new traffic markings. Red indicates stop or prohibited action. Green shows movement permitted or gives directional guidance. Blue is used for signs leading motorists to services and yellow indicates a general warning.

Black on white indicates regulatory signs, such as speed limits. Orange convevs construction and maintenance warnings and brown is for public recreation and scenic guidance.

Shapes of the new signs are also important. Diamond shaped signs signify a warning while rectangular signs with the longer dimension vertical provide traffic regulation, such as merging traffic, low clearance or termination of a divided highway.

Octagons will still identify stop signs and inverted triangles will be used for yield signs. Both will be red in color.

A pennant will signify no passing; pentagons will identify school zones and circles will warn of railroad crossings.

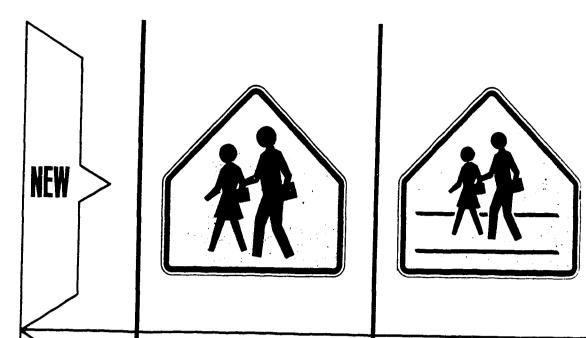

Pavement markings will also be changed, with yellow being used much more than in the past. Yellow lines will separate traffic traveling in opposite directions. The center line on a two-way road will be marked with yellow dashes, differentiating the road type from dashed white lines used on multi-lane one-way roadways such as divided highways.

Other uses of yellow will include left edgelines on divided roadways where traffic cannot pull entirely off the roadway and for marking obstructions and islands which must be passed on the Changes in traffic signs, signals and markings have been under study since 1964, officials said, and have been recommended by the Federal Highway Administration.

They were decided upon after a study by the American Association of State Highway Officials, National League of Cities, National Association of Counties, Institute of Traffic Engineers, National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances and the Federal Highway Administration.

Annexation Hearing Set Tuesday

jects in the history of the city and township of Northvillewill take the limelight Tuesday night when the Michigan Boundary Commission conducts a public hearing in the Northville High School auditorium.

The hearing, open to all citizens of the city and township, will get underway at 8 p.m.

Following the hearing and after considering oral and written arguments of those for and against annexation of the township to the city, the commission is expected to rule on the question. And, unless citizens petition for an election on the matter, the commission's ruling is final.

Best guess is that the commission's decision will not be handed down much before January 1. Format of Tuesday's hearing reportedly will call for the five-member commission to be seated at the front of the auditorium, perhaps on the stage, along with representatives of the township, city, the group petitioning for annexation, and a group opposing annexation. Each of these four groups is to have from 15 to 20 minutes in which to make the presentations.

Upon conclusion of these presentations, comments by members of the audience will be encouraged by the commission. Commissioners also will encourage written com-

The annexation question was placed in the lap of the boundary commission early in March with the filing of petitions, containing some 232 township signatures and 120 signatures from the city.

Most active participants in gathering and filing petitions for annexation were Ambler, Robert Bogart, H. O. Evans, Eugene Guido and Wilson Tyler from the township, and John Canterbury from the city. Record Publisher William Sliger attended and participated in meetings held by the Others who participated in the circulating of the petitions were Thomas Armstrong, James Tellam, Martin Rinehart, Charles Gross, Jack Hoffman, Mrs. Robert Yoder, Donald Lawrence and Wallace Nichols.

Petitions were filed at the offices of the boundaries commission in Lansing. Subsequently, the commission found a sufficient number of valid signatures on the petitions and called for the public Sitting at the public hearing will be the three Michigan boundary commissioners and two boundary commissioners representing Wayne County. The Michigan boundary commissioners, who are appointed by the governor, are D. R. Calhoun of Huntington Woods,

The two Wayne County boundary commissioners, who are appointed by the judge of probate, are Eric Golting of Detroit and William Moshier of Romulus.

We extend a warm and sincere welcome to our new families and "best wishes" to those families whose plans necessitated their leaving our schools and community since

The official opening of school doors for the 1972-73 school year took place on July 31, 1972, when classes began for 170 K-5 students participating in the Experimental Year-Round School Program. The first day of classes for the traditional school year students will be Wednesday, September 6, 1972, with students in grades 6-12 starting at 8:00 A.M. and students in grades K-5 beginning at 9:00 A.M. The schedule for September 6th calls for only a half day of classes, with the Annex closing at 10:30, Cooke at 10:35, High School at 11:00, and the Elementary Schools closing at 11:45.

A regular full-day schedule begins on Thursday, September 7, 1972.

We are pleased to report that all school buildings have received some form of general upgrading as well as having been carefully cleaned and readied to greet our returning students, along with an anticipated 300 to 400 new students we expect to join us during the course of the school year.

It is gratifying to recall the fine support given our June millage and bond issue, and we are pleased to report that not only can we advance the 1971-72 program into 1972-73, but that additional staff and new curricular offerings will appear at all levels of instruction. In addition, it is noted that some of the June bond issue projects will be ready for school opening, with others ready for action momentarily, and the remaining projects in the planning stage.

With the State Aid and all other sources of revenue pretty well established and negotiations with staff nearing completion, we are able to zero in on a budget which should do an adequate job of meeting the educational needs of our existing enrollment and our new fellow students enrolling during the Consumers Power Company is building a gas reforming plant at Marysville in St. Clair County that will help relieve our short supply of natural gas. Using a new process developed in England, the plant will make "natural" gas from liquid hydrocarbons obtained by pipeline from Alberta, Canada. Consumers Power expects the plant to be completed and producing as much as 100 million cubic feet of gas per day by 1973. This means Consumers Power customers will have more gas for home heating, for commerce and for industry ... clean-burning energy that helps to prevent air pollution.

During the last three years, the district has increased an average of 14.5 per cent per year in student population. This year's enrollment is estimated at 2100 spring and four represen students. Presently, single family dwelling, condominiums tatives were selected from each of its contract obligation to the and townhouses are being constructed in large numbers in class. Officers will be the school district. These facilities are producing sizeable numbers of school children.

Novi Community Schools is continuing to study curriculum changes with the goal of serving all children and youth more effectively. The new emphasis on career education is making it necessary for all vocational education programs to be carefully re-examined. The addition to the staff of a director of vocational education will help in the development. Electronic classes and facilities have been added at the high school. Fortunately, the Area Vocational Center is able to serve Novi students with some satisfaction, but there is a need for more training for the world of work.

The development of quality programs of education for both elementary and secondary school students will continue to be the overwhelming concern of school staff and the Board of Education. A good school district is one which is continuously striving to be a better one. A parallel is that a good school is always in the process of becoming and working to be a better one. Part of that procss is the addition of new teachers and programs which bring to the district new insights, creative approaches and expanded services. Additional special education personnel and facilities have been added for the 1972-73 school year. Extra special subject teachers have been hired to improve course offerings. New finished classrooms are available at Village Oaks Elementary and the Middle School. Improved athletic facilities now exist at the High School. Improved programs at all levels will follow, it is the obligation of schools to give children and youth the opportunity to learn to make choices, live with the consequences and grow from the experiences. This can only have been accomplished by citizenship con-Novi Community Schools has been able to provide many opportunities for children and youth because of the intelligent interest and support by the citizens of the district. Only through involvement of parents, youth and community at all levels of planning and programming can today's schools succeed. It is tremendously important that citizens show an interest in school board meetings and school elections. It is equally important that parent-teacher group meetings be well attended and that the officers perform their functions with enthusiasm and efficiency. Next Tuesday evening citizens of the community of Northville will have the opportunity to witness and participate in a discussion of the proposed annexation of the township

A commission composed of stateappointed officials will hear presentations on the issue and then open the meeting to comments from the floor of the high school

It constitutes a rather new approach in state government procedures by introducing impartial observers possessing varied backgrounds in local government to hear and assist in questions of unification.

In the final analysis the new method does not replace the right of the electorate to vote on the question; it merely assures public airing of the questions so that all facts may be heard.

Then, depending upon the decision rendered by the State Boundaries Commission, an election may be conducted.

At any rate, it's history in the brunt of the proposed "marriage". making in Northville and should be But the wedding is actually both entertaining and informative to

Hopefully, the meeting will be well attended and citizens of Northville will demonstrate to the State Boundaries Commission that they understand the purpose of the hearing is to inform and exchange opinions and its conduct will remain at the level.

A most informative and thorough updating of the 1968 unification study has now been completed and submitted by the Citizens Research Council of Michigan.

The non-partisan, non-profit organization responded to a request from the Northville township board of trustees and the city council and performed the study without charge to the community.

They used material prepared by Consultant Donald M. Oakes, retained by the city and township in 1967-68, who worked with citizens of the city and township to study the feasibility and desirability of unification of the two governments

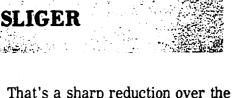

The Research Council assigned one man to the task for a full month. He held several meetings with both city and township officials to review changes that have taken place since the original study.

The CRC's 24-page report concludes that the tax rate for a single city of Northville with full services to the total area equal to those now provided in the existing city would separately.

Thus the city resident would benefit from a 5.72 mill reduction in city property taxes.

The township resident would find his property taxes increased by 3.48 NO . . .

In dollars and cents this means the owner of a $30,000 home in the city (assessed for tax purposes at $15,000) would pay $85.80 less in property taxes per year.

The same township homeowner would pay an additional $52.20 per Photographic Sketches . . .

On the surface it may appear that the township taxpayer is bearing the beneficial to both parties.

Obviously, the city resident enjoys a tax cut. But he must share more than $450,000 in annual rebates from the state for race track betting with the township. Secondly, he gives his township neighbor immediate ownership in all the city's capital assets and services (city hall, police, department of public

The report also notes that as a city the community would gain some $97,500 in additional gas and weight tax revenues and would save nearly $50,000 annually by eliminating duplicated costs.

For his $52.20 per year the township taxpayer would receive weekly rubbish pick-up, road cleaning and maintenance, full-time police service and no responsibility for providing new township hall

The report notes that the area in the city hall now used by the library would have to made available for governmental offices.

Thus a new home for the library would be needed. The city-township library commission has proposed the former community building, now used as a township hall.

The complete text of the Citizens Research Council's updated unification report covering population, land use, government structure, services, finance and finances for a unified city will be published in next week's edition of

Speaking for Myself

Limit Fees For Towing?

YES . . .

There is a definite need to limit fees for towing services. I base my arguments on personal experience in dealing with such "towing services" Last January 12, 1972, I had need to have my automobile towed from 10 Mile and Telegraph Roads in Southfield to a Farmington automobile dealership. The cost, $10, was paid by my insurance company. Three months later I had need for my second auto to be towed from 10 Mile and Meadowbrook Roads to the same Farmington automobile dealership - approximately a two mile trip. The cost to my insurance company this time, for a much shorter trip, was $25.

experiences with "towing services". As many towing companies have demonstrated an inability to deal with people consistently fairly and justly, there is a very real need for legislation to govern their operations.

> Denis M. Berry, Novi City Councilman

As seems so often to be the case, the State and Federal Governments wish to take a hand in a business with which they are totally unfamiliar.

There are so many things to be considered in charging fees for wrecker services. I will enumerate some of them: no two wrecker calls are the same. The time of day varies. When called at 2 a.m. to give service, fees should be more than those charged in the middle of the day.

Often the tow-truck operator must wait for an ambulance to care for the injured. He cannot do his work until the people involved in the accident are cared for. Occasionally, wrecked cars can be hooked up and taken away at once; often, there are so many pieces to the cars involved that a "dolly" must be used to transport the remains of the cars from the scene of the accident - and a "dolly" is an expensive piece of equipment and naturally the use of it should be higher priced than a simple wrecker

Also, there are hidden items to be considered. In three different car-train accidents. I have worked many hours during the night to clear the tracks - and have received no remuneration at all, either because the owner had been killed, or there was just "kindling wood" left of the cars, and no insurance had been carried by the driver of the car.

If you are ever in need of a tow truck in unfamiliar surroundings, try to contact the local Police authority which has a call list of nearby reputable wrecker services.

So, I maintain, there should be no State-set towing fees. Each individual wrecker operator should be allowed to charge for the time and the equipment needed to service each individual call.

'Young' Mike Austin Wins State PGA Seniors Crown

When I learned Mike Austin had won the Michigan Professional Golfers Association Seniors championship at Lakewood Country Club at Oscoda last week, I called to offer my congratualtions.

The colorful Chemung Hills Country Club professional had beaten a field of that state's best "over-50" PGA golfers. And at 63 he was certainly not among the youngest competing.

Readers may remember an article about Austin and his exploits published in this newspaper last year.

Now in his second year at the nine-hole club near Howell, Austin hails from Hollywood, California. He's married to an artist-actress. boasts that he can whip six men and drive a golf ball farther than anyone, once won $10,000 betting he could score five on a four-par hole using a Coke bottle for a club (he scored four), shot a 29-37-66 in the Bing Crosby tournament defeated Lloyd Mangrum and Paul Runyan in match play, filmed golf lessons wearing a black leotard skeleton suit to demonstrate use of the joints in a golf swing, and has given golf lessons learned again how young the 63-year-old like Austin really is.

'About the article, Michael. I thought I'd come up to see you, maybe play a round with Charley and Paul. You could give me another lesson. Then I'll pass along the word to the other oldtimers", I pursued.

On a muggy day with rain-soaked fairways that provided little or no roll Mike reached the par five 537-yard fourth hole in two; he hit his drive pin-high to the left on the 310-yard seventh; and hit the elevated green on the 208-yard par three third hole with a three iron.

So what's his advice for golfers of all ages?

Babson Report: Profit Sharing Climbs

Pension programs have become an economic factor of such magnitude that Congress has been probing various legislative proposals designed to protect those eligible for such fringe benefits. While much emphasis has been placed on the "vested interest" facet of this important subject, realistic guidelines for proper investment of pension fund monies are also being studied—with rumblings in favor growing louder in a number of state legislatures.

Thus, investment conditions are still favorable for the inauguration of pension funds or profit sharing plans, or for satisfactory augmentation of any such fringe benefit programs already in

It's a casual revelation, in the beginning, with occasional splashes of crimson sumac, yellow birch and nut brown oak peaking through green pines along Lake Superior's shores in the Upper Peninsula. Then suddenly you awake to find the entire landscape transformed into a profusion of hues and tints that encompass the total spectrum of the color wheel. This annual phenomenon usually begins between mid and late September, crossing the majestic Mackinac Bridge into Michigan's Lower Peninsula during the early days of October. From mid to late October, the entire State is ablaze with this extravagance of color, according to the Michigan

Most of the recreational pursuits of summer are still to be pursued and enjoyed even more in the autumn's magnificent parks invite planned and impromptu picnics, campgrounds canopied by a rainbow of color promise quiet rest and mysterious, eaf covered trails beckon the hiker to, "follow me". Dew covered mornings, balmy days and crisp nights act as a magic elixir, soothing spirits and calming frayed nerves. Summer Vacations: Time for Re-Creation

Reverend Frederick Prezioso Epiphany Lutheran Church Northville Township

At this vacation time of the year, we have a special opportunity to consider how our family vacations can be used not only for recreation, but also for family "re-creation." For stewardship, in the Christian sense, has to do not only with money, but with making the most of God's gifts, including the family.

Vacation time is an opportunity for families to work together, discussing and planning the year ahead. What are our plans as a total family? What will the individual members be doing? What does each want and need to do? What do we want to accomplish as the unique family that we are? And I am speaking here of concrete, "get-it-down-on-paper" planning, during the relative calm of a few days or weeks at the cottage, at the seashore, or just plain relaxing at home.

This is the chance to set goals, determine roles, establish priorities. It is the chance to rediscover the significance you have as a family, living, working, playing and struggling together in the rough and tumble of the twentieth century. Another thing that can be done is to plan for "family meetings" to be held at a regular time every week. This is a time when you decide that being together as a family takes priority over all other commitments. It might be at Sunday dinner, or Monday morning breakfast, or after Sunday night supper. But it will be that time when the whole family gathers to discuss the issues and events coming up during the week. It will be that time when weekly calendars are coordinated and finalized. It will be that time when decisions are made as to who gets the family car(s), and when, and for what. What are the baby-sitting needs, meal planning needs.

grace, and then, while the meal is being eaten, each family member is asked in turn, "What was your most significant event today?" This gives an opportunity for each person to examine his or her day, and share at least one happening that

For example, maybe the only possible time for a busy family to gather would be for an early breakfast. The question then might be, "What one event or experience are you most looking forward to today?" Whatever the details, it can be very helpful to provide such a time on a regular basis. to enable family communication.

These are only a few suggestions. You can certainly discover other possibilities together. The single most important element is the desire on the part of individual family members. Summertime vacations provide an opportunity not only for recreational fun, but also for families to "recreate" themselves; and to rediscover for themselves, a unique meaning and significance, amid the sometimes conflicting demands of job, school and community.

Esperanto: A Bridge?

throughout Europe. With World War I, however, it suffered a major setback but, following the war, it was given some prominence through agencies of the League

French post-war dominance, however, was a major stumbling block, says Lockhart, and Esperanto's influence was limited. When World War II broke out it again suffered at the hands of nationalism. The language was banned by Germany, Italy, and Russia.

Following World War II, Esperanto seemingly had clear sailing with the establishment of the international United Nations organization. But, just as French dominated the League, English dominates the United Nations, asserts Lockhart.

Nevertheless, in Europe Esperanto is making great strides, he says. Although the International Esperanto organization, headquartered in the Netherlands, has only 100,000 members, it is estimated that some 10 to 12 million people, mostly living in Europe, can speak the language.

Only in recent years has Esperanto made any real headway in North America. More and more schools and universities, says Lockhart, are beginning to teach the Early this month the international organization held its first annual convention in the United States since 1915 when only 163 persons attended. Held at Portland, Oregon, this year's convention drew 900 Esperantists from 40 nations...Lockhart included.

Lockhart learned the language during the Depression in the 1930's.

"With little else to do I concluded I should do something worthwhile to occupy my time," he says. "My father had toyed with Esperanto in England, so I began using his books to learn the language on my own.

so would you. I'm not a wizard. English grammar frightens me as much as it does junior high school students."

"Just as I found it an easy language to learn

Esperanto spelling, he explains, is strictly

There is no such thing as arbitral grammatical gender—the most illogical of all difficult features in most languages. There is only one conjugation.

There are no irregular verbs, irregular nouns, or exceptions to grammatical rules.

Root words were selected from a stock of words already used internationally so that a majority of the Esperanto words are recognized upon sight without study. And the use of prefixes and suffixes greatly reduces the number of words which must be separately memorized.

Take the Esperanto root word patro (father), for example.

As patra it becomes (paternal); as patre (paternally); as patrujo (fatherland); as pat rino (mother); as patrina (maternal or motherly); as patrineco (motherhood); as patrineto (little mother, used for endearment); as panjo (momma); as pachjo (papa or daddy); as gepatroj (parents); as gepatra (parental); as prepatroj (forefathers); and as pragepatroj (an-

Furthermore, order of words is simple and free. A sentence in Esperanto may be written with different word order and still be grammatically correct, says Lockhart. But even more importantly, it is easily understood as having the same meaning, he adds. In English many words are spelled the same way but have totally different meanings. Take the word "cross," for example. It is sometimes a noun sometimes an adjective, sometimes a preposition, sometimes a transitive verb, and sometimes an intransitive verb.

In English there is nothing in the form,

sound, or spelling of words to distinguish one part of speech from another. "Under" is a preposition, "sunder" is a verb, while blunder" is either a noun or a verb. "Houses" is a noun, but "rouses" is a verb.

According to Lockhart, people who take up Esperanto become "parts-of-speechminded," Every noun ends in "o" in the nominative singular, and even in plural and in accusative (the only other forms) it has an "o" in the last syllable. Every adjective is similarly marked by an "a" in the last syllable, and every derived adverb shows as "e" in the last syllable.

If it is such an easy language to learn why then has it failed, thus far, to attain in-

Lockhart sees several reasons: seated partiotism, that look with distayor of internationalism. Even the United Nations has many enemies. World powers have attempted to spread their influence by propagandizing their languages. They see their languages as the best means for international communication. Many linguists and university scholars. who pride themselves in their language specialities, scorn Esperanto as elementary gibberish. They do so, contends Lockart. because Esperanto is something they haven't tried and therefore they are reduced from the level of the egotistic teacher to the learner. Wars have forced nations to fear internationalism and hence Esperanto. "What opponents fail to realize," emphasizes Lockhart, "is that the Esperanto movement does not propose to replace national languages but rather it proposes to supplement them with a language everyone can understand. "It's a neutral language, having neither political nor religious ties. National patriots have nothing to fear from Esperanto." As for opponents in language circles, Lockhart sees signs of encouragement. "More and more of them are beginning to see the necessity for a universal language.

"Interestingly, some of them see Esperanto as a good ('starter' language for secondary students. It is easy to learn, and thus less likely to discourage students. Furthermore, they are finding that Esperanto makes learning of other languages easier, and it makes for better understanding of the learner's own language." Lockhart, who is so enthusiastic about promoting the language that he offers to assist a class of self-learners in the area, concludes with this observation: "English is our great rich language. We will never let it go. But Esperanto is the so lution to the world language problem."

Old Blue's A Grand Champion

It was hardly a case of love at first sight, but today the relationship between Champion Brooks Blue Boy-"Blue" to his friends-and owner Florence Pangborn is just fine. In fact, Florence, a teacher at Novi High School, has not only forgiven Blue for his less than championship behavior on the occasion of their initial meeting, but actually defends him for it. "I had only just bought him and was visiting him in the kennel for the first time to get acquainted," she recalls. "I had my back to him and he came up behind me and bit me." No sooner has Florence grudgingly revealed the sordid events of that first meeting than she rushed to Blue's defense, however. "Blue was only doing what comes naturally to sheep dogs," she states firmly. "Sheep dogs herd whatever's in front of them. I was in front of Blue and simply got "herded," that's all there was to it." Florence's defense of the dog is easy to understand. Not only has Blue become a close personal frienda phenomenon understood only by other people with pets-he has also become number one rated Old English Sheep Dog in the United

"Its just one of those things." Florence says proudly. "Most people who own show dogs will go a life time and never have a number one dog. Blue was the very first show dog I ever owned and he turns out to be a national champion." How did she happen to get such a a lot to do with it. "Blue was part of the estate of a man from Toledo who had died," Florence relates. "A friend of mine knew about him and we went over to a kennel in Livonia to take a look. We asked the executors of the estate if I could buy him and they consented." "We knew he was a good dog when
