things for yourself, not any other person," he said. "I felt like I had not put closure on the development of where I wanted to be for the test."

Loving said the fact that the exam is taking place at Schoolcraft College doesn't factor into the way he prepares. He doesn't feel like he has a "home field advantage" coming into the exam, which he prepares for in some way every day.

Karen Mathis, director of marketing and communication for the American Culinary Federation, said Schoolcraft College was chosen after a bidding process. She said the college's teaching kitchens are some "of the most advanced teaching kitchens in the country, which will be put to the test by this year's CMC candidates."

She also said there are plenty in southeast Michigan who are looking forward to seeing the chefs perform during the exam.

am.

Effect on the college

Beland said there's a touch of local elements that could be incorporated into the exam. In addition to Schoolcraft College students acting as aides throughout the exam, Beland said there could be a chance for local ingredients to make their appearance on the preparation tables.

While it's not a guarantee, Beland said it's possible some Michigan lake fish, quail or venison could be on the menu for the chefs to prepare.

"There may be some of those opportunities," he said. "Things like that are not uncommon to see at the exam."

Those interested in checking out what the exam is all about can do so the week of: Beland said the windows in the foyer to the VisTaTech Center, which peer into the American Harvest restaurant, will be available to see all the happenings during the exam week.

The restaurant will be closed to the public the week of the exam.

Tipping Point Theatre to produce 'Boeing Boeing'

Tipping Point Theatre of Northville opens its 11th season with "Boeing Boeing" by Marc Camoletti and translated by Beverley Cross and Francis Evans. This Tony Award-winning comedy runs from Sept. 14 through Oct. 22, with tickets starting at only $25.

"Audiences can expect to see a fast-paced comedy with a lot of heart," director Dave Davies said. "There is plenty of opportunity with the relationships between the characters to keep it relentlessly fun and always interesting. Plus, I feel strongly that between myself and the cast, we're going to find many laughs that go beyond the script. Tipping Point audiences love comedies above all. I hope to offer them a fun experience that will keep the laughter lingering even long after the show."

Bernard, an American architect and a self-styled swinging playboy, keeps a flat in Paris that he uses as his base of operations for a ridiculous scheme: by only dating air hostesses who serve on international routes and paying careful attention to their airlines' timetables, he can juggle three different ladies whose paths never cross. But the invention of a super-high-speed Boeing jet and a huge North Atlantic storm system conspire to bring all three ladies to the apartment simultaneously, wreaking havoc on Bernard's plans.

Show times are 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, with matinees at 3 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday. Special 3 p.m. Wednesday matinee performances are set for Sept. 27 and Oct. 4.

Tipping Point Theatre is located at 361 E. Cady St. Tickets are $30 to $46 for adults, $28 to $46 for senior citizens and only $25 for either of the two preview shows Sept. 14-15, which include a talk back with producing artistic director James R. Kuhl and Davies. For tickets or more information, call the box office at 248-347-0003.

Time to stop gerrymandering

Citizens: Be aware the Supreme Court will be hearing cases about how voting districts are created by the political party which has the power at a specific time. This practice is called gerrymandering. Thus many voters lose their right to vote.

In Michigan and throughout the U.S., members of an organization called VNP (Voters Not Politicians) are circulating petitions to get on ballots in the 2018 election cycle to have a bipartisan panel draw the voting districts. Research VNP in Michigan. Sign the petition and join the this fine group if you have the time. Make a donation, too!

The November 2016 nation election was a travesty of justice. Let's exist to resist and restore what is left of our democracy.

Can't hide hate

"I wish to begin this summer well," wrote Thoreau, "to do something in it worthy of it and of me; to transcend my daily routine; to have immortality now in the quality of my daily life."

You can't hide hate. You can't put in a crate and take it out later and expect it to be something different.

You can't hide hate. You can't bury it down and hope it will grow up love.

You can't hide hate. People often wear it on their face.

You can't hide hate. The heart will tell the dark tale that within it dwells.

You can't hide hate. Make a sweet speech and sing a song of destruction.

You can't hide hate. Some wave the flag and some smile upon it.

You can't hide hate. Some weave it in a contract or write it on a wall.

You can't hide hate. It will lead to your fall.

For union, for all.

Presidential support surprises

The violent events that took place in Charlottesville should come as no surprise. President Donald Trump's political rhetoric has unleashed the dregs of society, who, until recently were content to stay in their rat holes and preach to like minded idiots.

Now, embolden by their President, they proudly march and goose-step in broad daylight, waving Nazi and Confederate flags and shouting hatred.

Sunday, Trump refuses to call out the hate groups by name. Monday he reads from a script that condemns Nazis and the KKK. Tuesday, with no script, he

If anyone who voted for Trump and is still a fan, they are one of the following: a Nazi lover, KKK fan, Racist, Gay basher, a greedy rich person or a shill for the rich, a vile corporate leader, a Pimp for Wall street or just an out and out hater.

So, to Trump and his minions, the majority of our people will not stand by and watch anyone being loaded into box cars or someone lynched while a crowd clad in hoods and white dresses cheer.

Please, Alt-right, do the country a favor and crawl back in the rat holes where you belong. And I am deeply sorry if I insulted any members of the rodent family by comparing them to these people.

Gone to the dogs

It's a rare person who can claim to be a bigger animal lover than I am, and this includes wild animals and domestic pets. Animals can cause problems though.

I don't mean to 'bark up the wrong tree' but as far as domestic pets go, cats are usually out of your sight whereas dogs can be trouble-makers. My complaint is less against the brainless brutes and more with the two-legged morons who are incompetent dog-owners.

A dog's brain is limited compared to the human variety (even those of moronic level) and they can't really be blamed for following their instincts, but their owners should be faulted in how they govern them. A big 'pet peeve' of mine is how some people will let their brutes stay outside to endlessly bark at trivial issues or nothing, creating a constant annoyance of noise. Often their innocuous targets of noise-making are the postal carriers, pedestrians, school children or other dogs.

I'm sure a barking dog is enjoying himself, and the owners may think that everything he does is cute, much the same way that new parents admire a baby's every drool, and it may come as quite a surprise, but not every human ear within listening range is thrilled by your four-legged noise-makers! Suburban cities like Livonia have really 'gone to the dogs' and deteriorated over the years with streets now filled ad nauseam with noisy junkyard dogs, cultivating a real ghetto-like vibe.

Some of these dogs are horse-size monsters, and I've even seen some homes which own two or three of them! You must wonder what people were thinking! Surely you wouldn't want babies, cats or smaller dogs around such beasts. I suppose some people use an animal for security purposes but an alarm system would be quieter.

When you let a dog stay outside to continuously bark at your neighbors or others, you are showing a real contempt and disrespect of your fellow man. A dog doesn't have a soul, but your fellow man does, and he deserves more regard than an animal. For example, when someone comes to your front-door, be it the post-man, Fuller Brush-man, 'Jesus freak' or politician, you shouldn't force that person to conduct a conversation through a noise barrage of your barking dog, nor do you let unleashed dogs chase bicycles, and you don't clog up main thorough-fare side-walks with dog-walking.

Speak out against Trump

Well now, that didn't take long did it? On about

Trump's 200th day in office, and his 60th vacation day, whilst during his 41st day of golf, we had Nazis and Klansmen terrorize a Charlottesville synagogue and murder an American citizen on our own streets with the support of the police and the blessings of the president.

The divisiveness, corruption and incompetence of this presidency is simply staggering, a true constitutional crisis and yet this newspaper stays silent. Why? I've delivered the O&E as a kid and have read it for decades and can remember when your voice was a weekly occurrence.

What's the point of this paper when you turn a blind eye to the chaos that threatens our American way of life? Just because Trump is your and Livonia's guy doesn't mean you get a free pass on this. At this point you're not much better than the free shoppers weekly and serve no real community service at all. Grow a spine, find your voice or close up shop. Your silence is deafening.

No more taxes

As a longtime resident and a condo owner, I am not in favor of the pending mileage that city council is trying to enact. Condos by law must maintain their own roads with no help from the city. We have completely rebuilt our road system without city involvement.

I thought we had already passed a mileage for roads a year or so ago. Anyway, I will not vote for the councils proposal and hopefully no other condo owner will either. A tax to maintain subdivision roads would be unfair to any condo owner.

Huron River canoe launch plans postponed amid protests

hometownlife.com

Plans to build a canoe launch at Pettibone Creek in Milford's Central Park are on hold after opponents convinced Milford Village Council to postpone a vote on the project.

The council sent the plan back to the parks and recreation commission, asking it to take another look and encouraged canoeists and kayakers to bring their ideas to the next Milford Parks and Recreation Commission meeting.

The plan as currently proposed includes the launch on the west side of the creek, extending a road that would run between the creek and the baseball field, a circular turnaround, and parking lots near the ball field and the amphitheater. The cost is estimated at $180,000.

A gate would be installed on Liberty Street to keep motorists from accessing nearby neighborhood streets.

In addition to the launch ramp at the creek, three small landing areas along the Huron River at the park would be created. Village Manager Christian Wuerth said those areas would be designed for paddlers who want to stop at the park for a picnic lunch or to walk into town, and then return to their watercraft to continue on the river.

He said the primary purpose of the launch at the creek would be to "take the boat off the car and put it in the water or take it out of the water and put it on the car."

Canoe and kayak enthusiasts disagreeing with the village's plans want to continue using the shore of the Huron River to launch and exit their watercraft at the park. They say the creek is too shallow and narrow for that purpose.

Here are a few takeaways from the discussion:

If you build it they won't come

"I have a 14-foot fishing kayak and I went up there (the creek) and couldn't turn around. I had to get out of it and pick it up and turn around," Gary Krebs said.

"The problem is Petti-bone Creek; it is not navigable by kayak," Tony Hambley said. "I don't see any way where we'd actually use this. For a single kayaker, it doesn't make a whole lot of sense."

Another resident suggested paddlers likely would use the three smaller landings along the river in lieu of the ramp at the creek.

"It's a creek, not a river. It's not going to work unless you want to dredge it and get involved with the DNR (Department of Natural Resources)," Councilman David Pehrson said.

Big, green lawn

Wuerth said the parks commission eyed Pettibone Creek for the launch so the area between the river and park entrance can remain lawn, with natural plantings along the river to help reduce erosion.

"They felt that having any structure in that front lawn area of the park was less desirable," he said.

Lori Ebaugh, a parks and recreation commissioner who kayaks, said the proposed plan maintains the park's "beautiful green space" that would be open and accessible to all park users.

"We believe this was a really good plan that would scale back on costs and would funnel the large commercial traffic out of the apron to Central Park and keep the erosion down and also the 100 and some kayaks that are stacked up on the side of the river front," she said.

Councilman Dave Thureau called the plan aesthetically pleasing, but not functional.

Possible solutions

Doug McMunn said he enjoys seeing kayakers near Main Street "coming and going."

"I'd like to see a plan with a turnaround close to Main Street," he said. "The front porch idea to our Central Park is a good idea and important one, how it looks as you approach. But I think our veterans memorial is more the show piece, the first impression of our park."

Ebaugh said the commission could look at moving the launch to the General Motors Road area, near the community garden, or building a docking area on the river, west of the two creeks that run through the park.

Canoe trip

Carol Lincoln, who lives on Moore Lake north of town, invited village council members to meet her at the river for a group kayak up the creek.

"How many of you would buy a car without driving it first? Anybody?" she asked. "Would you test drive it or would you spend $180,000 on a car without driving it? Let's get our kayaks and let's 'drive' that river."

Alan Heavner of Heavner Canoe & Kayak Rental, offered to supply the canoes and kayaks if city officials wanted to accept Lincoln's invitation. Later, he said the offer still stands.

Michigan's 'king of real estate' Calvin Chamberlain dies at age 92

Jay Grossman
hometownlife.com

Relationships trumped location in Calvin Miller Chamberlain's world.

Chamberlain, who at one time operated one of the largest real estate companies in Michigan, died Aug. 17 at the age of 92. Daughter Sally McCarthy said she'll always remember her father as an honest businessman and a great dad.

"He was the textbook example of a person living the American dream," she said. "He was an entrepreneur who came from modest means, but through hard work, determination and initiative, he built a very successful business and always found time to be with his family."

Born in 1925, Chamberlain grew up in a middle-class family in Royal Oak. After serving in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II, he returned home to Michigan with plans to become a lawyer.

"He was ready to take the bar exam when he started selling homes with his older brother Bud in 1949," McCarthy said. "That summer, he listed and sold 10 houses and decided to go into real estate rather than become a lawyer."

Chamberlain worked on his brother's staff in Royal Oak for several years, learning the ropes of real estate, before deciding to open his own branch. The two brothers looked at a map, and agreed that Calvin would sell homes in the suburbs north of 14 Mile Road. He opened his first office on Woodward Avenue in Birmingham.

"Back in those days,

Birmingham was less populated territory," McCarthy said. "Then people began moving north and my dad was in a booming location."

At the height of their success, the combined Chamberlain Real Estate Co. had 29 sales offices around southeast Michigan and a small army of Realtors.

Know the customer

At the age of 33, Chamberlain was (and still is) the youngest person ever to serve as president of the Birmingham Board of Realtors. He married his college sweetheart Janet and together the couple raised four daughters in Birmingham.

"One of the things that makes us so proud of our dad is that he always operated with the highest degree of integrity," McCarthy said. "And he always took care of his employees. He started a profit sharing trust so that people retiring from his company would be financially secure and comfortable. I know there was a secretary who worked for him for over 30 years and retired with a pretty nice nest egg."

When it came to selling, Chamberlain felt the most important part of the deal was to know his client.

"My dad said his goal was to never show a client more than three or four homes to make the sale," McCarthy said. "His belief was, if you take the time to truly understand the needs of the client and what they are looking for in a home, you should be able to save the client time by showing them just a few homes."

A modest man

Daughter Cathy Howe said her father made a point to find a balance in his life when it came to work and family time.

"His favorite saying was, 'It's all about health, love and wealth and the time to enjoy all three.' He strived to earn a good income while also having enough free time to spend with his family," Howe said.

Chamberlain loved dinner table conversations. He wanted his daughters to be well-educated, confident and independent. He encouraged them to participate in a wide variety of activities and taught them to ski at a young age.

Chamberlain was fluent in several languages and he loved to travel. He preferred to spend his earnings on family vacations rather than on a new car or some other possession. He enjoyed flying and owned several planes over his lifetime, along with vacation property in Aspen and on Walloon Lake, which is where Ernest Hemingway spent his summers growing up.

He also created a few college scholarships to provide students the opportunity to study abroad and gave generously to the Crossroads for Youth organization.

The family lived in the same house in Birmingham for 22 years and all four daughters graduated from Seaholm High School.

"He always lived below his means," Howe said. "He used to tell us, if you can't pay cash for it, then you don't deserve to have it."

Chamberlain was an incredible history buff, a voracious reader ... and a true people person. McCarthy said her dad often wore a giant cowboy hat during his travels, because he knew it was a great conversation starter.

"He didn't really care about possessions," Mc-

SALLY MCCARTHY

Calvin Chamberlain understood the importance of relationships when it came to selling property.

Carthy said. "Dad loved adventure. He loved to travel and learn about different cultures."

Chamberlain stepped away from the real estate business around 1985. His brother Bud died in 2012, also at the age of 92.

His memorial service and celebration of life will be Sept. 29 at the First United Methodist Church of Birmingham.

In lieu of flowers,

2017 M-STEP results in Michigan reveal a troubling trend in education

Lori Higgins
Detroit Free Press

Michigan's elementary and middle school students are slowly making gains in math and social studies on the state's tough standardized exam. But a troubling trend is obvious in results released Tuesday: That progress is overshadowed by declines nearly across the board in reading and writing, as well as continued struggles in science.

The declines in reading and writing couldn't come at a worse time, given the state is upping the stakes and requiring schools, with some exceptions, to hold back students whose performance indicates they're not reading at grade level. Those rules kick in during the 2019-20 school year.

The Michigan Department of Education released the results of the Michigan Student Test of Educational Progress and the Michigan Merit Exam Tuesday. Results show droves of students across all grade levels and subjects failed the important tests that were taken this spring.

The M-STEP tests students in English language arts and math in grades three through eight, in science in grades four and seven, and in social studies in grades five and eight. The MME is a high school exam that for the second year in a row includes the SAT as well as state-created tests in science and social studies. It is taken by 11th graders.

The results:

» 45.9 percent of students in grades three-eight passed the English language arts portion of the M-STEP. That's down from 47.3 percent in 2016.

» 37.89 percent of students in grades three-eight passed the math portion of the M-STEP. That's up from 37.2 percent in 2016.

» 23.5 percent of the students in grades four and seven who took the science M-STEP and in grade 11 who took the MME, passed. That's slightly down from 23.8 percent in 2016.

» 32.8 percent of the students in grades 5, 8 and 11 passed exams in social studies, up from 30.3 percent last year.

State Superintendent Brian Whiston, in a statement, said the improvements in math and social studies "is exciting news."

"The English language arts scores are disappointing, however," he said.

Whiston said schools and districts need to work with their intermediate school districts to carefully analyze the results and look for ways to improve. The MDE and the State Board of Education have been intensely working to transform Michigan into a top 10 performing state.

"I am confident that investments into early childhood education and literacy supports will bring improvement and growth," Whiston said. "We need to stay focused and diligent."

The MDE is working on a new testing vision that would see the M-STEP tweaked — but not replaced — to be shorter and better able to capture student improvement, said Martin Ackley, spokesman for the department.

The MDE is looking at mandatory state exams in the fall and spring, along with an optional exam in the winter. Shorter exams multiple times a year would allow schools to measure growth from the beginning of the school year to the end of the school year — something that's not possible with the current exam.

Like last year, there was one consistent, negative trend: With the exception of fifth-grade language arts, more than half of the students were not proficient on the exams across all grades and subjects tested.

Meanwhile, student scores on the SAT portion of the exam showed slight increases. The average score was 1007.6 out of 1600, up from 1001 last year. This is the second time around students have taken the new SAT, which was revamped to better assess readiness for college and careers.

Comparison with other states is difficult because Michigan is one of only nine states that administer the SAT to mostly all students. Among the others: Connecticut, which posted an average score of 1031 and Idaho, with an average score of 998.

The SAT also reports data showing the percentage of students that met its college readiness standard. In Michigan, 60 percent met the standard in evidence-based reading and writing, while 37 percent met it in math.

Among the top scorers on the SAT were three high schools that use the International Baccalaureate curriculum, a rigorous program that prepares students for entry into colleges worldwide. They include the International Academy in Bloomfield Township, the International Academy of Macomb County in Clinton Township and Washtenaw International High School in Ypsilanti.

Poor performance on the M-STEP and MME could come with some consequences. The state could identify schools with consistently low results for improvement, and require they enter into a partnership agreement with the Michigan Department of Education.

Those agreements — an alternative to closing failing schools — mean the districts with struggling schools will have to set goals for those schools, and if they don't meet those goals the schools could face sanctions. The sanctions would vary depending on what the districts agreed to in the pacts with the state.

There were some bright spots in the state, including in the Madison District Public Schools in Madison Heights, where the number of students proficient was up in a number of areas.

Some of the biggest gains came in fifth grade. In English language arts, for instance, 41 percent were proficient, up from 29 percent last year. And in math, the percentage of students who passed went from 8.6 percent last year to 23.4 percent.

Superintendent Randy Speck said he's pleased with the results, though he knows the district must keep improving.

"It's what we've been working for," Speck said.

The district has made sure its curriculum is aligned with the standards taught on the exams. Three years ago it began operating using a balanced calendar, meaning students start the school year early and end it later than most others, while having more frequent breaks throughout the year. The schedule means there isn't as much time during the summer for students to lose what they've learned during the year.

"We're really starting to see the retention level increase," Speck said.

Most important, Speck said, is the district has tried to cultivate a culture "of trying to balance out the importance of showing each child that we love and care for them and at the same time saying you can really achieve and we want to show you you can do it."

The Madison Heights district wasn't the only one that showed improvement. A few other examples: Bemis Junior High School in Utica Community Schools, where the percentage of students proficient in English language arts across all grades rose from 37 percent to 53 percent; Momentum Academy in Hazel Park, where the percentage proficient in language arts across all grades rose from 10 percent to 34 percent; and Garfield Elementary School in Livonia Public Schools, where the English language arts proficiency for all grades rose from 23 percent to 40 percent.

The release of test results will mark the first time in a while that the state has three years' worth of reliable data to measure how well students and schools are performing, said officials with the Education Trust-Midwest, a Royal Oak-based education policy and research organization.

"Michigan has taken the important step of setting high expectations for all of our students and using an honest tool to measure our progress. Now is the time to build on this work and move the needle forward," Brian Gutman, the organization's director of public engagement, said in a news release.

The release pointed out "stubborn achievement gaps" that remain in Michigan between white students and minority students. For instance, proficiency rates in eighth-grade math were four times greater for white students (39.2 percent) than they were for black students (10.1 percent) and double the rate for Latino students (19.5 percent), according to the organization.

And proficiency rates for low-income students continue to be, as the release notes, "devastatingly low."

There is a correlation between poverty and poor performance on standardized tests. And while the Madison Heights district, where nearly 90 percent of the students are eligible for a free or reduced-priced lunch, may be bucking the trend with its improvement, many schools with high populations of high-poverty students struggled.

That is felt most acutely in the state's largest city, where results for both the Detroit Public Schools Community District and the Education Achievement Authority were low. The EAA, a state reform district that took on some of the worst-performing schools in the Detroit district, disbanded in June and its schools are now back in DPSCD.

In DPSCD, the percentage of students who passed in language arts in grades three-eight ranged from 9.4 percent in grade 6, to 16.1 percent in grade 8; while the math results ranged from 4.1 percent in grade 5 to a high of 12.3 percent in third grade. The worst showing came in fourth-grade science, where just 1.6 percent of the students were proficient.

DPSCD Superintendent Nikolai Vitti, who is new to the job, said the results "allows the district to celebrate the improvement that several schools demonstrated while also acknowledging that there is a lot of work that needs to be done to improve proficiency rates across the district."

This will start, he said, by providing principals and teachers with comprehensive training on the standards, re-emphasizing phonics at the elementary level and using data systems that properly identify the academic gaps students face, then providing stronger interventions.

Meanwhile, the district will undergo a curriculum audit in literacy and math "to clearly identify the gaps in our curriculum that exist," he said. That analysis will aid the district in picking a new curriculum for the 2018-19 school year that is aligned to the standards that are assessed on the state exam.

"We will engage principals shortly to identify best practices from schools where performance improved to replicate while also problem solving with schools where performance declined," Vitti said in a statement issued Tuesday afternoon.

In the schools directly run by the EAA, the language arts results ranged from 3.2 percent in grade 6 to a high of 8.3 percent in eighth grade. Math ranged from fewer than 1.4 percent in grade 6 to a high of 9.5 percent in grade 3.

Worse, science results showed 0 percent of EAA's fourth-graders to be proficient in science and 0.4 percent proficient in fifth-grade social studies.

The EAA's three charter schools, which were independently operated, did far better — yet still low — with language arts results ranging from 11 percent in grade 4 to 24.7 percent in grade 8; and with math ranging from 2.5 percent in grade 5 to 14.9 percent in grade 3.

Those charters, though, struggled in seventh-grade science and fifth-grade social studies, where 0 percent of the students were proficient.

War dog saluted

Black lab Cena served three tours of duty for Marine Corps

Hasan Dudar
Detroit Free Press

A group of six German shepherds gave a final salute last month in honor of a fellow canine who served three tours of duty as a military working dog for the U.S. Marine Corps and died July 27 at age 10 after a weeks-long battle with bone cancer.

The German shepherds, which are part of the K-9 Salute Team, were trained to kneel and howl on command in honor of Cena, a black lab who was euthanized in July and whose remains were interred today at the Michigan War Dog Memorial in Lyon Township.

The memorial site, which hosted the public service and private interment, has about 10 military dogs buried beside 2,150 pets interred at the historic pet cemetery, according to memorial president and director Phil Weitlauf.

Cena, a bomb-sniffing dog, belonged to Marine Corps Lance Cpl. Jeffrey DeYoung, 27, of Muskegon, who said he adopted the black lab in June 2014 after Cena underwent a year of rehabilitation therapy. DeYoung said that he and Cena served together on a seven-month tour of duty in Afghanistan that began in October 2009.

Cena also served with Jon North, a Marine sergeant from Osage, Iowa, who was present at the ceremony, and one other soldier who was not able to be there.

DeYoung said in a eulogy at the memorial service that Cena endured various injuries on his tours of duty, and that he and Cena encountered three improvised explosive devices together. Cena was officially an IED detection dog with the Marine Corps. The dogs walk ahead of patrols and pick up the scent of the explosives in the area and sit down near the explosive before a bomb-disarming unit comes, Weitlauf said.

"In every aspect of Cena, he has shed blood, pain, sweat and tears for this country," DeYoung said.

North, 28, who served one year with Cena in Afghanistan from 2010 to 2011 didn't speak at the service, but told the Free Press that Cena was known for being "a slow, old man" and that he was "just kind of a goofy old dog."

"By the end of your time together, he's more like a brother, more like a kid. It's hard to let him go," North said.

Together, DeYoung and North carried an urn containing Cena's ashes in a funeral procession that included bagpipers and a military color guard.

Weitlauf said that three separate Jeep convoys — including one from Muskegon with DeYoung escorting Cena's remains — traversed different parts of the state to make it to the service, linking up at different locations including Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and New Hudson. He said that about 80

The convoy carrying the remains of Cena, which left from the Grand Rapids area earlier in the day, arrives at the Michigan War Dog Memorial in South Lyon.

Jeeps participated in the convoys, and that about 600 people attended the funeral service — nearly double the 350 attendees the services normally get.

DeYoung, who is a professional public speaker, said that after adopting Cena in 2014, their job wasn't yet over. They spent the next several years journeying across the country together to places such as President Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago home and the U.S. Congress, where DeYoung discussed the need to bring home all war dogs prior to retirement "so that what happened in Vietnam with the euthanasia will never happen again."

At the end of that war, troops were ordered to leave their dogs in Vietnam out of fear of a logistical nightmare and concerns of disease being brought back, Weitlauf said. They had the option to give the dogs over to the South Vietnamese army or to euthanize them, he said. Over 4,000 were left behind, and only 204 made it back home, Weitlauf said.

Tom Strempek, 69, of Bloomfield Hills was deployed to Vietnam in 1971 at the age of 23, where he served a six-month tour of duty and suffered injuries. He said the funeral gave him closure.

Strempek said that war dogs in Vietnam once saved his platoon of 30 men from an ambush. "I'm out here for every funeral because it's long overdue for everyone to recognize the importance of dogs as being part of the unit and not a piece of equipment, the way the government treated them in Vietnam," Strempek said. "And it's a glorious day, and I guess that it gives me a little more peace of mind."

For DeYoung, laying Cena to rest at what he described as the "Arlington of dogs" also provided some closure.

"Cena's journey in my life is done. Our work is not, so I will continue doing so in his honor," DeYoung said to reporters before the ceremony.

U-M's Harbaugh adds ex-fire chief to his football staff

Jay Grossman
hometownlife.com

Never in his wildest dreams did former Bloomfield Township Fire Chief Dave Piche expect to receive a job offer from University of Michigan football coach Jim Harbaugh.

"I'm still pinching myself that I'm here," said Piche, who started working at Schembechler Hall in August, reporting directly to one of America's most famous college coaches.

Retirement lasted about a month for the 32-year career firefighter, who steadily rose through the ranks to become head of one of the largest fire departments in Michigan.

In his new role, Piche said he'll serve as the "go-to guy" for the U-M football staff. One of his responsibilities is to keep an eye on the players and make sure they understand the rules and expectations.

"I was told to wear a suit and tie to work every day to maintain a presence with the players," he said.

He'll help fill credentials for visiting NFL scouts, plus he's become familiar with the layout and operations at Schembechler Hall. It's a full-time position and Piche expects to be at all the home games and some away games.

For someone who's been rooting for the maize and blue his entire life, Piche feels like a winner in the ultimate sports fan lottery. His family and friends are blown away.

"It's surreal," he said. "I'm around the players every day ... Harbaugh stops by to talk to me in the morning to see how things are going. It's all good."

Piche is certainly a good fit for the job, considering his background in management and ability to work within the structure of a large organization. He also has extensive training in how to quickly respond to the unexpected.

How he landed the job is a funny story.

Bloomfield Township Supervisor Leo Savoie, who is friends with former U-M wide receiver Paul Jokisch, arranged for Piche to meet Harbaugh at Schembechler Hall as a parting gift to the retiring fire chief.

Piche and a pair of colleagues went in June to Ann Arbor, where they spent most of the afternoon with Harbaugh, assistant coaches and members of the team. Piche said just as they were leaving, Harbaugh asked what he planned to do in retirement.

"He told me I should come work for him and I thought he was joking," Piche said. "I told him I could be the team's water boy and we both started laughing ... and I thought that was it."

A few weeks later, Piche received a call from one of Harbaugh's assistants. Now, he's getting ready to roam the sidelines in the Big House.

"I had such a great career in Bloomfield Township and now I'm here at U-M," he said. "I just feel blessed and I'm looking forward to a great season."

After daughter is killed in an ATV crash, principal works for a helmet law

JEFFREY WALKER
USA TODAY NETWORK

Each week, this series will introduce you to an exceptional American who unites, rather than divides, our communities. To read more about the American profiled here and more average Americans doing exceptional things, visit one-nation.usatoday.com.

When Kate Bruggenschmidt went to hang out with friends between softball games, her mother's primary concern was that her daughter didn't go swimming, fearing she'd wear herself out.

What Ashlee Bruggenschmidt never considered was that Kate might hop onto an ATV.

The 750-pound ATV Kate and her friend were riding rolled over, crushing Kate and killing her instantly. She was 11.

For a year, Ashlee, the principal at Sharon Elementary School in Newburgh, Ind., didn't talk about the crash. But one day a thought occurred to her. "I can't believe there's not a helmet law in Indiana."

And the Play for Kate Foundation was formed.

The foundation built a playground in Kate's memory in Boonville, Ind., but the important work was just beginning.

Ashlee Bruggenschmidt testified before the Indiana House and Senate, alongside doctors, Kate's friends and advocates from public interest groups.

"As educators, it's our jobs to keep kids safe," Ashlee told colleagues.

It wasn't easy, but on July 1, Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb signed HEA 1200 into law. It dictates that all ATV riders younger than 18 must wear a helmet, both on public and private land.

"HEA 1200 isn't going to change Kate's outcome, but it is going to change outcomes for other kids in the state of Indiana," Ashlee said about the bill.

Still, Ashlee's work continues.

Working with a company in North Carolina, Ashlee developed "Safety Sam," a robot that can travel to schools and teach kids about ATV safety. Sam rides an ATV and is operated remotely by an Indiana conservation officer who can interact with kids via headset.

The Play for Kate Foundation has secured funding for four Safety Sams, with orders for more from three states and Puerto Rico.

In August, Ashlee spoke with leaders in Washington, including Speaker of the House Paul Ryan, about a national ATV helmet law.

Ashlee's goal? "Zero preventable deaths from ATV accidents." For Kate.

Location: Boonville, Ind.

Age: 40

Profession: Principal, Sharon Elementary School, Newburgh, Ind.

Mission: Zero preventable deaths in ATV accidents

Q&A WITH ASHLEE BRUGGENSCHMIDT

What does it mean to you to be an American?

To be an American means to live your life in a way so that if today was your last day, you would feel good about the choices and decisions in life that you made. Choices that make a positive difference, leave a lasting impact for the goodness of others. As Gandhi said, "Be the change you want to see in the world." That is what being an American means to me — to be selfless, to be kind, to sacrifice, to give hope and grace to make the world a better place.

What moment touched and motivated you to launch this effort?

About a year after (Kate's) accident, I was sitting with a friend and I looked at her and said, "I can't believe there's not a helmet law in Indiana." As educators, it's our jobs to keep kids safe.

What gives you hope?

The goodness of our community and giving or helping others gives us hope. Giving is a way to channel our grief. It helps us focus on someone else's needs rather than our own sadness. We try to focus on the positives. In Kate's tragedy, we were confronted with an outpouring of good, hope, caring and compassion from our community. The community helped us to move forward and do something meaningful with the time we have left here on Earth in Kate's honor/memory.

What concerns you?

What concerns me is all the hate, anger, belittling and resentment in the world today. You see it on television, on social media, in our leadership and in every walk of life. Our kids and society in general need more love, compassion, empathy, grace and hope. It is all of our jobs as citizens to make that culture change ... into a culture of hope, humility and prosperity.

What do you hope to accomplish through your efforts?

Zero preventable deaths from ATV accidents.

Former Radio City Rockette runs dance studio in Birmingham

Jay Grossman
hometownlife.com

Amy Emmett went from dancing at her mother's studio in Arkansas to joining the Radio City Rockettes in New York City without missing a beat.

Emmett owns and operates the Next Step Broadway studio in Birmingham that offers students voice, dancing and acting lessons. The studio, which opened in April, is located in the Adams Square shopping center.

This is Emmett's second dance studio — the first one she opened nine years ago in New Jersey is still going strong. As everyone knows, they say the neon lights are bright on Broadway:

Q: Growing up in Arkansas, did you ever dream you'd join the Radio City Rockettes?

Emmett: I grew up dancing at my mother's dance studio in Arkansas. She instilled a love for dance in me. When I was 12 years old, my grandmother took my mom and I to New York City, where we saw the Radio City Rockettes. I was mesmerized! I must have been a pretty bold kid, because I remember thinking, "I can do that. I'm going to be a Rockette someday."

I went home and wrote the Rockettes a letter asking how to become part of the troupe. They wrote back a very sweet note stating all of the requirements and thanking me for my interest in wanting to be a Rockette. I still have that letter today.

I went to Oklahoma City University to polish my dancing, signing, acting and auditioning skills. Graduated summa cum laude and started on my journey to become a professional dancer.

Soon after, I was standing in line at Radio City with 1,000 other wide-eyed dancers with the same dream. Fortunately, it was my time and I danced with the Rockettes for 11 years. My best friends still today are girls that I danced with on that great stage.

Q: What was the best part of being a Rockette?

Emmett: I have two: The best part of being a Rockette is the camaraderie with my fellow Rockettes. It's a grueling, but very gratifying experience. I have lifelong relationships with these girls. They are the only ones who truly know the fascinating experience of being a Rockette.

The other best part is seeing the faces of the little kids who are smiling from ear to ear the entire show.

Q: What was the hardest part?

Emmett: The hardest part about being a Rockette was our "marathon" weekends where we would do five shows on Friday, six on Saturday and five on Sunday. Submerging in complete ice baths between shows to reduce swelling of our overused muscles, then heat packs and lots of warming up to get back on the stage.

I remember waking up Saturday and Sunday mornings with not enough sleep, barely being able to walk to the subway. But I was kicking and smiling at 9 a.m. for the first group of eager youngsters in the audience.

Q: How did you end up in Michigan?

Emmett: I met my husband in New York on a blind date set up by a mutual friend. They came to the final show of the season and he ended up going with me to the after-parties. I'm sure he wasn't too upset being surrounded by 80 beautiful women. We married, started a family and decided we'd like our kids to have a similar childhood to what we had growing up in a nice small town. He's from Michigan, so this is where we landed.

Q: Tell us about your dance studio and what inspired you to open it?

Emmett: Like I said

earlier, my mom owned a dance studio and that is what I knew and loved. The reason I opened up a studio specifically called Next Step Broadway is because I wanted to have a place where kids could learn everything they needed to be able to make it on Broadway.

I wanted them to learn how to act, sing, dance, audition and to learn the ropes of living in a city like New York. But most of all, I wanted to instill a love for performing in anyone who would listen to me.

Q: Are you still trying to form the Next Step Triple Threats team of students who can dance, act and sing?

Emmett: We have a Next Step Triple Threats team in my New Jersey location and in Michigan. They are allowed to take unlimited classes, which include many styles of dance, voice, acting and musical theater.

Q: Tell us about your hip hop program? Is there a Justin Timberlake waiting in the wings?

Emmett: The classes are taught by our award-winning teachers and will feature break-dancing, poppin', lockin', tumbling, current dance trends and more! Our teachers are relevant to the current styles and hip hop dance scene. We have many hip hop levels, as well as all-boys classes. Dancers will not only learn cool dance moves, they will learn about hip hop culture and history.

JUNIOR HOCKEY

Leaving home: Mack can't pass up OHL

South Lyon resident heading to play for Erie

Brad Emons
hometownlife.com

Joseph Mack decided the time was sooner rather than later to get a jump-start on his hockey career.

Instead of staying locally and finishing his senior year of high school at South Lyon East, the New Hudson resident will find himself in Erie, Pa., the next three years trying to showcase his skills to National Hockey League scouts.

The 6-foot-3, 190-pound center, who helped Compuware to a USA Hockey Tier-I 16U national championship last April, signed a three-year contract with the Erie Otters, the defending Robertson Cup champions of the Ontario Hockey League.

Mack, who was an eighth-round pick by the Otters in the 2016 OHL Priority Draft, will be living with a billet family in Erie and finishing his high school requirements through online courses with some of his teammates.

"I felt like this was the best junior option," Mack said. "A lot of guys go from the OHL to the NHL out of this league. The OHL pretty much guarantees you pretty much the college scholarship. If you go the other route, you're not guaranteed to get a full ride because you might get hurt and they might cancel it."

Mom Jen Mack has mixed emotions about the move.

"I will say that I'm extremely proud and excited for him but, at the same time, I'm heartbroken to say good-bye to my son a year or two earlier," she said.

The Otters, who produced

Edmonton Oilers star Connor McDavid, the NHL's Hart Trophy MVP winner, will be in a rebuilding mode under new coach Chris Hartsburg.

Mack is described as having excellent size, long and rangy, with the ability to work best below the dots while controlling the puck. He also can dominate the physical battles.

Mack's favorite NHL player is Chicago's Jonathan Toews, while his favorite teams growing up were the Blackhawks and hometown Red Wings.

Canton powers past Plymouth in first meeting of campus rivals

Tim Smith

There are three new varsity volleyball coaches at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park this year and two of them went head-to-head Aug. 31.

Canton's Cricket Hughley got the last word against Plymouth's Sheila Weber, as the Chiefs earned a 25-21, 25-13, 25-10 victory over the host Wildcats.

Although wins and losses are nice, both coaches talked about the importance of team chemistry and work ethic in just how successful their programs can be.

Hughley (nee Colby), who graduated from Garden City in 2006 and played volleyball there for longtime coach John Pace, smiled when asked what she learned in those years.

"A lot of sportsmanship, obviously," she said. "Just being a good teammate ... and definitely working hard."

After high school, Hughley played at Concordia University and got her feet wet in the coaching arena at Willow Run Middle School and at Canton last year, coaching the freshman team.

Stevenson stays undefeated with big victory over Novi

Marty Budner
hometownlife.com

Home or away, it doesn't seem to matter so far for the Livonia Stevenson football team.

The Spartans squeaked out a season-opening 14-13 win over district rival Franklin. In what turned into a high-scoring affair Aug. 31, Stevenson took to the road and toppled Novi, 44-21.

While Stevenson kept its record perfect at 2-0, Novi fell for the second straight week and is 0-2. The Wildcats opened with a 42-21 Week 1 loss at Birmingham Groves.

Here are a half-dozen takeaways from the game:

THROUGH THE AIR

Senior quarterback Parker Graham had another big game for the Spartans. After throwing for a pair of touchdowns in the opener, Graham threw for two more against the Wildcats. He also ran for three touchdowns: 5 yards at the end of the first half, 57 yards in the wild third quarter and 40 yards in the fourth. His stats for the night were impressive: 9-of-17 passing for 221 yards and 14 rushes for 125 yards. In addition, senior George Ferguson caught a touchdown pass and Joe Kubeshesky caught another touchdown pass. Stevenson's other three points came on a 30-yard field goal by Griffin Matick.

BEND, NOT BREAK

Stevenson allowed 21 points, but it did have a few standout defensive players and finished with four turnovers—all interceptions. Ferguson had two and Roman Klenk and Nate Garcia had the others. Devin Dunn paced the Spartans with 6.5 tackles, including 3 yards in losses. He also was credited with three pass breakups.

NOVI HIGHLIGHTS

Novi actually had more first downs than Stevenson, 17-15. Wildcats touchdowns were scored by senior tailback Kyle Klosterman, on runs of 23 and 31 yards, and Traveon Maddox, on a 14-yard pass from senior southpaw Sean Giliham. Klosterman led Novi with 14 carries for 96 total yards.

NEW YEAR, NEW DIVISION

Novi and Livonia Stevenson are members of the newly realigned Kensington Lakes Activities

Association and they put on quite a show for the fans in their inaugural Black Division battle. The teams combined for 27 first-half points and kept the offense going in the second half with 38 more points. If anything, it kept the fans warmly entertained on what turned into a chilly late August night. The teams previously played in the KLAAs Central Division.

COLORS GALORE

It was certainly a colorful setting at Wildcat Stadium. Stevenson was decked out in its visiting pale blue and white uniforms. The Wildcats sported their customary green and white uniforms. And the refs chipped in yellow. The teams combined for 22 penalties—14 to Stevenson for 120 yards and eight to Novi for 71 yards.

NO ADVANTAGE

It's safe to say these two teams have an even history against one another.

The series was deadlocked at 5-5 heading into the game, so it was visiting Stevenson that took the lead with its sixth victory. Novi won last year's match-up, 38-17, but Stevenson had taken the two previous games, both by three points (28-25 in 2015 and 31-28 in 2014). Stevenson has now won three of the last four meetings against Novi.

morial, when Cummins was hurt.

"They're cut from the same cloth," said Churchill coach Bill DeFillippo, who watched Alsbrooks expertly run the read option, scoring on TD runs of 2, 49 and 8 yards. "He's probably a little more energetic. Brian was a little more cerebral at this point, I think. But I think when you're the younger brother, that comes out sometimes. He is used to playing with the older kids, competing and doing that. So he's great to have around."

Here are five other takeaways from the game:

BIG BROTHER, LITTLE BROTHER

Brian Alsbrooks started his college football career at Eastern Michigan, but transferred this year to NCAA Division II power California (Pa.) University to concentrate on being a QB as opposed to being a kicker.

"Brian was a really great player," Drew said. "He works with me all the time. All winter, all off-season he was on me. He watches my games every week, fixes me and tells me what I did wrong. He's a great brother."

IMPRESSIVE METRICS

Churchill finished with 420 yards total offense, 240 on the ground, as senior Tyrese Williams added 57 yards 11 carries. The Chargers showed balance by adding 180 in the air.

"(Alsbrooks) always has trust in his receivers to catch it," said Churchill running back Michael Parrish, who finished with 45 yards on eight carries.

TIGHT DEFENSE

Parrish, a 5-10, 196-pound middle linebacker, also starred on the defensive side with a fumble recovery after a sack by teammate Alregio Sanders in the second quarter. Joel Forgacs also had a fumble recovery to set up Churchill's final TD.

"I have to give a shout-out to the defensive ends because, without them, we couldn't get those tackles," the senior said. "They closed, let the quarterback and receiver come to us. They did their job and we count on them."

FAST START

Churchill, which bolted out to a 28-0 halftime lead, also got 1-yard TD run from Parrish and a 6-yard TD run from Avery Grenier.

The Churchill defense also did its part in the first half by blanking the Mustangs.

"We made a lot of good stops and we played disciplined," Churchill senior strong safety Jaren Carble said. "That's what we try to do every day in practice. We're a hard-working group and we're going to try our best to get our 'W.'" DeFillippo's halftime speech was direct and to the point.

"He just said stay disciplined, but our main key was to come out the second half with it being 0-0 and having no mind-set what the score is," Carble said.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE

Northville (1-1, 0-1) was unable to recover from a 28-0 halftime deficit.

"We were not good at all," Northville coach Matt Ladach said. "We did not compete. We came out flat and credit to Churchill, to their staff and to their players. They were fired up and they punched us right in the mouth."

After going down 28-0 at the half, Northville got a 10-yard TD run from Abe Khoury and a 34-yard scoring pass from Jon Michalak to Ben Schmidt in the final quarter.

The Mustangs finished with 240 yards total offense.

"Our energy was better," Ladach said. "Our effort was better and our execution was better. Churchill did some good things defensively in the first half, taking away our option. With what they were running, that outside backer out wide, and we started running our counter play and had some good success on that drive in the second half."

But the Mustangs were unable to contain Alsbrooks, especially in the first half.

"We watched him on film last week against Monroe and he runs their offense really well," Ladach said. "He had a great night tonight."

PREP FOOTBALL

Franklin mantra: Be toughest team on the field

Tim Smith
hometownlife.com

Full-throttle football is Livonia Franklin's calling card, especially in recent playoff seasons.

And veteran Patriots head coach Chris Kelbert expects nothing to change this time around.

"We always want to be prepared for every game we play in," Kelbert said prior to that game. "And we're always going to try to be the most physical team on the field."

"That's something we've been preaching all summer long. We're tough, we're physical. That's who we are and that's what we want to be."

The Patriots won't change their approach, even with a new division to call home. With the downsizing of the Kensington Lakes Activities Association from 24 to 14 teams, Franklin is moving from the KLAA South Division to the Gold Division.

"Football is football and we're still playing the same teams we've always played," Kelbert said. "We don't have Canton this year and that's a game that we always look forward to. They're one of best programs in the state and we like playing them. We're going to miss that rivalry with those guys.

"But for the most, part it's still the same. We played Northville back when it was the Western Lakes; they used to be in our division, so very familiar with those guys. Grand Blanc's the only one that we don't know much about. The South is pretty much intact."

After a tough 14-13 loss to Livonia Stevenson in the opener, the Patriots bounced back on Aug. 31 with a 35-6 rout of Wayne Memorial.

Back to battle

Here's how tough the Patriots are: Brad Gibson, a defensive back and slot receiver who missed the entire 2016 regular season due to a torn ACL, rehabbed tirelessly to get back at full strength for his senior season.

"He's a great football player," Kelbert said. "He started as a sophomore in our semi-final run, played the whole 13 games at corner. And we missed him last year, for sure."

After the postseason run in 2015, the Patriots went 6-3 during the regular season last year to qualify for a playoff spot. They then went 1-1 in the postseason, with Gibson able to get back on the field for those contests.

There are other stellar, versatile seniors who are determined to not only lead

Franklin back to the playoffs, but to some victories once they get there. Two of the key catalysts figure to be a pair of seniors who already are getting looks from colleges — senior line-backer/tight end Jacob Mass and senior defensive back Keion Harris.

"Jacob Mass has been a three-year starter for us and, ever since he was a sophomore, he's always been one of our emotional leaders," Kelbert said. "A hard-working kid and a kid that people just follow based on his hard work."

"And same with Keion. Keion's a real quiet, kind of laid-back guy, but he's been in a real key contributor to our program. Both are really good football players for us and they're going to be important parts to our success on both sides of the ball."

Whomever the coach opts to play quarterback (he plans to start the year giving playing time both to senior Keegan Flaherty and sophomore Jacob Kelbert), he knows he'll have a physical force in the backfield. Senior running back Isaac

Moore (6-0, 210) will keep defenses honest.

"We also have, Isaac Moore, who's our running back," Kelbert said. "And he's a bull. He's slimmed down, gotten faster and is still very, very physical."

Time to rock

That hard-hitting approach is shared by many others throughout the roster, particularly Mass and Harris.

"It feels great, we're looking (to) another playoff season," Mass said. "We're really close-knit, the class of 2018 has been really close-knit all coming up through high school and now we have the class of 2019 with us now. We're just one big family."

Concurring was Harris, noting that the Patriots have a simple but successful recipe that will lead to plenty of victories.

"We just need to be physically tough and mentally tough," Harris said. "That's the biggest thing I think to overcome your opponents."

PREP ATHLETICS

Northville ace kicker Moody Athlete of the Week

Brad Emons
hometownlife.com

The votes have been tabulated for the first Athlete of the Week.

And it's Northville kicker-punter Jake Moody, who put on a show to remember Aug. 24 during a 44-14 season-opening football win over Dearborn.

The 6-foot, 177-pound senior, considered one nation's top kickers, started the game with a school-record 57-yard field goal, tied for third longest in MHSAA history while breaking his own mark of 52 set during his junior year.

Moody

"There was a little bit of breeze," said Moody, who cleared the crossbar with plenty of room to spare. "I didn't have enough time to actually understand what situation I was put in, so I just went in there and kicked the ball before I actually knew how far it was."

Moody also went 5-for-5 on extra points and all eight of his kickoffs went for touchdowns.

He is now taking aim at Warren Woods Tower's Doug Kochanski, who booted a state record 59-yarder in 1994. Former Michigan State kicker John Langeloh (Utica) is second with a 58-yarder in 1985.

Moody believes he's within range of Kochanski's mark. His best in practice is a 67-yarder.

"Maybe with a little bit of a breeze behind me and giving me a little more confidence, I feel like I can break the state record," he said.

Moody, however, proved he was human by missing wide left on a 47-yarder late in the game.

"I had a lot more time to think and I was still thinking about the 57, probably," he said.

But Moody made up for that missed field goal try when he knocked a beautiful, 44-yard NFL hang-time punt that looked like a Phil Mickelson lob wedge.

"That's the first time I've ever had a punt like that get downed at the 1, so that was pretty cool having my first punt of the year," he said.

Moody's opening night performance certainly should turn some heads at the next level. He's had a couple of preliminary college offers so far.

"I've had a few of the same schools that have contacted me saying nice job," he said. "And I've had a few other coaches follow me. They haven't said anything yet, but hopefully they will."

Northville Swim Club sets seven records during league five-peat

hometownlife.com

What a way to celebrate our 50th anniversary. The Northville Swim Club scored a record 444.5 points en route to its fifth consecutive Summer Independent Swim Club championship last month at Livonia's Burton Hollow Swim Club.

The Penguins, who earned their 13th overall title since 1973, took home 26 first-place finishes while setting seven league records in the process.

Colony Swim Club was a distant second in the team standings with 238.5, followed by Fairway Farms (236), Newburgh Swim Club (207) and Burton Hollow (193).

Northville has more than 200 swimmers ages 7-18. New swimmers and competitive high school swimmers participate in meets from the end of June through the end of July.

During the past five years, the Penguins have won 32 straight dual meets.

"It is exciting to see us build a long-standing tradition of winning as a club," Northville coach David Rembiesa said. "We are trying to shoot for longevity and highlight all the talented swimmers in the Northville and Novi area.

Many of our swimmers swim year-round for area USS club teams or their middle school and high school teams. But they all got their start at Northville Swim Club and they love coming back every summer to defend their title."

build their legacy as evidenced by setting five individual and two SISL relay records.

Among individual girls record-setters were Laura Westphal, open, 100-meter individual medley (1:09.18); Lauren Heaven, 13-15, 50 butterfly (30.68); Emma Phillips, 13-15, 50 breaststroke (36.54); Emily Roden, 11-12, 50 backstroke (33.57); and Maggie Patterson, 11-12, 50 freestyle (29.53).

The Penguins' open mixed 200 medley relay team of Arthur Greenlee, Travis Nitkiewicz, Jason Nitkiewicz and Westphal also set a league record in 1:55.71.

Another league record fell in the 11-12 mixed 200 medley relay as Emily Roden, Layney Barritt, Maggie Patterson and Nolan Ebel were clocked in 2:17.96.

"I am so proud of our older kids," Rembiesa said. "I remember back in 2011, we didn't even have a 16- to 18-year-old on the team. But that's what I mean about staying with the program. Some of these families have stayed 10-plus years and that is how you can win so many championships."

The Penguins currently list 30 swimmers on their roster that either swim for Northville or Novi Detroit Catholic Central high schools.

Every summer, each of the clubs compete in eight head-to-head dual meets, both home and away. The season ends with an all-day league championship the last Saturday of July.

With a rich swimming tradition, several noted world-class athletes got their start at a young age while competing for an SISL club, including Olympic gold medalists Allison Schmitt (Colony) and Sheila Taormina (Burton Hollow).

likes to score goals," Mack said. "I've played right wing, left wing and center, but mostly center."

The Otters' official training camp began Aug. 29 with fitness testing. Mack attended three mini-camps in Erie before signing.

"It's my fourth time here," Mack said. "It should be an easy adjustment, but the game should be a little harder, a little faster than normal." The 17-year-old Mack, who likes to hang out with friends and family when he's away from hockey, also has a younger brother Jake, 15, who played for the rival Oakland Junior Grizzlies in the same High Performance Hockey League.

Meanwhile, his biggest advocate and supporter is his father Michael, a tool and die maker who is a Canadian citizen.

"His dad is the one who is behind his determination and motivation to where he's gotten himself today as a hockey player," Jen Mack said. "My husband devoted so much of his time. He hasn't been able to go to a lot of the hockey tournaments out of town due to his hard work and trying to get them where they're at. I really believe he's the main guy behind all the determination and motivation that has gotten my sons to where they're at right now."

Mack is looking forward to the challenge of taking the next step in his hockey career without any hesitation.

"I've always played hockey, nothing else, since I was 4," he said. "I'm going to miss my friends, but this is a good opportunity for me."

"I have eight seniors, which is awesome," Hughley said. "And I have a good class coming up for next year. They're all just great athletes, honestly. They work really hard for me and they're passionate about the sport, which I am also. That's what I'm excited about being at Canton — having good athletes that are passionate like I am about volleyball."

Canton's strong nucleus is spearheaded by seniors Emily Meredith, Abby Zelenak, Kassie Tanana, Tia Cucuz, Sammy Pashigian, Olivia Smith, Hailey Domzalski and Morgan Holmlund.

Weber was Plymouth's junior varsity coach last year and she was moved up a notch after Dave Nichols left.

"This, for me, was kind of in my five-year plan, then I got moved up a bit because Dave Nichols left the program last year," Weber said. "So it became my three-year plan and I'm excited to be coaching this year at Plymouth as the varsity coach."

The lone senior for the Wildcats is setter Lauren Wheeler; juniors Kenna White, Kayla Courtney and Grace Balch will be called upon to play key roles.

"Our team is very young and I expect that most teams are going to overlook us," Weber said. "And we got a lot of kids that are going to really get a chance to shine this year."

UNFORCED

Plymouth came unglued a bit in the final two games, with a lot of the team's woes due to unforced errors (52 for the evening).

DIG IT

Both Kenna White and Gabby Diamante had seven digs for Plymouth, with Gabi Kuchka chipping in six.

BOYS TENNIS

Novi's top two singles duo packs a real punch

Brad Emons
hometownlife.com

Alex Wen and Sid Amarnath, Novi's top two singles players, can come at you from different angles.

Wen, a senior, uncoils himself with what appears to be a violent and unorthodox top-spin forehand, while Amarnath, a junior, can dissect opponents with his precision-like and well-placed left-handed ground strokes.

The two veterans, who were instrumental in Novi's back-to-back MHSAA Division 1 state titles in 2014 and 2015 before placing fourth in 2016, are off to another strong start as Novi has captured three tournaments to go along with a 9-0 dual match win over Saline.

Wen was the No. 3 singles champ as a freshman (going 36-0) and the No. 2 singles champ as a sophomore (going 26-4) before reaching the state semifinals at No. 1 a year ago with a 26-4 record.

Wen, who suffered his first loss Aug. 31 to Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook's Benji Jacobson in a three-set super-breaker, is 9-1 so far in 2017 at the No. 1 flight using what can termed "an extreme Western grip" on his forehand.

"Not many people use it," Wen said. "My brother (Raymond) taught me it when I was around, like, 8 and he didn't really know tennis that well. Somehow, I caught onto it and no coach corrected me. It was kind of a joke and I guess it just stuck with me."

Amarnath's game is no joke, either, as he returns at No. 2 singles for the five-time defending KLAA and regional champions. He has posted back-to-back 22-4 seasons, reaching the 2015 state finals at No. 3 as a freshman and the second round at No. 2 as a sophomore.

"My cross court ball, I can get them off the court, especially to their backhand, which is usually their weaker side," said Amarnath, who is undefeated so far this season. "I feel like I have an advantage from the start."

Longtime assistant Dan Lowes, who took over this fall for longtime Novi coach Jim Hanson, is happy to return his top two singles players.

"Alex is a competitor, he battles, he never gives up," Lowes said. "He's going to fight to the very end. Sid's game has improved from where he was last year. He's hitting the ball a lot better. He's becoming a battler, too. I like what I've seen out of Sid this year."

Senior Tim Tanaka, who played doubles last year, moves into the No. 3 singles spot, while Florida transfer Mateo Ponton, a junior, takes over at No. 4.

Seniors Aditya Chitta and Robert Chen, the Wildcats' No. 1 doubles team, reached the quarters in 2016 at No. 1 and the semifinals at No. 2 (2015) and No. 4 (2014) at the state finals.

"Chitta and Chen have played together for four years," Lowes said. "They know one another really well. I love their consistency. I'm looking for them to become a little more aggressive."

The rest of Novi's strong doubles lineup includes seniors Chris Kwederis and Venkatesh Nagalla at No. 2; senior Ryan Krawec and junior newcomer Dilan Patel at No. 3; seniors Robert Xu and Andrew Lu at No. 4; and seniors Nikhil Yadati and Sanjit Johri at No. 5.

"This year, I mean, the the goal is always to go for big trophy," Wen said. "As long as we work hard, I see us doing that."

Wen, who carries a 3.92 grade-point average, is undecided where he'll go to college.

This summer, he spent time as part of youth research team at the University of Michigan investigating topics such as internal bowel disease.

"Mostly, like, go into the medical field," he said. "Probably go pre-med."

Amarnath, who carries a 3.8 GPA, also prefers the sciences. His favorite subject last year was biology.

"Even though I wasn't too great at it, I'm still interested it," Amarnath said.

Off the court, the junior stays active doing volunteer work in the community.

"Last year, I did the Relay for Life where we raised money for cancer (research)," he said. "This year, I'm going to start tutoring kids in Detroit, so I think that will be a great experience."

Wen and Amarnath will try to motivate each other throughout the season as Novi guns for its third Division 1 stae title in four years.

"When one gets down, the other gets back up," Amarnath said. "It's not just me. It's the whole team who is pushing each other."

"We have a lot of talented players with a lot of potential and I see ourselves doing well this year."

GIRLS GOLF

South Lyon senior Harding off to strong start

Brad Emons
hometownlife.com

For senior season, South Lyon's Elizabeth Harding wants to take her golf game to the next level.

And even before she heads out to the links, Harding can be usually found at Cattails Golf Course on either the practice green or the driving range an hour before practice starts, working on her game.

"I've been trying really hard to shoot under par," she said. "And I haven't accomplished that yet this year, so hopefully I'll be able to do that. Mostly it is putting and short game."

Harding is already off to a fast start for the Lions, who return four of their top five players from last year's third-place MHSAA Division 2 state finals squad, including Sophie Yergin, Kendall Skore and Julia Vess.

She captured the inaugural Lakes Valley Conference pre-tourney Aug. 24 at Hartland Glen with 73, while also adding a runner-up finish Aug. 16 with even-par 72 at the Orange Theory Fitness tourney at Hudson Mills Metropark.

Harding also tied for fifth Aug. 18 at the Lapeer Lightning Summer Tune-up at Lapeer Country Club with 5-over 79, while also taking medalist honors with 36 for the Lions (2-0) in an LVC dual match against Lakeland.

Standing 5 feet, 10 inches, Harding drives the ball 240 yards on average off the tee, but her game is well-rounded.

"She's long, obviously, but I'm super impressed with her short game," first-year South Lyon assistant coach Christina Cibrario said. "That's what a lot of the kids struggle with the most and she's up-and-down 90 percent of the time."

Cibrario, who teaches math at South Lyon's Centennial

South Lyon senior golfer Elizabeth Harding is already off to a strong start this season. BRAD EMONS

Middle School, played golf at Oakland University and has competed in Golf Association of Michigan events with all three Harding sisters, including Caroline, a red-shirt sophomore on Michigan State's women's team, and Priscilla, a true sophomore on the MSU roster.

"She's a stud, she's a rock star," Cibrario said of Elizabeth. "She's very talented, can really play the game of golf. She's quiet and humble and she's fun to watch. Doesn't get too upset, stays maintained, good composure."

Both of Harding's parents have extensive golf experience at a high level.

Her father Tom, who played at MSU from 1985-87, qualified for the U.S. Senior Open in June (where Priscilla carried his bag for the first round). The teaching pro is a two-time Michigan PGA Player of the Year (1997 and 2001).

Mother Joal was a two-time All-American at Auburn University and played on the LPGA Tour (1992-94).

"Because both of our parents know a lot about golf, then we got most of our instruction from them, of course," Harding said. "We help each other out a lot. I'll try and help my sisters out and they'll try to help me out just with swing tips and stuff like that."

Harding, who carries a 3.6 grade-point average, is more than likely bound for MSU, where she plans to study business and study Spanish.

In June, she went on a 10-day class-sponsored trip to Peru, where she visited five different cities, including Cusco and Lima.

"It was really fun to see all the culture and to see the Peruvian people," Harding said. "We stayed with host families and our host mom was really nice to us. We tried speaking Spanish to her, which was a struggle, but we tried our best and we also got to see Machu Picchu and that was really fun. We also climbed a few mountains. We went to Lake Titicaca, which is really blue, then the Floating Islands."

During the winter, Harding will continue to play basketball. She began playing hoops in sixth grade on a club team and has progressed through middle school and high school.

"It keeps me in shape, for sure, because of course we do a lot of running and conditioning, which is really helpful for golf and endurance," she said.

Harding, who was regional runner-up last year, has helped the Lions to a back-to-back third-place finishes at the D2 state finals. As a freshman, along with her two older sisters, South Lyon finished runner-up.

This summer, she stayed sharp competing in American Junior Golf Association events while also playing in the Michigan Women's Amateur.

This year's Division 2 finals will be held Oct. 20-21 at Bedford Valley Golf Club in Battle Creek.

"One of my expectations is to probably place top five at states, but first get to states and win regionals ... that would be a lot of fun," said Harding, who was 11th at last year's D2 finals and 10th in 2015. "And, obviously, I'd like to get my scoring average down, which would be great."

Avoid the overspending tradition

Don't want to run short of cash in January? Start your holiday saving now

PETER DUNN
SPECIAL FOR USA TODAY

This month is the month you can use to make January 2018 much easier.

Americans aren't too kind to their Januaries these days. Starting the night of Thanksgiving, we spend, spend and spend through the end of year, sometimes blowing past the natural constraints of our finite amounts of money. December holidays have become famous for ruining January finances. From food to travel to gifts, the end of the calendar year has a way of separating people from their money under the guise of tradition and familial love. The result is starting the next calendar year in the red.

The holiday spending mistake people generally make is that they try to jam their increased spending into their cash flow during the last six weeks of the year. Inevitably, this results in overspending, which then leads to mistimed bills in January. If you've ever experienced running low on money just as your bills come due, it's because you tried to cram unusual expenses into your normal cash flow.

What is Thanksgiving through the end of December? It's non-stop cramming of unusual expenses into your normal cash flow. Now you see the problem. Don't forget that you'll likely spend more money on food and travel during the final month of the year, as well.

About a decade ago, my wife and I decided to stop letting December happen to us. We instead decided to divide the financial responsibilities of December holidays over a four-month period.

We called it the Holiday Savings League. You should join. There's no sign-up, no fees and no prizes. It's not so much a league as it is a great way to experience the holidays in a relaxing and responsible way.

If you're upset I'm talking about the holidays prior to Labor Day, I understand your consternation. I saw Halloween decorations at my local big box store in August, and I wanted to scream "stop rushing me!" But I'm not asking you to decorate for the holidays, I'm simply asking you to budget for the holidays.

THINKSTOCK

If you're struggling to keep holiday spending under control, many financial experts suggest sticking with good ol' cash.

Want to join the league? Here's what you do. Make a list of all the people you plan on buying holiday gifts for in December. Then, in what will be the most cathartic exercise of the year, write down a dollar amount next to their name representing how much money you'd like to spend on each person. There's nothing quite like seeing the different amounts you plan on spending on different family members and friends to reinforce your emotions.

Add 'em all up and note your total. Maybe it's a big number, or maybe it's a small number. Either way, it will be easier to deal with when you divide it by four.

Over the next four months, you will need to make four cash withdrawals. Every month, put the cash in an envelope with the list of who you're buying for and what you're spending on them. For instance, if you add up your "buy for" list and it totals $480, then you'll withdraw $120 in cash in September, October, November and December.

Now, instead of trying to fit $480 into your December cash flow, you'll spread the damage over a four-month period.

Having a finite amount of money to spend forces you to stay within your budget. If you spend too much on Uncle Owen, then you are taking money away from your gift for Aunt Beru. Because you don't want to do that, you will under-spend on most of your family members.

At the end of the buying season, you can either redeposit the money into your account or donate it to your favorite local charity.

If you happen to not have your envelope with you or you're making a purchase online, just deposit the appropriate amount of cash back into your checking account after you've made the non-cash purchase. Sure you can cheat and just keep the cash and break the seemingly unimportant and arbitrary rules, but if you do, you'll know you're compromising your January, and I'll kick you out of the league. And, it should go without saying, but it won't: Keep your cash envelope in a safe place.

Enjoy January.

Eisele

Joanne Louise Long-time Northville resident Joanne Louise Eisele (nee Kissane) passed away peacefully August 29, 2017 at the age of 84. She was born on September 16, 1932 in Highland Park, Michigan to Thomas and Wilhelmina (Hoffmeyer) Kissane. Joanne is survived by her children, Sally Eisele, Susan Drewke, Janet (Carlos) Junca, Laura Eisele and Dan (Laura) Eisele, her grandchildren Jonathan Junca, Camille (Jordan) Lewis, Noah Drewke, Eric Eisele, Justin Dhanjal, Ben Eisele, Joey Eisele and Harry Herrmann and one great-grandchild, Theodore Lewis; her sister, Sharon Malone (nee Kissane), many nieces and nephews and countless people who loved her. She was preceded in death by her husband, Edward (Pete) Eisele and her parents, Thomas and Wilhelmina. Joanne grew up in historic Highland Park, Michigan. She lived through both the Great Depression and Detroit's heyday as an automotive giant. She graduated from Highland Park High School in 1950. Joanne met Pete when she worked for Michigan Bell Telephone Company and they were married in 1957. Joanne loved Northville. She and Pete moved to the "Village Green" subdivision with their young family in 1961, when the town was still so small they were featured as newcomers in the Northville Record. The streets in their neighborhood were just being paved, the homes were new and the trees that now shade them were tiny saplings. They joined in with the other new homeowners, enthusiastically helping one another finish basements and landscape, creating the foundation for the graceful neighborhood that exists today. Joanne was a fabulous homemaker, caring for her five children and cooking great meals they are still trying to replicate. Her homemade pizza was legendary, as were her cinnamon rolls and pies. When her children got older, she became an entrepreneur, opening a clothing boutique called Victoria's Place in downtown Northville in the 1980's. In addition, Joanne was skilled at sewing. Eventually she and her friend, Josie Watson, built a small business, JoJo Designs, where they created and sold decorative pillows, custom handbags, totes and other accessories for the home. She excelled at creative and artistic endeavors, was an accomplished pianist in her younger days, painted watercolors, and created clothing for her family for many years. She also loved a good sale and was a shrewd bargain hunter at garage sales and grocery stores. Joanne was passionate about her family. Nothing made her happier than getting together for meals, going on family trips to Lake Michigan or simply spending holidays together. She had a great sense of humor and style. She was a formidable pinochle player. People knew Joanne as a vibrant, friendly woman who smiled at everyone and enjoyed helping others. She loved the gulf coast of Florida. She and Pete became Destin snowbirds after retirement, and made wonderful memories for their family, extended families and friends. She loved it all--Destin, shrimp, sunsets and seashells, and live music at the local pub. Joanne had great courage. Even as her body broke down, her spirit stayed strong. She never stopped looking forward to the next thing in life. Her life was an inspiration and a gift to her family and her friends that will never die. A Memorial Service was held Saturday, September 2, 2017 Casterline Funeral Home, 122 W. Dunlap, Northville. Please share online condolences at www.casterlinefuneralhome.com.

Punching out cancer

Debbie and son Harry Eichholtz of Northville walked 60 miles last month during the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer 3-Day in Philadelphia, Pa. Harry dressed for the Rocky statue and ran up the steps of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, mimicking Sylvester Stallone in the movie "Rocky." This was Harry's fourth Breast Cancer 3-Day walk and Debbie's ninth. Together, they have walked in Michigan, Seattle, San Diego and now Philadelphia. Debbie is a paraprofessional for Northville Public Schools and Harry coaches Northville Youth Wrestling. Over the past nine years, they have raised more than $50,000 in donations to Susan G. Komen, supporting scientific research to cure breast cancer.

How to get a job without connections

BY PETER JONES
 THEJOBNETWORK.COM

Networking is probably the number one way to get yourself a job if you are looking. Referrals account for nearly 40 percent of all hires — and referred employees often get jobs quicker and make more money out of the gate. But what if you don't have anyone to refer you to a particular company or within a particular industry? If this is the case, then you'll need to figure out how to get a job without connections. Luckily, we've got the right information to accomplish that.

Here are four steps to follow to help you get a referral even if you lack the relevant connections.

1. Find an influencer

Once you've determined there's a job opening somewhere, find someone who has influence on the hiring process for that position. Search for the position you want and the company you want on a site like LinkedIn until you find your influencer.

2. Make contact

Find the contact information for that person and get in touch to set up a time to chat. This is just normal networking, remember? Keep it short, sweet and to the point.

GETTY IMAGES

Address the new contact by name, briefly explain that you're interested in working in their company, but ask only for advice. Throw in some modest, subtle flattery to sweeten them up and politely request a quick coffee (your treat) to pick their brain. You can use "Quick question" as your subject line.

If you don't get a reply, don't badger them — and don't worry. Just find yourself another influencer in the same company — or for a different job entirely, and try again. If or when you do get a meeting, make sure to do plenty of homework first. That means researching the company, the field, the contact, etc.

3. Prep your question

The absolute most important question you need to ask is this: "What is the biggest challenge your team is facing right now?" That question will make all the difference between awkward small talk and giving your new contact the opportunity to open up and talk about something that matters to him or her — and something that will be extremely informative and helpful to you. Dig in. Listen hard. And send a thoughtful thank-you note.

4. Strategize your solution

You've heard from your influencer (and new contact) what their biggest challenge is. Now figure out their solution. Reach out, research, think inside and outside the box. Put yourself in their team's shoes and consider things from every conceivable angle. Once you've got a great idea, make sure to test it through all the possible hypotheticals you can come up with. Then craft a detailed and elegant proposal.

You're going to send this proposal to your influencer. Start a casual email, with an extra thank you for the coffee date, then say that you've been thinking about the conversation and mulling through their situation. Explain that you've come up with a proposal to help solve their problem. It's gutsy, of course, but if your idea is good — even if it isn't perfect — it will show your value, and your influencer will most likely share it with his or her team.

If any or all of this goes your way, you'll be able to follow up by inquiring about any open opportunities on this person's team (knowing already that there is one). Best case scenario: instant referral. Worst case scenario: You've netted yourself a new contact or two.

Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Car Report

IN FULL-SIZE AVALON, TOYOTA SELLS A SEDAN THAT MAKES IT DIFFICULT TO SWITCH TO A UTILITY VEHICLE

By Dale Buss

It's unfortunate that Americans have been turning away from sedans and turning toward utility vehicles in such a rush over the last few years, because in doing so they may be bypassing great cars like the 2017 Toyota Avalon.

Just like so many sedan nameplates from the subcompact to the full-size like Avalon, this Toyota car flagship has been suffering from consumers' mammoth pivot to crossovers and SUVs. Its sales were down by nearly 28 percent through July compared with a year ago, the worst relative performance across Toyota's sedan lineup.

But what a car folks are missing in the 2017 Avalon. The latest version of the sedan hasn't been updated much since the car was last done over in 2013, but it didn't have to be: Avalon is the optimal vehicle for people who want a large sedan that is going to keep them comfortable, yet in tune to the road, whether they're going on a long-distance road-trip vacation or commuting every day.

Avalon starts at prices of $33,000, which is on the high end for sedans in its class. But it offers pretty much everything that most folks would want in a vehicle. It's styled far less conservatively than previous versions and even progressively for the boomer target audience.

Avalon sports a powerful 3.5-liter V6-engine that's couple with a six-speed automatic transmission and a well-tuned suspension. It provides 268 horsepower and 248 pound-feet of torque. Yet Avalon is able to get up to freeway speed of 60 mph in just 6.4 seconds.

The car sports a decent 24mpg in combined driving, 21th 21mpg in the city and 30 mpg – very respectable for a big car – on the highway. The EPA's rating of Avalon for fuel economy and greenhouse-gas emissions puts it at a 5 on a 10-point scale, smack dab in the middle.

Avalon's rear seat can make three adults comfortable.

It's got plenty of room for five adults, including a capacious rear seat. Child seats also fit easily into the rear row. Visibility is great for everyone in the car.

There's also lots of places for interior storage including the center console and side pockets in front and back. Storage cubby holes fit both keys and wallets, and the center console is large. The front section of the console also conveniently acts as a nexus for power cords that pass through a sliding panel for two cellphones and auxiliary and USB connections.

I've always liked Avalon's ample trunk space too, which at 16 cubic feet – with a wide opening and low liftover height on the lip – make it great for loading and holding big and heavy bags, golf clubs, and all manner of other cargo that would be unworkable in most sedans. A ski pass-through and and handles much better than past generations of the car, with a ride that has firmed up yet which is still easy to command. It's also got luxury-level quiet inside the passenger compartment.

And speaking of the interior, Avalon offers high-quality materials and excellent construction as well as the choice of many high-tech features. Now, for example, Toyota's vaunted safety sense is standard on all Avalons, including adaptive cruise control, a lane-departure warning and intervention system, forward collision warning, automatic pre-collision braking and automatic high-beam headlight control.

Still, I recommend checking out the XLE Plus trim version of Avalon. It provides many safety and convenience features – including a sunroof, heated outside mirrors with turn signals, leather-trimmed heated front seats, and so on – but at a reasonable price tag of just $36,450.

split-folding rear seats are standard.

It's not quite got the cargo utility of even a reasonably sized SUV, but Avalon's capacity is nearly as close as any sedan can come to that kind of accommodation.

Avalon is very comfortable on both highways and surface streets

Plenty of cubbies, fine trim work

The Toyota Avalon is handsome and in command on the road
