SPEAKING

It frequently seems that the destiny of a community is guided by a very few - those who are willing and interested n devoting time and talent to provide municipal leadership.

In general it would have to be conceded that this theory is ndeed a reality, although wise community leaders keep a hand on the public pulse for guidance.

But there are exceptions. And the biggest might well be the economic well-being of a community.

ture for the future orderly growth of Northville was a subject of considerable discussion among members of the newly formed conomic development committee last week

There has been a suggestion that the efforts of this committee might damage, or even destroy, the traditional smalltown atmosphere that is so deeply cherished by those who have chosen this community in which to live

In reality it is to maintain the traditions and high standards as personified by our schools, recreation program and residential areas that the committee was born.

The dozen or so members of the economic development committee know, and accept, what the future holds for Northville - an increasing population

And by conservative standards it has been determined that school and county taxes (not to mention local) will nearly DOUBLE present levels by 1969

While there may be a few homeowners who would be willing to bear extremely high residential taxes to maintain the level of services and school facilities desired, it is recognized that the majority would not and could not

SPEAKING for the Record

In Michigan there are 54 daily newspapers and 300 weeklies. And each day the desks of these editors are stacked high with envelopes mailed from sources throughout the state and

The envelopes contain "news releases". Frequently, however, this is a misnomer and the news is really advertising disguised so that it may be published without charge.

The true news release is often used - perhaps even expanded upon - if it holds any interest for local readers. The publicity plug usually finds its way into the circular file.

All told, however, there must be literally tons of mail thrown away daily that has little more than a glance before being deposited in the basket. It seems a shame when you think of the thousands of copy writers trying desperately to come up with an "angle" so tha

Some of it, of course, is mere trivia. But without it you'd never know who won the Miss Beansprout of 1962 contest (then, too, you'd miss that attractive picture). And you would never know what your legislator was doing - or what his political
