visit with the family kept us from attending the Northville Junior Horse Show Sunday, but we hear it was again successful. Much credit must go to local Optimists and Chairman J. P. Malley for this annual undertaking. Our special pho-ographer, Harold Hartley, took some candid shots that appear in this edition.

After a bizarre episode Saturday morning at Indian Lake, it's very doubtful that we'll ever again choose this spot for a vacation. Not that we wouldn't like to, but . . . well, here's what happened. At 3:00 a.m., when every man, woman and child in each cottage was peacefully sleeping, a piercing blast broke the silence that must have awakened even the fish. It sounded strangely near, as if it might be right under our window. It was. The horn of our car had shorted and was stuck on a strong, steady note that would have done Harry the wires to the horn were found and disconnected. Rumon around the lake the next day had it that a person was saved from drowning in the early hours of the morning by an alert cottager who honked the horn of his car until help was Driving back Sunday afternoon, the hours were pleasantly passed listening to Northville's "Chick" Harbert narrate the World golf tournament at Chicago's Tam O' Shanter. I imagine if we hung around a golf course as much as Harbert we'd manage to outscore him on the links, but we'll have to admit that at announcing he's got us beat. Incidentaly, "Chick" finished with a fine two-under-par 286 for the 2 holes and until the final day was very much in the running for top honors.

Novi readers were pretty confused - and upset last week by an error that occurred in their edition of the Novi News. The story concerning the 60 East Novi students who are looking to Northville for schooling next semester was marked "continued from page one" on page twelve. However, it didn't even appear on page one. We won't try to explain how this happened, but we now have one fulltime worker whose only duty is to see that all stories on page twelve, continued from page one, also appear on page one.

Atchison we learned that her late father, Richard Baldwin, was once publisher of The Record and a long-time newspaper man. Mrs. Atchison once reported for The Record as well as the Albion Evening Recorder, where we also re-ceived early training. At India House we met Mrs. L. D. # Community Grow!

Natural Gas service helps community expansion by attracting industrial firms. The location of new industry is often dependent upon the availability of Natural Gas for industrial processing. Therefore, the community with Natural Gas service is an attractive one to industry. As industry grows, there are bigger payrolls, more jobs and more homeowners. Everyone benefits from this community expansion. There are many reasons why industries prefer Natural Gas service. It is delivered through wellbuilt mains—underground—safe, silent and out of sight. It is the perfect fuel—speedy, clean and easily controlled. These same factors make it a perfect fuel for the home too.

Kitchen gadgets - most of all, the refrigerator - are especially fascinating to Hedi. She plans to take home as many kitchen articles for her mother as possible. And remembering the thick forests in her native country, Hedi said, "I am so glad to see that there are lots of trees in America, too." Other things about America fascinate her too - the electric-eye door at a supermarket, the prospect of the senior trip to Washington, D.C., and especially the American's enjoyment of classical music. But Hedi isn't quite sure what she thinks of jazz. Diplomatically, she says, "I don't dislike jazz . . . but I don't especially like it either."

Hopes To Play Cello Hedi will be a senior at Northville high school this fall. As of now, she doesn't know which activities will interest her most. But she does hope to find a way to use one of her many talents - playing the cello. And she also hopes to find an occasional baby-sitting job. She knows the job well, for in Austria she cared for the children of an American Fulbright scholar and his wife. When she returns from her Canadian vacation, Hedi
