Chemical Replaces Spring at MSU

C. L. Hamner shows how he and C. E. Wildon, another research horticulturist at Michigan State University, made a second spring for petunias—chemically. The scientists were able to make petunia plants blossom again in the greenhouse long after flowering had stopped in the fall. TIBA, the chemical they sprayed on the petunias, can be used in the spring to boost the blossom date, too. This new find, they say, holds many possibilities for speeding up plant breeding and production. (M.S.U. Photo)
