Will he stand trial?

Watkins is to undergo evaluation

By CRISTINA FERRIER Staff Writer

Frederick Watkins, accused of murder, will undergo a psychiatric evaluation to determine if he is fit to stand trial for the Sept. 26 stabbling death of his wife of 47 years. Walled Lake 52-1 District Court Judge Harold Bulgarelli agreed to order the evaluation after Watkins' attorney, Dennis Szokolay, said his client was unable to understand the court proceedings.

"As he sits here, he is in a stuporous state," Szokolay told the court Friday morning. "As he sits here he is unable to comprehend the seriousness of this matter and unable to understand the court proceedings."

Szokolay said Watkins, who was taking numerous prescription medications, is unable to remember the events surrounding the death of his wife, Theresa. He has filed an intent to use the insanity plea as a defense.

Theresa Watkins, 68, died the morning of Sept. 26 after police broke into their Country Place condominium and reportedly found Watkins holding a butcher knife, which was plunged into her chest.
Autopsy results indicated that she had been stabbed more than 20

Police arrived four minutes after she called 9-1-1 and pleaded for help, but it was too late to save her. On the seven-minute 9-1-1 tape, Theresa Watkins repeatedly identifles her husband as the attacker.

Watkins, 76, appeared unable to recognize family members who attended the court proceeding on Friday. One woman reached forward and put her hand on his shoulder. called him several times by his nickname "Skip" and told him that she loves him. But he responded only with a blank look.

Szokolay said he has to keep explaining the situation to Watkins. who remains confused.

"He doesn't have any recollection of what happened that morning, but he knows he's in jail and he knows he's accused of murder," Szokolay said. "He's very depressed about it. He's ashamed."

He was unsure whether Watkins is aware that his wife is dead.

This morning, again, he asked me why he was in court. I had to explain to him again that he is accused of murdering his wife." Szokolay said he suspects that the stabbing, as well as Watkins' current state of mind, are the result of a bad reaction to medication.

Police found a medicine cabinet full of different prescription drugs. Watkins reportedly suffered from diabetes, heart problems, depression, and a head injury sustained in a car accident last July. He was also recovering from a stroke.

Szokolay said three of the drugs currently prescribed to Watkins are Haldol, Micronase and Cardizem. He said all three were prescribed by different doctors, but all were filled at Arbor Drugs, which has a computer network designed to identify incompatible prescriptions.

Haldol, a drug classified as an anti-psychotic, was prescribed to treat depression, he said. Micronase is an oral diabetes treatment, and Cardizem is a common heart medication used to regulate blood pressure.

Todd Hoerauf, a pharmacist for Providence Medical Center — Providence Park in Novi, said Haldol is not a commonly used drug because

The birthday boy

Gov. John Engler had a little birthday party in the Novi Expo Center last Thursday evening, and he invited 3,100 of his closest friends. Actually, the Governor's Birthday Bash, as it was labelled, was a fundraiser for his reelection campaign. Serving as the first of four bashes to be held throughout the state during the month of October, the Novi party netted the governor's campaign an estimated $300,000, according to campalgn staffer Jim Brandell. Local officials reported that Engler was impressed with the Expo facility, and they didn't miss the opportunity to lobby him for additional road funding for the town center area.

Wolpe criticizes S.B. One, Engler

By RANDY COBLE Staff Writer

Former U.S. Congressman Howard Wolpe paid a visit to Novi last week and criticized state legislators, Gov. John Engler foremost of all, for their reckless and potentially dangerous" moves in public school funding.

"Public education is threatened in Michigan as never before," Wolpe said during an annual breakfast meeting of the Novi Youth Assistance Oct. 6. He said that lawmarkers made a rash and wrong decision earlier this summer when they passed Senate Bill One into law. That measure eliminated property taxes which fund general school operations - some $6.5 billion in all.

Wolpe, a former Congressional representative from the Inghman County area, is a declared Republican candidate for governor. Engler is expected to run for re-election next year for the job he won in 1990.

Wiping out the funding mechanism for schools, Wolpe said, before deciding on a new one is a foolish strategy. "I sort of compare it to heart transplant surgery," Wolpe said. "It's nice to have the replacement heart ready, or the patient won't do

Wolpe, calling legislators' actions "a game of political one-upsmanship." described the way one journalist recounted how Senate Bill One was very well."

"It was a game of political chicken, and no one blinked."

The candidate predicted that Michigan would see less net money for its schools and a net tax increase at the same time.

Wolpe also pointed out a fact that complicates the situation as legislators debate how to pay for Michigan's schools. The provisions of the 1978 Headlee Amendment to the state constitution limits the amount of money the state can raise in taxes for any purpose. Specifically, Headlee says that state taxes can't take up a greater percentage of individual income than they did in '78. (Property taxes are local taxes, not part of this particular Headlee provision.) Therefore, Lansing can only increase taxes by about $3.8 billion now.

Many legislators support state tax increases - sales, income, business and/or others - to give each student in Michigan a "foundation grant." The grant would be a set amount sent each year to the district the student attends.

To close the gap between $6.5 billion and $3.8 billion, many legislators also favor giving districts the opportunity to ask their voters approve local property tax millages.

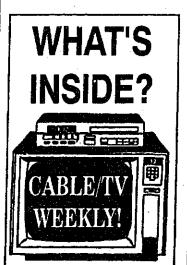

Engler last week unveiled his flnancing plan, which calls for a twocent sales tax increase (requiring Anti-psychotic drugs in general are used to regulate a person's mood. They "keep someone on a totally even keel, with no real ups or downs," Hoerauf explained.

But, he added, Haldol is also a drug that builds up in the patient's system. Watkins would have had to forget to take the medication for a significant period of time to lose its effect, and the loss would have been gradual rather than sudden.

In addition to the drugs Szokolay named, police confiscated eight different bottles of medicine with Watkins' name on them, as well as other drugs that were prescribed to Theresa Watkins. The bottles with Frederick Watkins' name on them included prescriptions of chloral-Glynase, Cardizem, Darvocet and enztropine mesylate.

my first experience with one of these things, and inasmuch as I stand four-square against the use of speeding tickets for generating local revenue, I have to say they're a good idea. My first meeting with a portable speed monitor was in San Rafael, Calif., two years through street in a residential area that was three lanes wide, and downhill to boot. The first time I passed it, it clocked me doing 42 in a 25 mph zone. Jamming on the brakes got me down to 28. Over the course of the next three days. I passed the monitor maybe a half dozen times, and found it exceedingly difficult to get down to the legal limit in that particular

ago. The local constabulary had set up the monitor on a

If you gave the car just enough gas to get through the intersection at the top of the street, the slope made the car pick up speed unless you rode the brakes the whole way. But the visual cues of the extra-wide roadway gave you a somewhat distorted estimate of your speed unless you kept your eyes glued to the speedometer.

By riding the brakes all the way down the street, I could keep my speed in the 25-28 range. Frustrated that I couldn't get the car under 25, I made a radical move. Het the automatic transmission get me moving from the stop the Novi News.

So now Novi's planning to get light at the top of the street. No accelerator whatsoever. As soon as I hit the slope, I rode the brake again. This time I did it. The monitor displayed "21" as I rode past. But what I thought were trumpets of celebration were the horns of three cheesed-off drivers behind me, unhappy with my attempts at civil obedience. My point here is not to make excuses for exceeding the speed limit. An argument could be made that the speed limit was artifically low, but that's irrelevent. The fact of the matter is, that street in California was a quirk of geography that could give radar-happy police officers the opportunity for cherry-picking. Instead, the local police offered drivers the opportunity to police themselves. A charitable move under the

There are other reasons to like the speed machines. I've driven cars with oversize tires that caused the speedometer to give readings way under the actual speed. Replacement of your rear-end gear and transmission could also result in false readings. It's nice to know just how accurate your speedometer is. In Novi, there are plenty of places where a speed monitor would be effective: Meadowbrook Road from Eight Mile to Ten Mile: Taft Road from Grand River to Eight Mile: East Lake Drive . . . I'm sure you have your own favorite. All of the streets I mention have low speed limits, and justifiably so for safety concerns.

That, after all, is best reason for enforcing speed laws. I certainly hope Novi would never view traffic enforcement solely as a means of generating revenue. By using a speed monitor, the city shows that indeed it would not.

Investment yields benefits after long wait

Some 90 miles north of San Francisco, and far from mainstream northern California wine country, is Guenoc (Gwen'-ahk) Valley, an uncommonly beautiful, but extremely isolated, and under-developed area. Here the wine lover finds the 23,000 acres of the Guenoc Estate Vineyards and Winery which in total represents the area of a sizeable city.

Vineyards in Guenoc Valley grow at optimum elevations between 1,000 and 1,500 feet. Grapes reap benefits from the rich California sun by day and very cool temperatures at night. Soils are either loamy with gravel bands or rocky and lean. The former are superior for chardonnay, while the latter simulate the conditions of the Medoc and make a favorable home for the Bordeaux varietals - cabernet sauvignon, merlot, cabernet franc, malbec and petit

The Guenoc Winery label bears a portrait of the famous stage actress Lillie Langtry who was the darling of both European and American theatergoers in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Langtry owned property in the Guenoc Valley where she produced wines from her vineyards. Today, more than 300 acres of vineyards surround the original Langtry House, restored to its original Victorian elegance by Guenoc's proprietors Orville and Karen Magoon.

In 1963, Orville Magoon's family exchanged 23 acres of prime real estate in Hawaii for the 23,000 acres in Guenoc Valley because the University of Hawaii needed to expand its campus facilities. At first, the property served as a livestock ranch only, but Magoon's mother Genevieve wanted to plant grapes, considering them more romantic than hay. And so it happened!

Both the wine louse phylloxera and Prohibition destroyed the vineyards planted by Langtry and the Magoon family had to begin back at square one. Orville Magoon travelled to Bordeaux to visit vinevards and came back to the property to plant test plots. The first wines from these plantings were produced in 1976.

In 1980, the Magoons built a winery with an exterior in the original design modeled after the historic Langtry barn. Here winemaker Derek Holstein is crafting some of the most delicious wines made in California. Holstein has been honing his winemaking skills since high school when he first made wine from plums.

In 1981, Guenoc Valley became the first single-proprietor viticultural appellation recognized by the federal government Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

WINE BELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

Attention white wine lovers, these are some of the best we've tasted recently:

Sauvignog blancs: 1991 Quivira Reserve ($14), 1992 St. Clement ($11), 1992 Murphy-Goode Fume Blanc ($11), 1992 Fortant de France ($6), 1992 Fritz Cellars ($8.50), 1992 Ferrari-Carano Fume Blanc

Chardonnays: 1992 Fortant de France ($7), 1992 Rodiney Strong ($9), 1991 Sterling Vineyarda ($18), Australia's Rosemount Estate Diamond Label ($11), 1991 Antinori Cervaro della Sala ($14) is an interesting blend of chardonnay and the Italian varietal grechetto and the 1990 Ferrari-Carano ($32) although wearing a high price tag is sensational.

Baked Eggplant with Lamb (Moussaka) served with a salad of tomato, cucumber, olives and feta cheese is a dish characteristic of simple but delicious Greek cuisine.

Gracious Greek Modern favorites have Athenian roots

By TERSHIA D'ELGIN Copley News Service

A great deal of civilization can be attributed to its foundation in Greek heritage -medicine, mathematics, literature, science, art, atchitecture - and food.

Greek cuisine and Greektown are as fundamental to the Detroit area as postand-lintel construction is to architecture.

According to Eva Zane's book, Greek Cooking for the Gods (101 Productions), centuries before the birth of Christ, the Greeks were dining on legumes simmered with olive oil, oregano and bay leaf, lamb roasted with capers and honey-drenched cakes. All this while the balance of Europe was gnawing on raw bones. The tenets of modern cuisine - stock, herb seasoning, sauces — and methods such as braising can all be attributed to

Greek invention. In Greek Cooking for the Gods, we learn that Athenaeus, a kind of second-century M.F.K. Fisher, wrote an esteemed treatise on food, "The Deipnosophists" ("The Banquet of the Learned"). In it, he describes the fascination of Homer, Herodotus and Sophocles in the origins and merit of many foods. Athenaeus even includes a recipe for "electric ray stewed in oil, wine and fragrant herbs and a little grated cheese.' In spite of this respectful beginning. what most people know of Greek cooking is stuffed grape leaves. And likely they don't even know the main ingredients in these dolmadakia, as they are called. Greek cooking is a broad and savory subject. Greece has some 2,500 miles of shoreline. As a seafaring population, Greeks exported bouillabaisse, bechamel, mayonnaise, gingerbread and figs - all under different names of course. Likewise, Hellenistic cuisine was enriched by customs from far and wide -paper-thin filo pastry from Persia; rice, lemons and eggplants from India; and thick, strong coffee and skewered meats from the Turks.

Like all Mediterranean countries, Greece produces lovely wines, of which resina is the best-known. The Athenians, in an attempt to discourage the Persians from drinking their storehouses of wine, added pine resin to it.

The Persians were put off, but the results after aging were exceptional.

Favorite red wines are nemea, othello and pendeli. White wines include demestica, hymettus and the full-bodied robola. Ouzo, an anise-flavored acquired taste, is the Aegean's favored aperatif.

It is not coincidental that Dionysys is as often pictured eating grapes as drinking. It is the custom to qualf while eating an assortment of mezadakia (appetizers) like dolmadakia, marinated mushrooms, and little meat triangles called kreatopetes. For dyed-in-the-wool adventurers, try lamb brains marinated with oregano, or pickled squid.

With the rocky Greek countryside covered with goats and sheep, goat and sheep cheeses are central to many Greek dishes. Some, like feta, are readily available in this country, or can be found in Greek delicatessens. Zane suggests that Parmesan can stand in for kefalotyri, mozzarella for kasseri, and ricotta for mizithra. Manouri, from Crete, is more complicated to duplicate.

A wedge of hot bread, a slice of goat's milk cheesee and a local specialty like taramosalata (a fish roe puree) with cucumbers might make a meal with a glass of light wine.

DEMETER'S BOUNTY

Herbs such as mint, oregano, dill, rosemary and thyme are plentifully grown and used in the Aegean. Basil is held in special affection. The tender plants are cultivated with care and used in tomato or eggplant dishes.

Huddle up for tips on healthier tailgaters

probably love a good tailgate picnic. Whether you prefer professional or college football (or neither), the time before and after the game is perfect for joining together with family and friends to celebrate the fall

For many, a great tailgate picnic includes lots of socializing, sandwiches, drinks and a chance to toss around the football. This year, why not be a little more creative, and healthier, with the pregame picnics?

By-pass the chips and dip and start your tailgate with a tasty, nutritious appetizer. To celebrate National Seafood Month, serve crisp, fresh vegetables with Hot Crabmeat Dip.

Even though it's getting chilly outside, don't put away that barbecue - you'll want to use it for Mushroom-Turkey Kabobs. Kabobs are so easy to prepare and eat, especially at tailgates. Make them ahead of time and marinade at home. Once you get to the picnic, they'll be ready to throw on the grill.

Instead of pulling out the potato salad, laden with fat and calories, try serving upa

Even if you're not a football "junkle" you low-fat version of Macaroni Salad. Made sauce and paprika; stir thoroughly to with non-fat yogurt, this salad has only 2 grams of fat per serving.

A nice addition to any tailgate is bringing along a thermos filled with hot vegetable or chicken soup. The soup will not only fill you up, but help keep your hands warm, too! Happy tailgating, and may the best team win.

ATHENIAN SALAD

For many of humble means, a kettle of steamy soup provides the main sustenance.

The most common soup of Athenaeus' time was a thick lentil porridge, soupa faki. An egg-lemon blend flavors many traditional soups with chicken, ground lamb or celery. Greak salads are not just greens. Eggolant seasoned with onion and garlic, tomatoes criss-crossed with anchovy fillets, or even dandelion greens are some of the flavors. The arrangement of the vegetables is as important as their flavor, as in the Athenian Salad below. Always rub the wooden saiad bowl or platter with garlic first.

Use vegetables to stretch meat and fish portions with elegant dishes like domates yemistes (tomatoes stuffed with beef and zucchini) and moussaka (baked eggplant with lamb).

We require less protein anyway, according to new dietary recommendations, and these recipes make great meals-in-one.

OFF POSEIDON'S HARPOON In this country, we have to suffer along without some of Greece's most memorable fish like red mullet and

But halibut, striped bass and sea bass can be successfully substituted for Mediterranean fish in traditional recipes like psari plaki (fish baked with tomatoes). Zane includes some intriguing ways to prepare cod, one with spinach and garlic sauce and another with currants.

Each Greek island has its own specialty, like the garides souviakia (shrimp on skewers) below. Octopus, squid and eel are not uncommon.

PAN, KEEPER OF THE FLOCKS If Greek Cooking for the Gods is any indication, the eastern corner of the Mediterranean is not without exceptional meat preparation. The recipes range from the elementary "kid on a spit" to artichoke-stuffed chicken and meat sausages in wine sauce. They don't favor beef, which is difficult to sustain, or pork due to the high Muslim population. Meat most often means lamb.

Eggplant stars in dishes throughout the Mediterranean, but none surpasses the fame of Greek moussaka. Some food historians believe that this elaborately layered meat-andmaghmuma, a similar mixture of

PARENTS Without Partners, in honor of membership will be hosting an Open House Wednesday October 13, 1993, at the home of Susan Urbin, 414 E. Clinton, Howell, Mi. 7:30om. Parents Without Partners is an international organization for single parents. The Livingston County chapter meets the first and third Thursdays at Memories in Brighton, 7:30pm. There are approximately 80 members. The organization provides parent social activities, monthly discussion groups plus activities for the children. Regional conferences are held which also features professional speakers at many of the workshops. These self-help workshops are free and are open to the public.

We try to insure only single parents join by requiring a letter from a professional such as a physician, lawyer or dergyman.

'I'll Fly Away' comes full circle on PBS

By JOHN CROOK

A poignant drama series that many critics hailed as being "too good for network TV" returns. however briefly, starting this week. "I'll Fly Away: Then and Now," an original TV movie that ties up loose ends in the now-canceled series, airs Monday, Oct. 11, on many PBS affiliates. Beginning the following Monday, PBS will rebroadcast all 38 episodes that aired during the series' two seasons on NBC.

"I'll Fly Away" focused on two families in the mythical Deep South town of Bryland as the turbulent 1960s were dawning. Sam Waterston starred as small-town prosecutor Forrest Bedford. Regina Taylor played Lilly Harper, housekeeper and caregiver for his three children (Jeremy London, Ashlee Levitch and John Aaron Bennett). All principals were able to recreate their roles for the TV movie with the exception of London, who was replaced by his identical twin brother, Jason, due to a scheduling conflict.

"I'll Fly Away: Then and Now" opens in modern-day Atlanta, where Lilly, now in her 60s, is living comfortably. During a weekend visit from her 12-year-old grandson, a Californian fixated on rap music, she chafes at the boy's total lack of interest in their family's history.

Finally, Lilly firmly sits him down with a scrapbook and begins to relate her experiences in the civil rights movement to the reluctant boy. She describes the tragic murder case that forced her family to flee Bryland in 1962, and forever changed the lives of the Harper and Bedford families. At the conclusion of the film, Lilly returns to Bryland to learn the fate of her friends and former employers. This return visit is not only a sequel but a prequel to the series, setting the stage for the following 38 episodes.

The movie was shot on location in Georgia and directed by series executive producer Ian Sander. It also includes taped interviews with cast and crew members, who offer their views about the importance of the series, both historically and personally. More interviews will be featured at the end of selected episodes throughout the season.

Commenting on the series' impact, Waterston says, "I think it's great that this drama takes on the history of the civil rights movement. which is one of the thorniest issues that the United States has had to Waterston, Taylor and the series all were nominated for Emmys during both seasons of the show's NBC run. While they struck out both times, the two actors have won Golden Globes and American Television Awards for their work. and the show itself has received a battery of other awards, including the prestigious Humanitas Prize and a Television Critics Association Award.

"It was a great shame that the show didn't go on for two or three more years," says Waterston, because the story is so interesting and absorbing in its detail. It records historic acts by people who are completely unknown, and I don't think that there's anything more interesting than the evolution of a

Q: I have a $100 bet that says "The Wizard of Oz," starring Judy Garland, was filmed in color. My wife believes that it was later colorized. Who owes whom? -M. Nielsen, Portland, Ore.

A: Tell your wife to pay up. The Aug. 16, 1939, Variety review says, "Except for the opening and closing stretches of prologue and epilogue, which are visioned in a rich sepia, the greater portion of the film is in Technicolor. Some of the scenic passages are so beautiful in design and composition as to stir audiences by their sheer unfoldment."

Q: I'm a big fan of the Canadian sketch comedy show "The Kids in the Hall." Could you please tell me how the five actors on the show formed their comedy troupe? Where you help us? -C.B., Rome, N.Y. can I write to them? And is there an van, Kingston, Penn.

Fox warms up for World Series

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

While the 1993 World Series doesn't begin until Saturday, Oct. 16, on CBS, the party begins Friday, Oct. 15, on Fox, when Sharon Stone, Jerry Seinfeld and Dennis Miller gather for "Baseball Relief: An All-Star Comedy Salute." The special benefits Comic Relief's National Pediatric Care Program for Homeless Children.

The all-star lineup also includes Boyz II Men, Rita Rudner, Michael Richards, James Earl Jones, Garrett Morris, Marsha Warfield, Victoria Jackson and Father Guido Sarducci. Entertainment stars are joined by baseball's Mark Langston of the California Angels and Mike Piazza of the Los Angeles Dodgers. The program features a special tribute to baseball great Willie Mays.

Comic Relief receives proceeds from ticket sales to distribute funds to Health Care for the Homeless Projects in 23 American cities, Comic Relief events, including the annual HBO special, have raised over $20 million to provide health care and related services to more than half a million homeless people.

Throughout the years, baseball has inspired children to dream of hitting grand slams," says Bob Zmuda, president of Comic Relief. "With 'Baseball Relief,' we want to provide homeless kids with the health care they need to achieve their own dreams."

PBS takes an inside look at the international fashion industry in "The Look" on Monday.

Five-time Emmy winner Alan Alda (left) begins his new role as host of "Scientific American Frontiers" when the series returns for its fourth season on PBS. Wednesday, Oct. 13. Science enthusiast Alda will take a more active approach than past hosts, going on location with the production team and joining in on technological demonstrations. Here he visits with ex-Marine Eric Bellamy, a paralysis victim who is relearning how to walk with the aid of modern electronics. Also new this season is the series' thematic organization of its segments.

Barbara Crampton shines as new Mindy

BY CANDACE HAVENS

There is a trend this year with West Coast actresses moving to the East Coast to accept soap roles. Colleen Dion (Brett, "Another World") and Glynnis O'Connor (Margo, "As the World Turns") were among the first to make the move, and now Barbara Crampton has joined them as the new Mindy Lewis on "Guiding Light."

Crampton turned down the opportunity to take a screen test for the part last year when Kimberly Simms vacated the role. Ann Hamilton was cast in the role and life went on, until Crampton saw Jill Farren Phelps and told the executive producer she had changed her mind. Phelps told Crampton the role was hers, if she wanted it. No screen test, no audition goodbye Hamilton,

"I turned down the role because I didn't want to move to New York," says Crampton. "I don't know what I was thinking. Even though I was raised on the East Coast (Vermont), I had lived in Los Angeles for the last 10 years and had really gotten used to that laid-back way of life, I didn't think I would be happy in New York. Boy, was I wrong! I am so happy here, I don't care if I ever go back.'

Crampton has been accepted by critics and fans alike for her portrayal of Mindy, and that fact pleases the actress immensely. "The writers are making Mindy a stronger person," she says. "For the last 10 years the character has been kind of a spoiled brat. She came from a rich family and had a great deal of personal problems. Now she has her own successful design business and the confidence and maturity that goes along with that kind of responsibility."

The big question is will Nick (Vincent Izzary) and Mindy ever get back together? "Mindy has made a decision that Nick is her man. They have always had this thing together. I think the writers are going to put the charac-

Fans of "The Young and the Restless" may remember Crampton as the vivacious Leanna Love. The actress has also portrayed Trista Evans on "Days of Our Lives" and has starred in several feature films.
