for the Record

Recent meetings in Northville and Novi, though entirely unrelated, bear a strong resemblance. They both arose as the result of misunderstanding and grievances that parties concerned figured could only be resolved by "laying their cards on the table".

The Northville meeting was fully reported in The Record last week. It concerned representatives of the city, Downs and Driving Club. Their relations were, we believe, greatly improved by the session. Councilmen were sympathetic to track needs and the racing representatives seemed ready to cooperate with the city to see that future track expansion does not hinder surrounding property values.

The results of this meeting can only serve to help the community, if for no other reason than bringing about closer understanding of a highly important local matter.

In Novi the meeting has not been reported. It was an "off the record" affair called to clear the air and bring some harmony to the township board.

We might have let it slip by unreported; especially, if we thought it had accomplished its point. But because we fear the meeting may have fallen short, we'll relate an "off the record" account of the problem.

It's no secret to anyone even mildly interested in Novi township affairs that all is not serene on the board. Since the election a definite three to two split has existed on nearly

The controlling faction (Balon, Harrison and Bachert) maintains it was elected on a platform. Apparently they mean to stick to this as a mandate.

Meanwhile Supervisor Staman and Trustee Clark, veteran board members, stand opposed to many of the changes suggested. They point to the fact that they, too, were elected and have support for their views.

While Balon, Bachert and Harrison appear receptive to compromise, Staman cannot believe they are doing their own becausining. Here in produce lies the greatest supplies the state of the deeper channel means lower transportation costs. bargaining. Here in, perhaps lies the greatest stumbling block to harmony and progress in Novi.

The supervisor has openly charged that Charles Trickey,

The supervisor has openly charged that the s , former treasurer, is pulling the strings behind the scenes.

Trickey's part in the campaign, in which he backed a slate against Staman, gives the supervisor ample reason to suspect Nevertheless, Balon, Bachert and Harrison vehemently deny any connection with Trickey. They admit an adherance to the principles of their platform, which Trickey helped draft, but here his influence ends. He is a friend and nothing Trickey takes the same position, but we suspect is gaining some pleasure from the torment he is causing Staman.

It's difficult to sort these pieces and put them together so that everything runs smoothly in Novi. Three or four disinterested parties tried as guests at the informal meeting of the board. How successful they were remains to be seen. Actually, it's a matter for the board to settle among themselves. We have confidence that it can be done. We only point to the problem now because we believe that not enough sincere effort is being extended to solve the differences. When you look at them in the light of the future growth of Novi they become mighty trivial. They should be brushed aside and the board concentrate its capabilities on more con-

"We'll take aerial photographs from time to time, and in the meantime we'll map and survey the area, interview people, and study any changes in population growth, land use and development, and government. He said he already has contacted Lincoln officials to ask their cooperation, and soon will approach business and governmental leaders in the area. Dr. Suggett said Wixom "conceivably could reach 20,000 to 30,000 people within 10 years and become the leading community in the area!" Two factors which will help, he added, are the new expressway and the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad spur which may make it a key transportation center.

On the other hand, he said, Wixom could discourage development by a strict zoning code, high taxes and failure to provide needed service facilities. At present, Dr. Suggett said, he and his staff are merely "feeling out" the case study. If the state legislature grants requested funds to MSU, however, the study could actually get underway this summer.

"In the long run," he said, "we hope to answer a question of great significance to the southeastern Michigan area: whether, in the long run, industrialization is essentially good for a farming community."

Whatever the cause, before okaying the $275,000 budget councilmen took a long look at the city's future and didn't

For one thing there would be no capital improvements under the 1957-58 budget. More alarming, race track revenues would have to be used to operate the city.

Councilman Allen said what the others were thinking: "If we use racing revenue for current expenses, what position would we be in without the track?"

The question is not unanswerable. The city manager warned that "we must stop doing everything for nothing . . if we build streets, we must stop paying for sidewalks.' An increase in taxes was also discussed. Councilman

Allen held that enough taxes should be collected to run the city without depending upon race track funds. Next councilmen tossed around the idea of a bond ssue. Some $500,000 in street improvements face the city. As cost of labor and materials go up, each year this sum increases. Most councilmen seemed to feel that a general bond ssue was worth investigating. Councilman Reed pointed out that by doing the complete job in one program the city would save more dollars in the face of rising costs than the amount While Welch agreed with this thinking, Allen took another view. He favored the slower, surer method. Get another view. He favored the slower is a favored the slower is a favored that the favored the slower is a f to improve streets. This way, he reasoned, if anything happened to the track operation the city would not have a bond

Advocates of the bond issue pointed to the dollar savng and the increased cost of maintaining the present dirt roads in the city. Their plan was the same as Allen's; operate the city on taxes, but pay off a bond issue with the track rev-

It all boiled down to the realization that if the city is to meet its improvement committments, it must either (1) borrow money, or (2) raise taxes, or (3) do both. The fastest method — a bond issue — would take three to five years.

The final vote for approval of the budget, though unanimous, carried little enthusiasm. You could tell that by next year, there'll be some changes made.

Can Novi's Namesakes Shake that '500' Jinx?

Novi's two famous namesakes in the racing world will try again tomorrow to break the fantastic jinx that has kept them from victory in Indianapolis for 11 straight years.

Both Novi Specials — the most talked about juggernaughts in racing history - have qualified the 33-car field that will roar around the old brickyard in Indianapolis in hopes of picking up a share of the $300,000 that will go to the winning cars.

This year, as every year, the Novis "can't miss". Owner Lou Welch, a transplanted Californian who formerly lived in Novi and still owns the Novi Equipment company south of the township hall, has done everything possible to help the Novi's come home with the bacon, He has two of the top drivers in the field —

Paul Russo and Tony Bettenhausen, both of whom are veterans of 10 previous 500-mile classics. So far, it's paid off, Russo led all qualifiers with a near-record average of 144.8 mph for the 10-lap test, and Bettenhausen was close behind Yet, the fact remains that the Novis are the

It all started in 1946. Driver Ralph Hepburn had qualified at 134 mph — five miles an hour faster than any other car in the field. But on race day, it was a different story. Hepburn started off fine, but at the halfway point, a piston and connecting rod disintegrated and as suddenly as it had swept around the track, the Novi was out.

The 1948 race was perhaps the most tragic of all, as the Novis' front end drive proved to be deadly. Hepburn rejoined the Welch team for the race, and was lapping well in practice. Suddenly, the rear end began wiggling nervously, and as Hepburn applied the power to bring is around, the car gave a lunge and hurled across the asphalt toward the retaining wall where it hit like thunder. Hepburn, trying for the 16th time to win the big one, was dead.

But Duke Nalon, in the twin, was having better luck. Qualifying at 131, the fastest in the field. Duke was ahead at the 450-mile mark. But at 462 miles, as movie star Barbara Britton moved to Victory Lane to welcome Nalon, the Novi slowly slid to a stop. He was out of fuel. More mishaps followed. In 1949, the Novi again was fastest in the qualifying field, but Nalon crashed and was badly burned. The twin stall ed after 48 laps. In 1950 the Novis didn't qualify because of a rash of mechanical failures. Then in 1953, Cher Miller was nearing 140 mph in practice. Suddenly the car fishtailed to the right, swung to the left, then plunged headlong across the track. The whining monster struck the wall with a tremendous impact, rebounded, and struck again and again until its strength was spent and it came to a halt 300 feet away. Miller, his foot still jammed on the throttle, had died instantly.

Vukovich win while Duke Nalon was making a hero of himself. On the northeast turn, another car careened crazily out of control in front of Nalon. To avoid a crash, he did the impossibleat 140 mph, he cut the wheels to the left, floored the throttle, barreled across the infield, and came to a halt in a furrow of soft earth. All other cars were flagged off the track and Nalon was given 11th place and the "Sportsman of the Year"

By last May, Welch had redesigned the Novi, and in it Paul Russo stopped 10 watches and countless conversations by roaring through a practice lap at 146.6 mph - the fastest ever turned out on the Indianapolis oval, But it still wasn't the Novi's year. With Russo screaming around the track, passing at will on the straightaway, and breaking the record by more than three mph, the jinx stepped in again. Some say Russo dipped too low. Others say a tire blew. But in any case, the Novi careened into a spin, smashed headlong into the wall with a puff of smoke and flame, then screeched to a

Russo was unhurt, miraculously, and the Novi was awarded last place. For his quarter-of-a-million investment, Welch had had a return of some Yet Welch is back again this year. And so are the thousands of fans who make the annual trek to the brickyard. And all of them are confident that this is the year that the "car of tomorrow" will shake its jinx and come home with

WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL RACERS - The fabulous Novi Specials, which tomorrow will be out to show the racing world that they can beat the '500' jinx that has plagued them for 11 years.
