Presidential hopeful visits Novi home

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Staff Writer

Novi was the scene of national politicking Nov. 10 as Presidential candidate Sen. John McCain visited Novi in support of Michigan House Republicans.

McCain, R-Ariz., was in Novi as the guest of honor at a fundraising reception for the state republicans at the Summit Drive home of ex-Novu Council Member Robert Schmid and Oakland County Commissioner Kay Schmid.

"Sen. McCain is frankly one of my favorite people," said Schmid. "We are looking forward to giving (Republican Presidential Candidate George W. Bush) a good race."

Guests at the reception paid $250 a person or $450 a couple to attend. Proceeds went to the House Republican Campaign Committee.

McCain said he came to the event to see if he could help out his fellow Republicans in their bids for office and raising funds for their campaigns.

He assured Novi voters he would be back in the area, adding Michigan was a very important state in the presidential primary.

In a speech at the reception, McCain joked with the crowd saying, "The good news is we have enough funding to fund the entire 2000 campaign at the state House. The bad news is most of that money is still in your wallets, purses and pockets."

He pointed out while the Republicans have a majority of the seats in the state house, the majority was held only by a small margin.

"There are going to be some very tough and close races. Your funding will help," McCain said to the crowd.

He stressed keeping the majority was not the only challenge the Republicans face. They, like the rest of the country, are facing a time when there was a "growing division between the haves and have-nots," a time when technology was making pornography easily assessable and a time when America was facing several world flare-ups.

"If we can meet those challenges, the next century will be the American century," McCain said.

McCain said he believed the Republican party had lost focus of who it serves due to soft money contributions from corporations to political campaigns.

"We have got to give the government back to the people," he said.

McCain also answered several questions from the audience, dealing with issues such as who he would select as a running mate and what he thought of the megamergers between communication companies.

He said it was too early to even think of a running mate.

As for mergers between communication companies, McCain said he was very worried about

City continues testing sewage at DPW facility

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Staff Writer

While Superintendent of the Novi Sewer and Water Department Bruce Jerome returns from a seven-day suspension, city officials are continuing environmental studies of the DPW land and planning for a clean-up.

Jerome was suspended without pay for seven days following the discovery that DPW employees pumped sewage onto the ground at the DPW yard near the intersection of Eleven Mile and Delwal roads on at least two occasions.

"A seven day suspension is a significant time. It amounts to over $1,000 in lost wages," said assistant city manager Craig Klaver.

"I think it is appropriate considering the nature of the incident."

Jerome was happy to be back on the job and said things are going to change around the DPW yard.

"I'm going to be a little more involved in the day-to-day operations. At least until I can establish a little confidence and trust," Jerome said.

As for the incident that led to his suspension, Jerome said he really didn't know what his foremen were thinking when they had the sewage dumped on the ground.

Jerome said he has a policy of not extracting anything from the sewer lines. Usually, if there is a blockage in a sewer line, DPW crews break it up with a hose and the sewage particles float down the line to a water treatment plant in Detroit.

"For the most part, that is our best policy," Jerome said. The process used to take sewage out of the line is too cumbersome, he added.

"We will only take it out in an emergency situation, unless someone overrules me," Jerome said.

If the situation ever comes up again where crews need to extract sewage from a sewer line, Jerome said they have to fill out a log sheet detailing what was taken out and what was done with it. Plus, all sewage materials must be taken to a treatment plant.

Currently, the DPW can take sewage to a treatment plant in Waterford. Jerome said the department is also working on a deal with a treatment plant in Walked Lake.

In the meantime, city officials

Deerfield closes in on 2000 opening

By B.J. HAMMERSTEIN

Innovation and education will be incorporated on many different levels during the 2000-2001 school year with the opening of Deerfield Elementary School.

Being constructed specifically around a specialized curriculum, Deerfield Elementary will be a school of choice/magnet school for children K-4 in the community.

"A school of choice is a school opened to all of the students within the school district's boundaries," said principal Richard Njus.

"A magnet school is when the school is following a defined program or curriculum. This comes at a time when we should all be looking for a change and what is best for our children."

At an approximate $11 million, the 87,000 square-foot learning facility is being constructed by AJ Edin Construction, after being designed by Fanning/Howey Associates, Inc.

Sean Griffin, superintendent of construction, said construction of the new school began in April of 1999 and will be ready for the first day of school next year.

With about 40 workers constructing the site, Griffin said the crew is toiling on many different projects but will make sure the roofing and concrete will be in before the winter freeze hits.

Aesthetically, Deerfield Elementary School will be attractive to students, parents and community members alike as structures as the windowed media center complete with a domed reading room and outside amphitheater are finished.

But it is the inner workings of the school which will be most talked about as the Novi Community School District will have their first multi-age educational facility.

Njus said the K-4 school will have four full-day kindergarten classes, and there will be eight classes with students from both the first and second grades and eight classes with students from

George Bush Jr.'s wife encourages students to read

By B.J. HAMMERSTEIN

Students, teachers and community members lined up in the hallways of Parkview Elementary School Tuesday as Texas First Lady Laura Bush stopped in for a visit.

Bush, hitting the campaign trail as her husband, Texas Gov. George W. Bush III is running for President of the United States, came to Parkview and learned about the school and read a story to Patti Ketelhut's second grade class.

"The most important thing is reading," Bush said to the students.

"It is a skill you need to learn because learning about other subjects requires reading."

Principal Joseph Imrick said having the Texas First Lady grace his school was something everybody was excited about.

"It is a great opportunity for us to show off our school," Imrick said.

"We are showing her things our students are doing and we will have the opportunity to show her how we are using technology — especially with our young children."

Bush's visit began with her being greeted by students who made signs showing her their appreciation of the visit.

Making her way through the school she was shown this year's Parkview Community Service Project by student Brian Smith. He explained to her the special 'theme' baskets which were donated to the Novi 'Clothes Closet' located in the Holy Family Church.

The next stop had her enter the school's media center where media specialist Janis Wagner and second grade teacher Andrea Czarniecki had students show Bush a slide presentation on computers about dinosaurs.

"It was real exciting," Czarniecki said. "The kids were excited to show

An eccentric businessman, a mysterious limousine ride, and a lobster named Chas have made operations at Steve and Rocky's restaurant a little interesting lately.

About to celebrate their second anniversary in January, partners Steve Allen and Chuck "Rocky" Rachwitz have been enjoying a successful run with their Novi business.

But it was about two months ago when Allen said the restaurant received a most interesting phone call that set this whole tale in motion.

According to Allen, a very-eccentric businessman, who wishes to remain unnamed, was referred to him from a different restaurant manager in the Cleveland area.

"He said he found a very large lobster for sale — to eat — and he purchased it and was trying to find it a home, where he wouldn't be eaten."

With a freshwater tropical fish tank already in place, Allen said he was interested in the lobster but didn't have the capabilities of storing it correctly as the lobster needs a to be submerged in a salt-water tank.

"He then countered by asking me what would it take to get a tank designed so you could store the lobster?" Allen said.

After informing the businessman that it would probably take more than $1,000 to construct the specialized tank, Allen said he was starting to feel skeptical about the project.

"He said he would pay for the costs of the tank — this is not a joke — and I just want you to take care of the lobster," Allen said.

Knowing he had to move on the interesting proposition of housing this large an old lobster, in just two weeks' time, the tank was designed and four days later was constructed and set up at the restaurant.

Residents come to council to protest another road bond

By JEREMY MCBAIN

City officials' struggles to get another road bond before voters were slowed somewhat Monday, when Novi City Council Member Michelle Bononi refused to let the issue be placed on the meeting's agenda.

Bononi wanted the issue left off of the agenda because she felt the public needed more notice that the issue was being brought up again.

According to city charter, anything placed on the agenda at a special meeting must have unanimous support of the council.

Some of the audience members at the meeting were ready to give their opinion on the matter.

"Please don't let a small number of people persuade you that we want another road bond. We vote against it in the last election," said Novi resident Joe Sutka.

"What angers me is I voted and I'm telling my kids your vote counts, then before I can get the words out of my mouth, we are having this issue again."

Novi voters voted down a $28 million road bond proposal on Nov. 2 by 3,867 votes against to 3,295 votes for it.

In a memo sent to city council, Novi City Manager Ed Kriewall said it might be a good idea to bring the road bond back during the February Presidential Primary to get matching funds needed for several planned road projects.

This new road bond would have considerably fewer projects and cost city taxpayers less, he said.

"Quite frankly, with the deletion of projects that seem to raise some community concern, we could probably be successful and turn this matter around in short order," Kriewall wrote.

Novi resident Toni Nagy disagreed, saying she felt it was a little too premature for another road bond because of its timing and because the city was still fighting a $53 million judgment awarded to a developer on the city's behalf.

She added the road bond voted down because it was full of projects that were not directly for the benefit of the residents and mostly for the benefit of developers.

"Take care of the resident's first and the businesses second," Nagy said.

Novi resident Dick Faulkner pointed out that while there were roads in Novi that needed attention, he did not see why it was necessary to present a project as big as the last road bond proposal.

Faulkner said it was too expensive for senior citizens on a fixed income to support.

"If you want a road bond to pass, you have to be realistic to (senior citizens) needs," he said.

The Novi City Council will discuss a new road bond at its 7:30 p.m. meeting Nov. 22 in the Novi City Council Chambers at the Novi Civic Center.

Teen arrested at mall with knife

A 17-year-old Oak Park boy was arrested around 7 p.m. Nov. 15 in Tenet's Oaks Mall after security officers found a knife in his pocket. Security officers were watching the boy as he was taking the escalators in front of J.C. Penney in the mall. While they were watching him, the boy lifted up his shirt to reveal a silver knife in his left front pants pocket.

Security officers confronted the boy as he was standing outside of Victoria's Secret and asked him to lift up his shirt.

The boy admitted to carrying the knife and gave it to the security officers.

The boy said he was carrying the knife for protection.

He was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon.

LAKEVIEW BARTENDER BUST-

A 36-year-old Bloomfield Hills woman was issued a citation for furnishing alcohol to a minor around 6 p.m. Nov. 10 while bartending at Lakeview Bar and Grill on Old Novato Road.

The bust was part of an undercover alcohol sting conducted by the Novi Police Department.

A decoy, a 19-year-old girl, was sent into the bar by an officer working the sting.

While the officer was watching, the girl sat on a barstool at the bar. The bartender approached her and asked her if she needed anything.

The decoy said, "Can I get a Bud Light, please?"

The bartender replied, "Sure," uncapped a beer bottle for the girl and handed it to her.

The bartender did not ask the girl for identification or her age.

The decoy handed the bartender money for the beer and the bartender gave her change.

At this point, the officer came into the bar and identified himself. He informed the bartender of the illegal nature of the incident.

The bartender admitted to selling the girl the beer and expressed disbelief that the decoy was only 16 years old.

The officer issued a citation to the bartender and has submitted a liquor violation report to the Liquor Control Commission.

HAM I HOME?

A 31-year-old Walled Lake man was arrested for drunk driving around 1:30 a.m. Nov. 8 when officers found him slumped over the passenger seat of his car in the parking lot of Big Boy restaurant on Novi Road.

Earlier, an officer on patrol observed the man's vehicle fail to signal as it turned into the parking lot of the restaurant. While the officer watched, the vehicle pulled into a parking space behind the restaurant and the driver turned off its lights.

The officer followed the vehicle into the parking lot and watched it for some time.

Food assistance

Oakland Livingston Human Services Agency will be distributing free food through the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program in Oakland County during the month of December.

All people that are income-eligible and not registered may do so at the site by bringing social security cards for all household members, verification of household income and photo identification.

In Novi, the local distribution place is the Novi Senior Center at 45175 West Ten Mile Road.

Distribution will be done on Dec. 14 from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. For income eligibility requirements or additional information, call Trudy Long at OLHSA's Community and Family Services Department at (248) 209-2655 or (800) 482-9250.

Main Street Holiday Walk

It's this time of season and Main Street Novi is kicking off the holiday spirit this year with its Fourth Annual Main Street Holiday Walk.

Beginning at 6 p.m. on Nov. 23, the two-hour holiday parade will begin on Market Street next to BD's Mongolian Barbecue. The procession will continue to Main Street and Novi Road where a greeting from the mayor, the lighting of the holiday trees and a special visit from a jolly man in a red suit will be made.

The walk will then return up Main Street to the indoor atrium area of Main Street where there will be music, featuring the Novi High School Marching Band, food and tons of holiday spirit.

Sponsored by the merchants of Main Street, parking for the event will be behind Main Street, just north of BD's Mongolian Barbecue or the lot behind Red Hot & Blue off of Trans X Drive.

Please bring a can or box food donation for the Food Bank of Oakland County.

Anyone with information about the above incidents is urged to call the Novi Police at (248) 349-7100.

Police set for game with Lions

By JEREMY MCBAIN Staff Writer

Tickets are on sale now for the yearly basketball showdown between the Novi Police Officers Association and the Detroit Lions Feb. 17 at the Novi High School gym.

Novi Police Officer Diane MacGregor said the police union has hired a telemarketing firm to call Novi residents and businesses. During these calls, residents can buy tickets to the game and a bumper sticker that states, "I support the Novi Police." Businesses can buy tickets and an advertisement in a program being given out at the game.

MacGregor said the police union plans on giving all of the money it raises from this event back to the community.

"If it is a worthy cause, we will donate to it," she said. In past years, money raised from the game has been used to fund a police scholarship for Novi High School students, the Novi Halloween Party and to fund various parks and recreation department youth sports teams.

"And we always send money to any fallen officer's family," MacGregor added.

She also said some of the money has been used in the past for political means, such as newspaper advertisements supporting a political candidate. However, the union rules state only up to $1,000 can be used for this, MacGregor said.

Tickets for this year's game are $20 a piece, $30 for a couple or $60 for a family of six.

Last year's game raised about $13,000 for the police union.

MacGregor said she does not know which members of the Lions team will be at the game yet. Regardless of who shows up, she said the event is a lot of fun for the spectators and players.

The Lions' players usually go into the audience and pick children to shoot their free throws for them, MacGregor said. The players will also sign autographs during half-time.

"Everyone seems to really enjoy themselves. Besides — (the police) are not the best basketball players. Everyone can laugh at them," MacGregor joked.

While tickets are being sold through the telemarketing company, those not wishing to wait for the phone-call can contact the "box office" by calling (248) 347-3430.

If anyone has any questions or comments about the event, they can contact MacGregor or Novi Det. John Nelson at (248) 349-1700.

- More than a decade before the Pilgrims landed, a group of British settlers, led by Captain John Smith, established a colony in America. What was the name of the community they created?
- In what city was the first NFL Thanksgiving Day football game played?
- What is the capital of the country that celebrated its Thanksgiving Day this year on the same date that Americans celebrated Columbus Day?

DOWN

- In what city could you visit the rock where Pilgrims from the Mayflower are said to have first set foot in the New World?
- If you're calling Grandma long distance on Thanksgiving Day and must dial area code 312, in what major city does Grandma live?
- The country of Turkey is situated on two continents. On which continent is the eastern part of the country located?
- In 1969, three American astronauts journeyed to a New World in a trip that was even more perilous than that of the Pilgrims. What is the name of the celestial "sea" where two of these astronauts landed?
- What Great Lakes state has a community named Turkey that might be likely to stuff its turkeys with buckeyes rather than chestnuts?

a self-described wildlife photographer and nature lover.

"It seems this hasn't been about facts, it's about politics and money," he said. "The three hunting organizations on the Wildlife Advisory Committee (the HCMA appointed panel that studied the alternatives and recommended the herd management plan) are from the (Department of Natural Resources') Hunting and Fishing Task Force. This Task Force has a stated objective to, 'Where possible, expand opportunities to hunt and fish in urban parks and recreation areas.' And further on says, 'take any actions necessary to bring about the completion of this vital mission.' It seems that what this is really about is the HCMA playing ball with the DNR so that it can continue to receive financial favors from the DNR."

One grant referenced by Parnell was actually turned down by the DNR, but HCMA Chief Planner Dan Duncan confirmed the authority has indeed received two grants from the DNR this year — one for a playground and lake access site, the other for development of a picnic area. Neither were related to hunting. In fact Duncan, who handles grant application writing for the HCMA, said that the DNR has never asked or pressured the metropark authority to open its lands to hunting in return for grant money.

Livonia resident Norman Owens, a member of the Metropark Deer Preservation Council, said she believes the presence of three hunting organizations on the advisory committee constitutes a conflict of interest. Those organizations — the DNR, the Michigan United Conservation Clubs and the Michigan Bowhunters Association — also had representation on the Hunting and Fishing Task Force, a panel appointed by Gov. John Engler to promote hunting activity in Michigan. Owens asked that the makeup of the advisory committee be revised.

Northville resident Judy Brock, also a member of that council, explained her group did not intend to accuse any member of the HCMA board of anything inappropriate. She explained that when council members found an Internet website containing the recommendations of the task force and that they included expanding hunting into "urban parks," they believed there was a "hidden agenda" among those three hunting groups. And she contended those groups could stand to benefit financially from the promotion of hunting.

Carol Halstead, of Hartland, told the HCMA board that "Non-lethal methods should be given a chance. As overusers of our metroparks, our decisions-makers should be protecting the parks resources ... you should also be ways of hidden agendas."

"Your criticisms are fine," HCMA chairman William Kreger said in response, "until you start making out that we are cutting deals with the DNR. There is no proof of anything like that. I object to the innuendo that there has been some underhanded dealing. I love the deer and I couldn't shoot one myself, but if we are guilty of anything, it is that we waited too long."

Denise Mogos, Public Relations for HCMA, noted that the committee membership also included representatives of the Michigan Humane Society, Audubon Society, Natural Areas Council, Botanical Society and Botanical Club. Several of the members were wildlife biologists.

"There were meetings in which the Humane Society said, 'We can't go along with the killing of deer. There were meetings where the hunters said, 'Our members won't go along with bringing in a sharp shooter. Everyone was an equal footing. I don't remember any meetings where anyone said, 'Gee, we got everything we wanted,' Mogos said.

State senators debate school inspections

By MIKE MALOTT
 HomeTown News Service
 mmalott@homecomm.net

All new buildings in Michigan are inspected for structural integrity when they are constructed — all buildings except schools.

And according to state senators, they haven't been since about 1978.

Wall collapses in two Michigan school districts have brought the issue to the forefront in the state legislature — one at a middle school in Woodhaven in 1990 and another at a high school in Flushing in 1998. No one was hurt in the collapse at the 70s-era Woodhaven school, but repairs cost some $6 million, according to Joe O'Reilly, legislative aide to Sen. Christopher Dingell, D-Trenton. Four workers died, however, in the collapse at the Flushing high school, where the wall was part of an auditorium under construction at the time.

Both incidents have been attributed to improper design and construction, and senators believe inspections would have caught the problems early.

Senators now aim to address the oversight. Republicans and Democrats alike, but there are disagreements over the best way to accomplish that goal. Those differences led to heated votes recently.

Senate Republicans are endangering the lives of school children across Michigan by repeatedly refusing to include schools in the state construction code. By not mandating the inspection of school buildings ... by inspectors trained to look for structural integrity, we run the risk of putting our children in dangerous buildings like the one in Woodhaven," Dingell said.

His comments came after senators rejected a revision to the state construction code, Senate Bill 463, sponsored by Sen. Leon Sille, R-Spring Lake, and co-sponsored by Sen. Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, and Dianne Byrum, D-Onondaga. The state code is enforced by building officials in local municipalities. The bill had been amended in the House to eliminate exemptions to the code, and therefore local inspections, for school buildings.

According to O'Reilly, the reason for the rejection was that Senate Republicans would prefer another bill sponsored by Sen. Mike Rogers, R-Howell. Senate Bill 805 would require that all new schools be inspected by the state Bureau of Construction Codes, but it would allow school districts to opt for inspections by local municipal building officials instead.

The difference between the two bills is not just politics, Rogers Press Secretary Sylvia Warner assured. Taking the exemption for schools out of the state construction code might have some unintended consequences, she warned. Rogers' bill, on the other hand, adds inspections in education law, resulting in the "cleanest public policy," easiest for school boards to understand and follow, Warner explained.

Rogers' bill, SB 805, has received one hearing in committee, she said. Members asked for additional research before voting, so she predicted the bill would not reach the full Senate for a vote until early 2000.

According to O'Reilly, the delay to Rogers' bill is over the question of whether inspections should be conducted now for those schools which have been built in the past few years.

SB 463, by Sen. Sille, was once approved by senators, and won approval in the House. But representatives amended the bill to end the exemption for schools, causing senators to reject the measure. The bill is now headed to conference committee. Action on that bill may also be delayed until after the start of the new year.

When all is done, O'Reilly said the goal is to get schools inspected. In 1978, the entire job was turned over to the Office of Fire Safety under the State Fire Marshal.

The oversight that led to the lack of construction inspections has a long history, according to O'Reilly. It dates back to the 1920s and '30s. At the time, he contended, school buildings were often the largest and most complicated building projects in many communities. Municipal building inspectors often did not have the expertise at the time to review construction for buildings of that size. Additionally, there were problems with animosities between school districts and the municipalities in which they were located — which is still an issue in school construction — as well as problems with sweetheart contracts and out-and-out bribery.

"The one person considered to be above reproach was the state Superintendent of Public Education," O'Reilly said, so the job of inspecting school buildings was turned over to him. But state superintendents also did not have expertise in construction standards, so they increasingly relied on contracts with outside offices to conduct the actual on-site reviews.

In 1978, the entire job was turned over to the Office of Fire Safety under the State Fire Marshal.

"The number one safety issue for schools is fire safety, don't get me wrong," O'Reilly said, "and the Office of Fire Safety does an excellent job." But inspectors there also are not trained to review structural integrity, he said.

New school buildings have long been a source of disagreement between municipalities and local districts. Schools have for years been outside the control of zoning authorities within local governments, so while city councils and township boards are able to control the placement of all other buildings in their communities,

New library may go behind high school, old building used for more city offices

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Staff Writer

Officials are still studying plans to build a new Novi Library on Taft Road behind Novi High School.

According to library director Brenda Evans, a letter of understanding between the library and the City of Novi states the library will study this city-owned land as a location for a new building while the city is to study the current library building as the location of more office space. If both entities decide they can use the locations, the library and city will make a trade.

"It is basically a structured exploration," Evans said.

As part of the procedure, the library had an environmental assessment conducted on the city land recently which came back clear. A commercial appraisal is currently being done on the land and the current library building, Evans said.

The results of the commercial appraisal have not been tallied yet.

Officials are looking at building a new library because the current library is getting too small. Evans said a study was conducted to determine the cost of renovating the current library building to meet space needs and it was determined it would be more cost effective to just build a new building.

As part of the agreement between the library and city, Novi officials are supposed to study the current library building to determine if it could be used for some city offices.

Novi City Manager Ed Kriewall said not much has happened on the city's side since this agreement was put into place.

"We are familiar with the library and its potential. It used to be city hall," Kriewall said.

Kriewall said he was sure at least half of the building could be used as office space for the parks and recreation department.

Just putting the one department in the building current housing the library would free up a lot of space in the Novi Civic Center that is currently being used for city offices, he said.

"We are getting jammed up here," Kriewall said.

Kriewall said if the library were to decide it wanted the city land to build a new library in exchange for the current library building, the city would take that offer.

They're diggin' school

Students play archaeologists at Village Oaks

By B.J. HAMMERSTEIN

Archaeologists, buried treasures and the Holy Grail were all part of the Village Oaks Elementary School's "Digging for the Past" project.

Exchanging textbooks for shovels and the classroom for the great outdoors, Village Oaks fourth grade students participated in an actual archaeological dig in their own courtyard.

As part of their science and social studies units on fossils, rocks and Michigan, the students needed dirt dig sites and filled them with authentic objects with a Wolverine State flavor.

"The activity takes elements of science, social studies and writing," said enrichment teacher Jane Furlong.

"This is a way to cover all learning disciplines with one big activity."

To make the dig as real as possible, Furlong said the young archaeologists used sifting screens, brushes, shovels and trowels to excavate the objects buried by other classmates.

The exercise began with fourth grade teachers Lynn Crawford, Barb

Coxen, Tom Guidette and Shirley Snyder asking students to bring at least one item to school and bury them in a designated spot in the courtyard.

After the objects were buried, the students switched sites and dug up the materials. The other classes buried deep into the Earth.

"Students are finding out what it is like to be an archaeologist," said Karen Capayoka, a substitute for Crawford's class.

"The kids are looking for many different objects but more importantly they are using their writing skills to record the information."

After a student excavated an object, the activity required the archaeologist to tag it by writing down their name, the date, a description of the artifact and which site number it was excavated from.

"It is a lot of fun to be an archaeologist," said Lia Bardura, 9.

"We buried some things and we're digging up other stuff. We are also getting dirty and learning a lot about rocks and minerals."

With a rock chart to help the students identify what they found, the young archaeologists began to learn the differences between minerals and igneous, sedimentary and metamorphic rocks.

The teachers asked the students to bring something they can bury representative of life in Michigan from the past or the present.

Looking for objects including an arrowhead, a Michigan food item or label, cleaned and sterilized bones, collected fossils and a replica of a historical document or a newspaper article, creativity was stressed when choosing which objects to be buried.

Ten-year-old Andrew Traylor dug up a hockey puck essential as a Detroit Red Wing hockey puck was excavated from the site.

"I am probably going to play hockey with it," Traylor said.

Beginning Nov. 1, the project was scheduled to take three to four weeks to complete with kids participating in the dig during the children's classroom enrichment time.

With ancient artifacts as an old camera, pottery and candle holders excavated, the young archaeologists learned about culture, science and dirt during the activity.

"I like getting dirty," said fourth grader Paul Cunningham.

"I like taking and finding all of this cool stuff after we dig it up."

Applicants to be interviewed in December

By JEREMY MCBAIN

Staff Writer

Novi city council members were presented with a time frame for the city manager search Monday as they discussed how they were going to go about the process.

Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver proposed council begin interviewing applicants for the position around Dec. 18. Second interviews would be scheduled for Jan. 11 or Jan. 18 and a new manager selected before Feb. 11.

The application period for the city manager position began Oct. 11 and will continue until Nov. 30. Klaver said because the position for advertised as "open until filled," the council could consider applicants sent after Nov. 30.

The date was chosen just because Klaver felt council would have enough applications to start the process at this time.

While council members said they would start to mull over what type of city manager they want, Mayor Richard Clark invited the public to take part in the process.

Clark said anyone who has any questions about the council's search for a new city manager or anyone who would like to share their thoughts on what would make a good city manager was invited to call Novi Human Resource specialist, Tina Gronlund-Fox, at (248) 347-0445 with their comments or questions.

In the meantime, three more people have announced their candidacy as Novi city manager last week, bringing the total number of qualified candidates up to 20.

The latest applicants are: Ellis Mitchell of San Jose, Calif.; Anthony Morillaro of Blaine, Wash.; Bill Richards, Jr. of Northville.

Mitchell is currently the assistant to the city manager of Oakland, Calif. Before taking this position, he was the executive director for the Community Services Association of California and Nevada.

Morillaro is currently the city manager of Blaine, Wash. Before taking this position, he was the consulting manager of Northglenn, Colo.

Richards is currently the assistant city manager of Farmington. Before taking this position, he was the township manager of Northville Township.

Mill Race hosts events

Northville Historical Society vice president Melody Arndt said all the buildings in Northville's Mill Race will be open from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and will be decorated both inside and out. The Cady Inn, Hunter House and Yerkes House will have special decorations put in place, she said.

Events will be available in each of the buildings for interpretation and education on the history of the community, she said.

On top of that, several area choir groups will be on hand singing holiday tunes in the Mill Race church.

Various craft and tradespeople will also be in Mill Race demonstrating skills and talents of the past, Arndt said. The event will be capped by refreshments and a holiday boutique sale in Cady Inn.

Arndt said the event is free and open to the public.

Novi chiropractor helps runners "adjust" after race

By B.J. HAMMERSTEIN

Staff Writer

Novi chiropractor Karl Tarkanyi had a busy day recently.

Tarkanyi, along with three other Michigan chiropractors, donated their services last month at the Tiger Stadium finish line of the Detroit Free Press/Flagstar Bank International Marathon.

Set up directly on the field, Tarkanyi said he and the other chiropractors helped adjust between 30 and 50 runners at the completion of the marathon.

"By training and running a 26-mile marathon, there is a lot of mechanical stress that goes through the body," Tarkanyi said.

The free adjustments were good exposure for chiropractors and allowed the runners a chance to recover.

Besides competing in the Old Navy 5K Fun Run/Walk and helping marathon runners with back adjustments, Tarkanyi said a chance to be on the field of Tiger Stadium was a dream come true.

"Tiger Stadium is very important to me and my father," he said.

"The two of us had the opportunity to go to the last game, but to be on the field was something else."

Donated through the Michigan Chiropractic Council, the doctors' services were especially useful due to the weather conditions.

"Runners sometimes have problems with the cold weather," Tarkanyi said.

"We had three tables set up on the course level."

"There were food vendors, massage therapists and other things set up on the field. It was a fantastic day."

Tarkanyi has had his practice in Novi for about four years at the KET Chiropractic Center at 22120 Novi Road.

Sewage sample undergoes more MDEQ testing

Lake Erie, and the MDEQ has not yet received the results of the testing. The MDEQ is currently testing the sample that was taken from the creek. The MDEQ is currently testing the sample that was taken from the creek. The MDEQ is currently testing the sample that was taken from the creek.

Environmental Engineer for Farmington said he has finished the water portion of his tests, which have indicated water in the area is not contaminated.

"The water does not appear to be contaminated through any type of leaching," Farmington said. "There was some contamination on the surface of the ground where the discharge was, but that was cleaned up quickly."

Farmington took his first sample from Bishop Creek where it passes under DeWitt Road. This sample gave a coliform level of 2,700 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water and an E. coli level less than 10 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water.

His next water sample was in Bishop Creek about 100 feet from the base of a "spoil pile" of construction debris where sewage was dumped in late October. This sample showed a coliform level of 4,700 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water and an E. coli level of 125 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water.

This area of the creek was narrow and full of decaying plant matter, Farmington added.

His last sample for this test was about 100 feet away in Bishop Creek towards DeWitt Road from his second sample. This sample had a coliform level of 5,200 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water and an E. coli level of 20 CFU's per 100 milliliters of water.

What this test was showing was the E. coli levels going up as the creek narrowed and rising as the creek widened, Farmington said. Because the section of the creek was full of decaying plant matter, the test indicated the E. coli in the sewage at Bishop Creek was caused by the decaying plant matter and not the sewage dumping, he said.

Farmington said other environmental tests are planned for the site and will be done in the near future. He also said the amount of construction debris that litters the DPW yard.

These tests will be done by Farmington and an independent environmental firm.

Farmington has even contacted Michigan Department of Environmental Quality official Brett Wisely and scheduled for him to visit the site today.

From his telephone discussions with Wisely, Farmington said the MDEQ officials indicated his principle concern over the disposal was the transmission of bacteria from the site to other areas of the city by small animals and insects.

Farmington said all of the results he has obtained from his testing and the results from the independent tests will be given to the MDEQ.

Even with all of this testing taking place and indications that the area is free of contamination, Farmington said he has recommended that at least the top foot of soil where the sewage was disposed be removed and taken to a landfill along with the debris in the DPW yard.

He has even contacted the state-approved landfill, Browne-Ferris Industries of Salem Township to come and clean up the site.

Director of Public Services Anthony Novicki said a date for the clean up has not been scheduled yet and still required some paperwork to be completed.

White House hopeful McCain stops in Novi for GOP fundraiser these, because they seemed to be creating monopolies in an area that already has very little competition.

In further explanation, why McCain was in Novi, Victor Cassis, husband of State Representative Nancy Cassis, said he and his wife were looking for a fund raising type of event for the House Republicans to coincide with McCain's visit.

Nancy Cassis was planning on having the event at the couple's Novi home until they came to visit their friends, the Schmidts.

"I saw the lovely room in the Schmidts' home and mentioned it would be a nice place for the reception," Victor Cassis said.

Schmidt said she was excited to be a part of the event.

"As soon as Nancy and Victor asked me I thought, (McCain) could be president," she said. "I'm excited and pleased they wanted to do it here and I am flattered."

Joining the Cassises and Schmidts for the evening reception with McCain was a host of Republican supporters from throughout the area and all aspects of state government, including Novi Mayor Richard Clark.

"I think this is fantastic," Clark said at the reception. "The city should consider itself honored."

He added, "I think (the reception) gives Novi some national exposure. It gives us some positive press coverage for a change. It also allows one of our national leaders to come to our city and find out what we are about and where we are at."

Clark and Victor praised McCain as one of the last true American heroes and he was proud to be at the reception to honor the man.

"(McCain) embodies all what makes America great. We have a presidential candidate that speaks of those same values we cherish," Victor said.

"We will always remember this day in Novi."

Giant lobster finds home at Novi eatery

Transported via limousine, the lobster in much the same manner of a Mafioso, was dropped off at the back door of Steve and Rocky's. Allen said the elegant ride took its toll on the lobster as it was in very bad shape and close to death on arrival.

"We spent six hours on Saturday trying to resuscitate it but the lobster had a very tumultuous experience," Allen said. "That evening the lobster seemed to be getting better but it ended up dying."

But the quest to provide Steve and Rocky's with a lobster for a pet has a happy ending.

Allen said he began pricing other lobsters out and learned a lobster of that size would cost about $150. That is when the eccentric businessman delivered an even bigger lobster to Steve and Rocky's.

Named after the anonymous businessman's father, Chas can be seen in his tank located in the bar area of Steve and Rocky's.

Weighing in at about 14.5 pounds, Chas, 65, is larger and healthier than the original lobster and should be swimming the good life.

"We do have lobster to eat — but not this one," Allen said. "This one is just a pet."

Allen said lobsters can live beyond 100 years and during the first seven years of a lobster's life it will grow to one pound and in each year after the lobster should grow about 4 ounces.

"I wish the first Chas would've made it," Allen said. "But we have the new Chas now and the guests really appreciate it."

Included in the multi-age learning houses will be thematic instruction and projects, common curriculum themes and a language rich environment dedicated to learning Spanish.

"With parents and community members staying involved, we are going to bring the concept of the multi-age learning to a whole new level," Njus said.

"With multi-age learning the competitive nature between students of different ages will be destroyed while emphasizing the whole concept of learning and having the child learn at their own pace."

"Learning isn't going to be just for the students but the teachers, too."

Njus said many times teachers will work with each other as the classes have movable walls which will open and emphasize the learning concept.

Continual teaching is another area Njus has studied and believes will work well in Novi.

Each student is going to stay with a teacher for two years," he said.

"With classes split into two grades, at the end of the year the second graders will move on and the first graders will stay with the same teacher. Then the kindergartners who are now first graders move in and take their place — where they will be with that teacher for two years."

With the instructional programs emphasizing interactive learning and the consistent use of interactive media and technology, many people worked hard at determining what would be the best use for the newest school in the district.

Cathy Reilly, Parkview Elementary School parent teacher organization president, said the vision of Deerfield Elementary school was developed by a cadre of teachers, administrators and who researched the latest educational tools and most effective practices in determining what Deerfield should be.

"The intention is to take the best ideas of current teachers and learn from their own past," Njus said. "We're going to put it together in one school," said Katie Rauen, a member of the Innovative Elementary School Planning Cadre.

"The idea is for any student, not just gifted students, can come here and flourish in this learning environment."

Njus said currently the school district is conducting informational meetings about the curriculum and how to enroll students in the school.

Built to house 500 K-4 students, Njus said at this time the school is accepting "interest forms," and if there is too many students who want to attend Deerfield, a lottery will be held. Kindergarten registration will begin for the school in April 2000.

With a new school comes an opportunity for more teachers and Njus said at the end of January there will be postings for positions available and is hoping to keep the staff in-district.

With community, climate, curriculum and character the essentials to Deerfield's vision, Njus said it was an exciting time for him as an educator and the community.

"A lot of what we are going to do is try to articulate exactly where each child is on each level," he said.

"Let's not label but take what we know from their learning environment, assess those skills and help them move on to the next level."

"The possibilities are tremendous."

As We See It

City's latest road bond issue may be too much, too soon

If at first you don't succeed, try again. That seems to be what Novi city officials were saying as they looked at the November voting results of the failed Novi Road Bond. Not wanting to let some of the projects proposed in the $28.5 million bond fail due to lack of funding, city officials have decided to try and get City Council approval for another road bond in February.

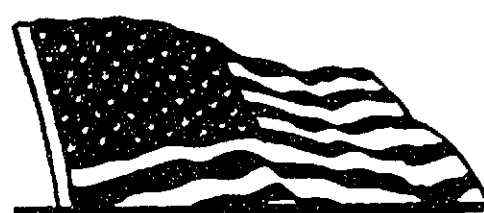

We understand funding for some of the important projects is needed — and perhaps very soon — we think February may be way too early for another road bond vote.

While voting was close, Novi residents did not like the last proposal. Many said they felt the proposal was too "heavy" with developer bonding projects and others did not like the thought of another tax while the city has a $53 million lawsuit hanging overhead.

Time is needed to study all of the changes, costs, funding and implications of every project included in a new bond. And time is needed for the Novi City Council to further review these changes through discussion and debate.

Even get this proposal on the ballot in time for February election, all the prep work needs to be done by Nov. 30. That leaves simply too little time for the city to come up with a new proposal that the residents of Novi will approve.

By speeding up this process in order to meet such a date, city officials and council members are just setting up another proposal for defeat.

This shows if the city really wants to get a road bond to pass, the old proposal must undergo a lot of work — work which will take more time than the council is apparently willing to spend.

In our opinion, the new proposal should be void of any project that would not directly benefit residents.

Projects proposed in the last road bond, such as the creation of a Ring Road and the widening of Twelve Mile Road should be axed from any new proposal.

Plus, the new proposal should keep in mind the residents' concerns about the $53 million lawsuit. This means the new proposal should cost residents a lot less than the $28.5 million proposed in the last bond.

If the city is intent on fixing the roads, then it's incumbent upon city leadership to take the time necessary to develop a bond issue worth voting for.

More random thoughts...

More random thoughts and observations on life...

• So here I am, once again in that "interim editor" mode, this time filling in for Jan Jeffrey for a few weeks. Suffice it to say I've got a new appreciation for the amount of work that goes into being the top dog in a newspaper office. Both Jan and managing editor Bob Jackson work very hard at their jobs, which is why it means a lot to them to hear a kind word about something in the Novi News and Northville Record every now and then.

• It's nice to hear that CSX Transportation will be fixing up the Grand River / Novi road grade crossing. While they're at it, any chance they could attend to the crossing near Ten Mile and Novi? Going westbound on Ten Mile at 45 mph will get you a first-class ticket to your character.

• Today is the second anniversary of my joining the Novi News staff. Interesting footnote: when I signed on with the Novi News 730 days ago, it wasn't the first time my name and face had graced the paper. Some photo of me and my brother, circa ages eight and five, respectively, was taken around 1981 at the Novi Library. A year or so later, I was in as a member of the original "Family of the Year" at the library, and then got my first byline in the newspaper while a student of Joan Carmichael's Novi High School journalism class. Just some trivia for you.

• Now that we're off daylight savings time and the sun sets so much earlier, is anyone finding that it seems like 10 p.m. when it may only be 7 p.m.?

In Focus

By John Heider

Mr. Future President?

Helping youth is a two-way payoff

John Heider

He'll be the first, if asked, to set things straight: "You didn't pick me, I picked you," or so says 13-year-old Mike Howell.

The picking (or choice) came about as Northville Youth Assistance looked to bring mentors (like me) and kids (like Mike) together. Mike "picked" me because unlike other male mentors, I hadn't listed sports as one of my top interests. Mike finds sports as exciting as long as he doesn't.

Mike was referred to the program because, like many kids, it seemed best for him to be helped by one more adult in his life to give him help if he wanted it. As I understood it, he wasn't in any major-league trouble and though I tried to get him to admit he'd gotten in some trouble with the police in Tijuana, Mexico when he was 11, he wouldn't.

Mike's typical for his age: likes a couple of classes in school, is bored to tears by others, likes to spend time with his parents, kicks butt in video games, likes the movie "Titanic" and hanging out with his friends. Jokes his new dog is beginning to see that girls can be "cool" and can eat a lot, I mean a lot, of really "bad" food.

I got involved with NYA after being in the community for a couple of years because I wanted to help in what I saw as a very worthwhile endeavor. When I worked at the Ypsi Press, I got involved with nearby St. Joseph Hospital's "Growing Tree," a play-therapy program for kids whose parents were going through chemical dependency withdrawal.

There, I would occasionally see that a child understood what they were going through wasn't "normal" and they had a right to simply be a kid.

I was important for me, there, as it is here, to be more than just a worker or resident in the community. I felt it important to help in a community that I enjoyed being a part of.

My role in our two-hour-a-week relationship is to be on time, dependable, responsible, keep what we talk about confidential (so I can't tell you about the time that he, uh, well... I can't say anything about the time that he and I, well, um — you get the idea. In addition, I have to be the designated adult.

Of course, that's easier said than done. When Mike and I get together, there's not a lot of ponderous stuff to talk about. Sometimes we'll get to some pretty amazing, wide-ranging topics impacting the life of the typical teenager. Usually we're just goofing off.

And I must say, it's a lot of fun. Mike and I will head off to one of the area's play structures and see who can knock who off the balance beam, or he'll make the mistake of challenging me to a foot race. We've gone fly-fishing, kayaking, we've cruised the Internet, seen an "Austin Powers" movie, ice-cream is eaten.

Two months ago we attended a "Tigers" game where Mike had a girl pronounce that she "liked" him and proceeded to sit next to him the last half of the game, wrangling a kiss out of him at the end. All the while Mike endured the obnoxious amorous encouragements of some well-lubed frat boy types (sitting behind us and seeing the blossoming love) to "go for it, dude." As I dropped him off at 11 p.m. that night, Mike exited the car saying, "Thanks a lot, John, that kicked a..."

Yes it did, Mike. Yes it did.

Mixed reviews in state economic report

Phil Power

One of the best things John Engler has done as governor is to have attracted Doug Rothwell to Michigan from Delaware in 1993.

Initially Director of the Michigan Jobs Commission, an agency that consolidated the various job training programs into one coherent administrative unit, the slim and intense Rothwell has won praise for his intelligence, foresight and willingness to take risks by doing new things.

He moved over to run the Michigan Economic Development Corporation, a public corporation set up outside the stifling state bureaucracy structure to oversee the state's job and business attraction and retention programs. He got a hefty raise by moving outside civil service pay restrictions, but that's OK. You get what you pay for, and Rothwell's the real deal.

The MEDC has just issued a report on Michigan's economy, "Strategic Directions for Michigan's Future." It makes fascinating reading.

In the decades following the Great Depression, Michigan's auto-led economy flourished, leading the nation in automation, production and technological progress. Our economy stalled in the '70s and '80s, when the auto industry was being pummeled by foreign competition and unemployment skyrocketed. But good times in the 1990s led to surging auto industry and a rapidly growing service sector.

The MEDC report points out that Michigan began to "benchmark" against other industrial states such as Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin in the early '90s. In many ways, Michigan has improved its ranking against these competitors in recent years.

Current success in automobiles, however, has led to new goals. The MEDC report suggests Michigan should now concentrate on growth over the next decade in areas where the state has a comparative advantage against other states: advanced manufacturing, information technologies and life sciences.

And the report proposes a new set of "benchmark" states, including California, Washington, Virginia and Massachusetts. When ranked against our new competitors, Michigan doesn't look so good.

For example, while Michigan's workforce productivity ranks third when compared with our old competitors, it comes in dead last against the new set. While Michigan is technologically advanced compared to its old competitors, our state is last among our new competitors in percentage of households with Internet access.

Worse is our standing in venture capital, arguably the main growth engine for new, high tech companies. Among new competitors, Michigan ranks dead last in the dollars available for venture capital financing. The dollar gap is considerable: Michigan, with $2.4 million available for venture financing in the first quarter of 1999, is far behind Virginia, with nearly $60 million available to entrepreneurs.

Moreover, Michigan has a poor image among business leaders. A focus group quoted in the MEDC report concludes that "a number of people didn't think of anything specific when asked for their thoughts on Michigan — nothing comes to mind or they simply said 'Detroit' and nothing else." Many business leaders think Michigan is simply dominated by the auto industry, with little room for any other kind of business.

Such perceptions, even though faulty, lead to decisions that hurt Michigan. A group of business leaders in New York, when asked which states they would consider for expansion or relocation, ranked North Carolina, South Carolina and California at the top, with Texas and Ohio in the middle. Michigan ranked last!

So part of what MEDC wants to do is as simple as educating business leaders around the country about Michigan's real strengths. There is a real story to be told here. Michigan kids scored an average of 1100 in the SAT exam in 1997, above any of our new competitors. And Michigan's colleges and universities are as good as they get: the University of Michigan, for example, is number one in the entire country in sponsored research.

[This is the first of a series of columns examining the MEDC report on Michigan's economic future.]

Supermajority: super-confusing?

Mike Malott

Voters could see, not one, but two questions on the ballot next November about constitutional amendments that would require a "supermajority" anytime the Legislature wants to increase taxes.

Rep. Bruce Patterson, R-Canton, is sponsoring House Joint Resolution B, which would require a two-thirds majority in the House to increase taxes.

Rep. Wayne Kuipers, R-Holland, is the sponsor of House Joint Resolution G, which calls for a three-fifths vote to hike taxes. In the House, that's 36 votes in the Senate, 23.

But Kuipers' plan also addresses fees, those charged for specific government services. It's the belief that any increase in the state revenue should be subject to the higher standard.

And House Tax Policy Committee Chair Nancy Cassis, R-Now, wants to put both on the ballot.

"Two-thirds can be a very tough standard. It's a question of where to set the chinning bar," she said. "If we look at tax increases in future, the responsible thing to do is to look at the spending carefully to make sure that it is justified and needed, if it's the hands of the Legislature in the future are tied, it won't be the Legislature that does it, it will be the citizens of the state, just as they decided on term limits."

She believes voters will be able to sort out the two questions, and she'd prefer to let them make the call.

"The chair of House Tax Policy is a very wise woman indeed," Patterson said, agreeing both should be placed on the ballot.

Patterson said he has confidence in voters' ability to sort out the details of the two. And he prefers to "empower" voters rather than decide for them.

"We should do the work," countered Kuipers. "We should refine it down to the one proposal we think is best before asking voters to decide. If it doesn't fly, we can try again in another election."

Needless to say, there are others in the Legislature who think the whole thing is a bad idea. Rep. Gilda Jacobs, D-Huntington Woods, is one of those who don't want to see a discussion to be just "politics-shortsighted-politics at that."

The economy is good now, and it is easy to trim taxes when the state budget continues to create stable surpluses. But the economy will slow and sour sooner or later, she said. Then, when the state is in need of higher revenues, the Legislature will still have to overcome the higher standard.

"It gives more control to a minority," she explained. It's possible somewhere down the road that 72 representatives will recognize the need for a tax hike, and be frustrated by only 38 holdouts.

Nonetheless, in a state that played host to a tax revolt throughout the '70s and '80s, Jacobs predicts any attempt at the ballot box to set a higher standard for tax increases is likely to get a warm reception from voters.

She's certainly right about that. One of the frustrations expressed by voters back in those days was that the state had a pretty free hand to raise taxes as it saw fit. Only the sales tax requires a vote when increased. And the only limitation on state tax levels is in the Headlee Amendment.

So it is quite conceivable to me that voters would pass both if given the opportunity. We've seen that before, where the same section of the constitution is amended in the same election and it is always confusing. Do you adopt whichever standard is higher? Or do you adopt the standard that won more votes at the polls?

Would it, in this case, make fee increases subject to three-fifths majority votes, while taxes must have two-thirds?

I'm less concerned about the confusion voters might face when confronted with two like proposals on the ballot than I am with the confusion and unintended consequences that could result should both win approval.

Mike Malott reports on the local implications of state and regional events. He can be reached by phone at (248) 634-8219 or by e-mail at mimalott@homecomm.net.

Early residents came from New York

Barbara Louie

Michigan has been called a lot of things — from a water wonderland to a pleasant peninsula — but in the early 1800s, it was also known as the land of milk and honey.

Glowing reports in New England newspapers of fertile lands encouraged easterners to swarm to the western territory in droves. Especially the Erie Canal in 1825.

Watts and other early settlers generally chose land near what today is Ten Mile Road. The earliest settlers tended to stick together, intermarrying and choosing farms in close proximity of their neighbors.

Richard C. Simmons arrived early in 1825, claiming land on Ten Mile east of Beck Road. Surrounded by fruit orchards, his estate boasted one of the first brick houses in Novi, which is still used today as a private home.

Others in the section south of Ten Mile were Samuel Hungerford and James Wilkinson, who married William Yerkes' sister.

The early center of town known as Novi Corners — near Novi Road and Grand River — was first settled around 1830 by John Elmore. He was later joined by Apollon Cudworth and Benjamin Brown, who helped develop the area as the first business section in Novi Township.

Samuel White was another early pioneer who came to Michigan from New York in 1826. Active in local government, White served as Novi Township's supervisor between 1830-1835.

One of the few women who risked the difficult journey from New York, Sally Thornton was a strong-willed persuasive widow who came to Novi with her five young children. Through her drive and perseverance, her property remained in the family well into the 20th century. Her house, which was built in 1840 near Nine Mile and Novi roads, was moved in 1992 and restored to form the focal point for a subdivision off of Eleven Mile Road.

Among the throng of people arriving after 1830 was Samuel Rodgers. The Rodgers and Thornton families teamed up when one of Sally Thornton's great granddaughters married Charles Rodgers.

These were but a few of the courageous and determined people who slowly tamed the swampy marshland of southern Michigan, turning it into some of the most fertile, highly productive agricultural centers in the state.

Barbara Louie is the author of the book "No. 1 on the Trail" as well as other local history books.

Novi city manager Ed Kriewall as he looked in 1972

Ed Kriewall looks back on his 30 years in Novi

Novi Council Tuesday named Ed Kriewall city manager after two and a half months as the acting city manager.

"I feel we've got a capable person doing the job in his present capacity," (city council member Denis) Berry told the council. "I think Ed might have an edge on someone who was coming in new."

Mayor Robert Daley noted that the difference between the experience of the other candidates and that of Kriewall has increased because Kriewall "earned his spurs in battle."

Kriewall's salary, which was set at $22,000 a year when he was acting city manager, will remain the same, city controller Frances Loyne said.

By his own admission, Ed Kriewall wasn't particularly enthused about the idea of becoming city manager of Novi back in 1974, even though he's stepped into the job on an interim basis several times previously.

After all, the Bay City native's professional history was rich in road construction and in public works supervision, but not in urban management.

Kriewall's first job was that of construction inspector for the Interstate 94 project taken on by the Michigan Department of Transportation. He helped supervise the work done on the new Interstate highway from roughly Nine Mile to Thirteen Mile roads.

He shifted gears to I-75 a few years later, but then learned that the city of Detroit had its own Interstate highway office, which he joined in 1966.

But shortly after the Detroit riots, Kriewall said he had had enough of the Motor City.

"I knew from studying the MDOT maps that Novi was a town that would soon be on the move," he said. "It was right along where I-96 had gone in, so it had a lot of potential."

Kriewall took over as public works director in September of 1969. After only working in that capacity for a year or so, Kriewall was beckoned to step in as interim city manager as the infant city councils juggled managers to help run the fledgling community.

"We really didn't have a lot of stuff to work with back then," he said. "There was a certain amount of uncertainty in the air."

Finally, in 1974, Kriewall was taken in as a full-time manager. With that appointment came the nerves of a new job.

"You'd seen three or four other city managers come in and out of their offices in five years," he said. "I definitely had that on the back of my mind."

Kriewall survived, though, and has been Novi's chief executive since November of 1974. Earlier this year, he announced he would be retiring in February of 2000. The city council is currently soliciting applications for his replacement.

Kriewall said he'd be taking a lifetime of memories from his experience as city manager of the Tollgate MacKinnon's chef Tom MacKinnon stands with an array of turkey dishes the Northville restaurant prepares. Starting with the dish MacKinnon is holding, they are: turkey tenderloin with spiced berry sauce, barbecued-roasted turkey with sage and celery-potato pancakes, turkey-stuffed pepper and deep fried turkey with potato pancakes and cherry carrots.

Tom Talks Turkey

Tom MacKinnon says alternative preparations for turkey are giving traditional baked bird a run for their money.

The scene:

The family has gathered in the dining room. A lavish spread awaits, but a conspicuously vacant spot is located at the head of the table.

Moments later, mom emerges from the kitchen with a massive silver platter and that familiar golden brown bird.

Delicious? Yes. But since this is the 10 billionth Thanksgiving in a row with the same style of meal, it's also a bit boring.

But it doesn't need to be, said chef Tom MacKinnon of Northville's MacKinnon's restaurant. As one who really loves cooking game, MacKinnon said it's possible to shake up Thanksgiving with some alternative turkey recipes.

The reason, MacKinnon said, is that turkey has become so versatile a food.

"Turkey is almost like chicken in that there are so many ways you can get it in the store," MacKinnon said. "It's also a very healthy meat, which has made it more popular these days."

The ease in preparation of turkey has further increased its popularity, MacKinnon said.

"For example, turkey tenderloin is about the size of a New York strip and can be prepared the same way as it," he said. "It's so easy to cook."

And though Thanksgiving still leads the pack for turkey-eating days, it's a food not just isolated to the last Thursday in November.

"It's come so far from just being something you eat on Thanksgiving," he said. "People are eating it year-round."

MacKinnon's Restaurant has four popular turkey dishes on its menu this time of year, including deep fried turkey, turkey tenderloin, stuffed turkey pepper and grill masters will love this one) barbecue roasted turkey.

"If you put that turkey in a Weber grill, there's nothing better," MacKinnon said with a smile.

Recognizing that not everyone would be comfortable with a departure from tradition, MacKinnon had a few tips for those content to cook turkey by the standard bake-the-whole-bird-in-the-oven method.

"The first thing you need to do is make sure that the bird is properly thawed, either in a refrigerator or under cool running water," he said. "You should also cook stuffing separate from the turkey. It speeds up the cooking of both foods."

MacKinnon's is located at 126 East Main in Northville. The restaurant can be reached at (248) 348-1991.

Recipes

TURKEY THIGH OSSO BUCCO

Ingredients:

- 1/4 cup flour
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper, divided
- 2 turkey thighs, skinned and cut in half, crosswise
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 small carrot, coarsely chopped
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 can (8 ounces) stewed tomatoes
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 3/4 cup white wine or lemon-lime soda
- 1 teaspoon chicken bouillon crystals
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/2 cup frozen peas

1. In 9-inch pie plate combine flour, 1/4 teaspoon pepper and salt. Add turkey and turn to coat. Reserve remaining flour.

2. In non-stick 5-quart saucepan over medium heat, saute turkey in oil 5 minutes per side or until turkey is lightly brown. Remove turkey from saucepan; set aside.

3. Add onion, carrots and garlic to drippings in saucepan and stir-fry 2 to 4 minutes or until onions are translucent. Add tomatoes, breaking up large pieces with spoon, tomato sauce, wine, bouillon crystals, oregano, thyme and remaining pepper. Increase heat and bring mixture to boil.

4. Add turkey pieces. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer 45 to 60 minutes. Remove turkey from tomato mixture and keep warm.

5. Combine remaining flour mixture with 1 to 2 tablespoons cold water. Stir into hot tomato mixture. Add frozen peas. Increase heat to medium and cook 5 minutes or until sauce thickens. To serve, spoon tomato mixture over turkey. Serve with polenta or saffron rice, if desired.

MARINATED WILD TURKEY TENDERLOIN w/ POPPYSEED AND HERB BREAD COMPOTE

Ingredients:

- 2 lb. wild or farm-raised turkey tenderloins
- 1 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup fresh raspberries (or raspberry preserves)
- 1 tbs. brown sugar
- 1 diced red pepper
- 2 thin slices fresh ginger
- 1/4 cup walnut oil

1. Blend all ingredients together, bring to a boil for 5 minutes, then cool. When cool, add raw turkey tenders and marinate for 2 hours.
2. Broil tenders in oven broiler or on outdoor grill (approximately 15 minutes)

Compote ingredients:

- poppyseed bread - 4 cups cut up
- 1/4 cup onion
- 1/4 cup celery
- 1/4 cup cranberries
- fresh rosemary
- fresh thyme
- 1 tsp. garlic
- 4 romaine lettuce leaves

1. Saute onions and celery until clear. Add herbs and moistened bread. Cover and heat 10 minutes.

2. Dip romaine leaves in simmering water for 1 minute, making them flexible.

3. Line inside of muffin tins with romaine. Add poppyseed dressing, press firmly. Heat and serve with tenderloin.

TURKEY MEDALLIONS with CUMBERLAND SAUCE

Ingredients:

- 2 1/2 teaspoons margarine
- 1/4 cup currant jelly
- 1 1/2 tablespoons port wine
- 3/4 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- dash cayenne pepper
- salt and pepper to taste
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 2 teaspoons cold water
- 1/2 pound turkey tenderloin
- 1 tablespoon olive oil

1. In small saucepan over medium-high heat, melt 1 teaspoon margarine. Stir in jelly, wine, mustard, lemon juice, cayenne pepper and salt; heat until jelly is melted. In small bowl, combine cornstarch and water.

2. Stir into jelly mixture. Boil mixture until thickened. Reduce heat and keep warm.

3. Cut tenderloin into 3/4 inch thick crosswise slices to make medallions. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

4. In large skillet over medium-high heat, saute medallions in olive oil and remaining 1 1/2 teaspoons margarine about 2 1/2 minutes per side, or until no longer pink in thickest part of meat. To serve, spoon a thin layer of sauce on center of each plate. Arrange several turkey medallions over sauce. Garnish with sour cream if desired.

The train keeps a-rollin' along

Greenberg exhibit lures train buffs to see tiny railroads

By CHRIS C. DAVIS

Just in time for the early part of the holiday season, one of the nation's largest traveling model railroad shows will be making a stop at the Novi Expo Center on Nov. 20 and 21 — the Greenberg Train Show.

Traditionally, November is National Model Railroad Month.

Among the items that will be on display for the event are:

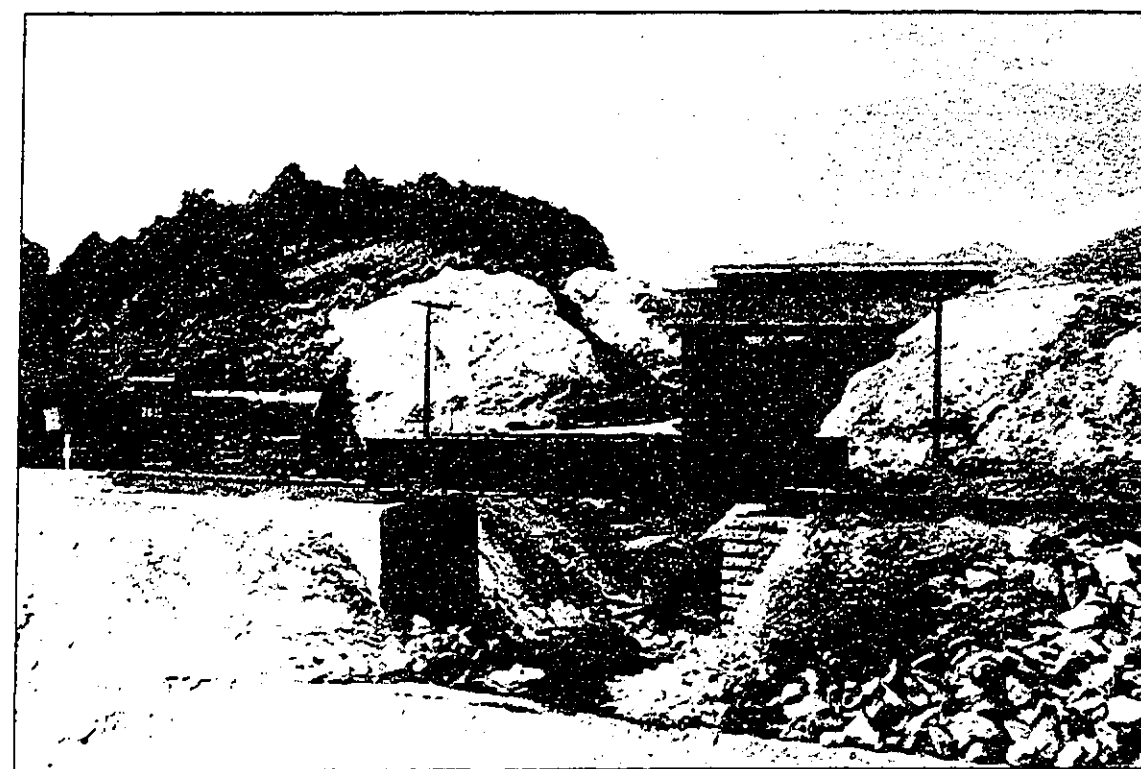

- A 3-foot 60-foot by 26-foot N-scale layout.
- A Marklin Motrack reflecting a true German railroad.

- An American Flyer S-gauge display layout from Tedko's department store in Toledo, Ohio.
- A live steam garden railroad setup.

- A working card and industrialized city in a 10-foot by 33-foot N-scale layout, and:

- The Whitespessaukee Central Railroad, an HO-scale layout featured in Model Railroader magazine.

In addition to the mammoth display of trains, dealers and traders will be on hand ready to sell and trade their wares. A wide range of hobby-related publications will also be available. Hourly door prizes include Kalmbach magazine subscriptions and a chance to win $50 in marketplace money. Collectible toy dealers will also be at the Expo Center for those whose interests go beyond model railroads.

The Greenberg train show will return to the Novi Expo Center this weekend. Several ultra-detailed model railroads, like the one above, will be on display at the show.

Admission is good for both days of the show. The Nov. 20 show runs 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., while the Nov. 21 show is slated for 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call (248) 348-5600, or visit www.greenbergschows.com on the Internet.

Voices guide Joan of Arc

Joan of Arc was born the youngest daughter of a peasant farmer in Domremy, France around 1412, a time when France was being overrun by the English during the bloody Hundred Year's War.

In addition, an internal war was being waged within France, with the region of Burgundy siding with the English.

A deciding factor in the war was who would control the city of Orleans, which sits strategically on the bank of the Loire river. Only one thing could save France from its darkest period in history... a miracle.

When King Henry VI of England and King Charles VI of France both die in 1422, the English declare Henry VI, a mere child, king of both England and France.

Charles VII of France has no intention of abandoning his kingdom and declares himself heir to the throne, but he cannot be made king until he is crowned at Rheims — which is under English occupation.

Meanwhile, in Domremy, 13-year-old Joan spends most of her childhood kneeling in prayer. She not only loves to confess many times daily, but often hears voices from the sky and has strange, startling visions.

In her own words:

The voice told me that I must depart and go into France. And the voice said that I would raise the siege before Orleans. And it told me to go to Vaucouleurs, to Robert de Baudricourt, captain of the town, who would give me men to go with me. And I answered the voice that I was a poor girl who knew nothing of riding and warfare.

From the very beginning, she was told what her mission was: she was chosen by God to restore France and to give aid to the Dauphin Charles, who was to be king of France. In order to do this, she must wear men's clothing, bear arms and lead an army.

One day, after playing in the fields, Joan runs home to find the English have invaded her town. As she hides in a cupboard, she witnesses English soldiers murder and rape her 18-year-old sister. After this tragedy, Joan is sent to live with her aunt and uncle in a neighboring village.

It seems highly unlikely that this innocent girl who never went to school and cannot read or write will eventually lead the French army in defeating the powerful English army and liberating her country.

But by May 1428, Joan no longer doubts that she has been bidden by God to come to the aid of the king, and she takes action.

Leaving the only home she has ever known behind, Joan rides to Chinon to see Charles, the Dauphin. At first the king and his subjects don't know what to think when word arrives from young Joan.

Aware of her professed visions and suspicious of her intentions, Charles orders Jean d'Alençon, his finest archer, to pose as king. Joan arrives at the castle, impresses Charles by calling him on his bluff, and secures a private with him.

In her words to Charles:

I bring you news from God, that our Lord will give you back your kingdom, bringing you to be crowned at Rheims and driving out your enemies. In this I am God's messenger. Do set me bravely to work, and I will rise the siege of Orleans.

Persuaded to take her claims at face value, Charles agrees to Joan's request, providing her with an army to achieve victory against the English and secure the city of Rheims for his coronation. Though many feel that Joan is at best a harmless hysteric and at worst a threat not only to the king's throne but to his life, they also detect in her a magical quality and a persuasive attitude that cannot be discouraged or resisted.

Joan arrives at the battlefield dressed in white armor and carrying her personalized banner. This makes an impression on both armies, who are not used to seeing a woman in combat.

In the trenches with her countrymen, Joan wins a victory for the French, who are rejuvenated by their inspirational new leader. But the battle is not over yet — Joan insists on pressing further and rallying the troops once more to dissolve the English occupation of Orleans.

Despite a valiant effort, they are exhausted and lose hope when Joan is shot in the chest by an arrow. The French retreat and tend to Joan's wound.

The French continue to win battles against the weakening English, but young Joan feels a strong sense of remorse as she views the carnage. Overwhelmed by the gravity of the slaughter, Joan approaches the English and offers them a chance to retreat.

Miraculously, the English retreat. It is a surprising victory that allows Charles to proceed to Rheims for his coronation.

Once Charles is crowned king, he is wholly satisfied. Joan, however, is not, and she continues to fight on. Her troops — which number in the hundreds instead of thousands — are tired and hungry.

Aulon informs her that not only has Charles given up on the war, but he has been planning to betray Joan should anything happen to her.

Reiterating her devotion to God, Joan feels obligated and determined to continue to fight until her voices send her a message otherwise.

Against everyone's better judgment, Joan moves on to Compiegne for a battle in which she is quickly captured by the Burgundians, a group of mercenaries fighting for the English.

Sold to her enemies, she wakes up in a prison cell with her conscience, who comes to her in the form of a mysterious, hooded man.

He defeats Joan's confidence and asks questions that make her question the validity of her visions.

Accused of heresy and sorcery, and with no one to rescue her, the trial to prove Joan is a witch begins.

She is questioned repeatedly about her visions and her faith in the Catholic church. Between court sessions, Joan has conversations with her Conscience, who criticizes Joan's faith in him and her naivete. This devastates Joan, and she appears to lose hope.

Near the end of the trial, Joan is told that she must either renounce her past deeds and swear to never carry arms or wear men's clothing again, or she will be burned to death.

She agrees to do so, and she is sentenced to life in prison. Ultimately, however, she refuses to submit to the English-constituted court's judgment. Now considered a "relapsed heretic," Joan's decision means certain death.

On May 1431, she was burned at the stake in the marketplace at Rouen.

'Being John Malkovich' keeps viewers on their toes

Chris Sandberg

QUEST MOVIE REVIEW

"Being John Malkovich" is one of the most inventive, creative and bizarre movies that I've ever seen.

There is never a dull moment in the film. Charles Kaufman creates an utterly original heap of entertainment that makes "Alice in Wonderland" look like a teen flick.

Whether you're laughing or crying the film will keep you on your toes.

The first few minutes are a little slow but you still find yourself intrigued by the bizarre camera work.

John Cusack plays Craig Schwartz, a deprived puppeteer who is an excellent, yet sadly unknown puppet master. Schwartz doesn't think he needs a day job until he offends a little girl's father with one of his puppet shows, and gets punched square in the face.

After that he realizes that he needs a day job to support his wife, and hopefully a future child.

Cusack's job interview leads to some of the funniest 20 minutes I have ever seen on screen. With dark, and intellectual comedy at it's best, it's one of those scenes where you just die laughing in the aisles.

Cusack's boss is old and senile and thinks he has a speech impediment when actually he talks better than Cusack himself.

He works on the 7th floor where the ceiling raises five feet above the floor. It's a place where everyone has to bend over to walk.

Malkovich (Catherine Keener) runs into co-worker Craig (John Cusack) on the 7th floor in "Being John Malkovich."

While filming one day Cusack drops a folder behind a file cabinet. While retrieving it he finds a small door that leads inside the brain of John Malkovich.

These minutes of entertainment never dumb down, or slow up. It just gets better and more surreal. You would expect them to run out of ideas; but they don't. The laughs come on stronger and the movie bullets in a different direction.

Cusack ends up only being able to spend 15 minutes in Malkovich and afterwards gets dumped out by the side of the New Jersey Turnpike.

He proceeds to tell his wife, played by the beautiful Cameron Diaz, who in this movie looks awful and utterly unattractive.

She wants to try it, and what she ends up finding is not a portal within John Malkovich, but rather a mirror into her innermost desires. She finds her true self in another person's body.

Instead of using this portal to try to find what the significance of it is, Diaz and Cusack use it to fulfill their sexual fantasies with Cusack's co-worker, played by the lovely Catherine Keener. However, it seems she is only attracted to them when they are inside the body of Malkovich.

The plot spirals into many different directions at this point, and steers clear of comedy. It becomes a philosophical message.

"Being John Malkovich" could be considered the "Truman Show" of 1999, only more imaginative and bizarre. The film is so deep that it is poetic. Everything in the movie has a meaning, and represents a symbol for life.

John Cusack gives an excellent performance. In the beginning you feel sorry for him. In the middle you hate him. At the end you feel so intrigued by the ending that you can't do anything but stare at the film.

This film deserves a standing ovation for what it has done for filmmakers. It tells them to think of every possibility.

Hopefully we will see more original films like "Malkovich" and less trite films like "House on Haunted Hill."

Tennis is expanding, and this season was evidence that the competition in the metro-Detroit area will continue to grow as indoor tennis facilities are being constructed.

Milford took big steps in asserting itself as a force in the Kensington Valley Conference, finishing 8-3-1 in conference duals and tying Novi the second time around. They, along with Hartland, made perennial powers Novi and Brighton take notice of things to come.

Northville continued its dominance of the Western Lakes Activities Association, winning seven of eight flights at the conference tournament and finishing with a perfect regular season. The team finished 11th at the Division II state tournament.

After calculating all of the head-to-head matchups, combined with the overall records and accomplishments of area netters, here's what HomeTown Newspapers' all-area first team looks like:

Novi dominates 2nd team

Just because Northville dominated the all-area first team doesn't mean that's the end of great tennis in this area. Novi shared the Kensington Valley Conference title with Brighton this year, marking the fifth-straight year the school has won or shared the title.

Milford's AnnMarie Jasieniecki performed brilliantly, setting herself up for what should be a promising three years ahead of her. Lakeland and South Lyon continue their drive to compete with the conference's best, and Lakeland's Jessica Hunt is proof of that.

"From top to bottom, this was the best the KVC's ever been," Novi coach Jim Hanson said. "With the addition of Pinckney into the league, it'll be an interesting season."

Here's a look at HomeTown Newspaper's all-area second team.

Sarah Holt

Novi Sophomore

A wrist injury halfway through the season was just about the only thing stopping Holt from battling Brighton's Dana Krozek for the league title. She finished the year 7-3, with wins over No. 1 singles players from Milford, South Lyon, Hartland and Howell. Her only losses came to Jessie Mills of Northville, Krozek and Battle Creek Central's Meaghan Clark.

Melissa Roemer

Novi Sophomore

Cagers win
district opener

Last night's game to decide district finalist

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

Taking no chances, and avoiding any major upsets in the state tournament, Novi quickly dispatched of Livonia Churchill Monday night in the district opener 63-26.

The win set up last night's district semifinal with neighboring Northville, which had a bye in the first round.

Novi defeated Northville 50-37 in their only other matchup this season back on Oct. 16. Novi came into last night's game with a 20-1 record, the best in school history. Northville finished their regular season with a 13-7 record. The winner of that game will play the winner of the other semifinal matchup between Plymouth Canton and Salem. The championship game will be played at 7 p.m. tomorrow night at Novi High School. Results of last night's game as well as district final's coverage will be in next week's Novi News.

Against Churchill, Novi jumped out to a 15-3 lead after one quarter and never looked back. The large lead allowed coach Dennis Cichonski the opportunity to prepare his team for upcoming games.

"We emphasized taking care of the ball, and we worked on rotating our lineup so we could work on things for the next game," he said. "We were trying to see what we could do with different girls playing with each other."

Jessica Gilbert led the team with 12 points and Beth Rice added 10. Twelve of the 13 girls who suited up for the game scored.

Senior Frank Raburn was one of four Wildcats to make HomeTown's all-area first team.

Four make our first team

When you start talking about this year's all-area team, you have to start with some of the accomplishments of their teams first. Because individuals make up great teams, it's only right to mention them first.

After dominating the soccer world a year ago by winning the school's first-ever state championship, Novi came back strong in 1999. The team didn't suffer a letdown, and made it all the way to the state quarterfinals before losing to Livonia Stevenson. The team was an unblemished 19-0 against teams other than Stevenson and Brighton, and finished 19-2-1 overall. Although four of its top players graduate this year, Novi will return a strong corps of players next season.

Northville may have ended up 8-9-1, but it was a healthy sub-.500 record. The team was the unfortunate victim of playing in an elite soccer conference, the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Here's a look at the individuals that comprise the teams, the best 11 players from Novi, Northville, South Lyon, Milford and Lakeland.

Joe Irimescu • HomeTown's player of the year

Novi senior
While he was a vital part of Novi's state championship team of 1998, that team was never "his team." That team went 23-1-1 en route to the state title.

So Irimescu returned to lead this year's team to a 19-2-1 record and a state quarterfinal berth, having had one of the most productive careers in Novi soccer history. This season Irimescu scored nine goals while collecting a team-best 14 assists. Because teams often marked the senior with two or three players, other Wildcats were able to prosper, including sophomore Brandon Davis (15 goals, 11 assists). This senior was named second-team all-state by the coaches association.

Irimescu was a second-team selection last year after garnering first-team honors as a sophomore. That season he had 14 goals and six assists.

Ryan Rzepka

Novi senior

No matter where the ball was on the field, Rzepka was always near it. The senior was second to Davis on the team with 13 goals and picked up eight more assists for 21 points. That total was good for third on the team.

Rzepka earned second-team all-state honors this year by the coaches association and was a second-team HomeTown selection as a junior. With Rzepka in the lineup, Novi was 42-3-2 over the last two years.

Scott Jettie

Novi senior

An extremely athletic player on the field, Jettie used both his speed and agility to toil with defenses throughout the Kensington Valley Conference. He scored nine goals and assisted on three others, leading Novi to a 10-1-1 record and a second-place finish in the conference standings.

Frank Raburn

Novi senior

Alongside fellow Wildcat Sean Thompson, Raburn was one of Novi's best defenders and one of the best in the KVC for that matter. He didn't score many goals, and didn't assist on many either. But he led Novi to 16 wins in its last 18 games, in which the team allowed just five goals, three of which came in the quarterfinals to Livonia Stevenson.

Brandon Bethell

Northville senior

Over the last four years, there's been one guy who's seen and done it all at Northville High School. That guy is Bethell, who earned all-conference first-team honors in the toughest soccer conference in the state of Michigan. Both he and fellow teammate Tim Kelleher earned first-team all-WLAA honors and were named to the all-district and all-regional teams in 1999.

Bethell led the team with seven goals and added two assists. His Northville team finished just 8-9-1, but played one of the toughest schedules in the state, a schedule that included games against Novi (state quarterfinalist), Stevenson (state semifinalist) and Salem (state finalist).

Tim Kelleher

Northville junior

After his breakout season a year ago, Kelleher wasn't a secret to opponents anymore. So coach Henry Klimes moved him back to the midfield to help open things up offensively for the Mustangs.

For Kelleher's stats, the move didn't help. He was continually marked and finished the season with four goals and seven assists. But fortunately for him, the rest of the conference coaches

Northville game marks start of season for Wildcats

By JASON SCHMITT

and ROBERT JACKSON

When the puck is dropped for Friday night's matchup between the Northville and Novi hockey teams, there will be a different aroma floating around the rink than there was last year at this time.

Last season's first matchup between the two schools was the first of the season for Northville, but only the second ever for Novi. Both schools were relatively young, but Northville had a year of experience under their belt and it showed. The Mustangs won that first matchup 6-1 and went on to defeat the Wildcats 7-2 in their second showdown a month later.

This year, both teams had tremendous turnouts at team tryouts, and should have the depth necessary to compete in the upper echelon's of their leagues. Novi will look to improve on a sixth-place finish in the Kensington Valley Conference while Northville hopes to make a great first impression in the newly formed Western Lakes Activities Association.

Northville looks to replace lost talent...

Sometimes losing a talented goal scorer can be a plus for a hockey team.

That's the attitude Northville Mustang Hockey coach Brad O'Neill has as the Mustangs prepare to kick off their season against arch rival Novi Friday. Not returning to the Mustang lineup this season is Sean Nappo, one of the teams' big guns last year. Nappo will play junior hockey this year, O'Neill said.

"Sure we'll miss Sean in the lineup. That's a big void for us to fill, but that's also good in a way because we don't have to focus on one player to do most of the scoring," O'Neill said. "And actually, I'd prefer that. I think we'll actually be a stronger team this year than last because we're looking for everyone to make a contribution."

About 40 players skated in tryouts for the team.

Hockey team looking to improve on 9-15-1 record of a year ago

O'Neill said, which is the biggest turnaround he's seen in his three years as Mustang head coach.

"I was really impressed with the number of kids that turned out, and the talent that was on the ice," O'Neill explained. "We had to make some tough decisions, and I think our team is well rounded."

O'Neill has 10 returning players from last year — four from the team, Scott S. Hunter, Jason, Enright, Josh Block, Steve Lefebvre, Tim Hill, Kristian Balaguer, Bill Salbette, Adam Zuhl, Brandon Szatkowski, Brian Murrell, Scott Weyand, Brett Cheney, Mike Stewart, Jeff Munn and Dave Stewart.

"This year we should be a better team overall," O'Neill said of his line-up. "The returning players now have the experience of having a year of high school hockey under their belts, and that's important."

O'Neill said the team has looked good in practice and that he was impressed with their play in a scrimmage game against Brighton. "We're sharing the puck more and the passes are a lot crisper," he said. "The looking forward to having all players contribute."

O'Neill also said that returning goaltender Josh Block will get the nod as the starter, but that backup sophomore Dave Stewart will get some playing time as well. "There was some real good competition at the goaltender position during tryouts," O'Neill said. "Josh brings plenty of experience and will be our starter in net, but (Stewart) has looked real good in practice and will get some playing time."

Friday's season opener against Novi will be a good indicator as to how the team will look this season, O'Neill explained. "I expect this year the game will be a lot tighter than last year," he said. "They've got a year's worth of experience, they have talented players and a fine coaching staff. I expect them to be tough."

Novi looks to build on its strong defense.

Last year Novi struggled in the early going, losing its first nine games of the season. But the team turned things around and won their next six and finished the season with a respectable 9-15-1 record. Leading the charge in that late-season run was their defense, which will be the base for this year's team.

"My coaching philosophy is that defense wins championships and I still feel that although we have offensive firepower, we do have a good nucleus of our defense back that is familiar with our system," Novi coach Dan Phelps said. "I'm a strong believer that a strong defense creates an offense for a team. So we're not looking to win games 10-2, we're looking to win them 2-1. A win's a win."

Heading up the defense will be Jared Gensio, Jeff Poulos, Dan Sada, Phil Stachowski and Brian Eberline. With four of six defensemen back from last year, Phelps hopes to rely on this unit to control the game.

"The last line of defense for Novi will be its goaltenders, of which the team has three solid go-to-guys. Returning starter Beau Brandeau will lead the way.

"Beau is back," Phelps said. "He comes in as our number one starter, our MVP from last year. His play spoke for itself. It was very obvious that he earned the most valuable player award last year."

Phelps will also have junior Jeremy Goodman back, as well as newcomer Brian Markowicz, also a junior. "Both he and Jeremy are very good goaltenders. Right now Beau is number one going in, but you never know what can happen."

"They work well together in a three-goalie system," Phelps said. Offensively, Phelps hopes his returning captain Travis Mallott will help the team get on the board. Helping him will be newcomer Brad Zarem (AAA last year) and freshman Brian Jausa.

"Going down the list they all have the capability to score," Phelps said. "Angelo Barduca, you can't forget him. He's a tough, little gritty player who knows how to put the puck in the net."

Come from last year's team are (goalie) Brian Ward, (forwards) Chris Booth, Trevor Schneider, Rob Innis, Andy Saari, Geoff Paquette and (defensemen) Ryan Major and Matt Hoy.

Helping fill their vacancies are newcomers Robbie Jarrell (AA), Jared Ferras (AA) and Ryan Layton (transfer from John Glenn) along with Jausa and Zarem.

"We're bringing in these new kids, and right now everything looks good on paper," the coach said. "Every year you look to fill in for the seniors you've lost. Well this year we're filled in for the seniors we've lost, plus."

"But the bottom line is how well they develop together and that will tell the tale."

Game time...

The Northville/Novi game will begin at 6 p.m. tomorrow night at the Novi Ice Arena, which is home to both teams. Northville will be the home team for tomorrow's game.

The U-10 Hawks recently finished undefeated in round-robin play at the at the Orange and Blue cup.

U-10 Hawks makes name for itself

The U-10 Michigan Hawks soccer team is making quite a name for itself. The Hawks recently returned from the prestigious Orange and Blue Fall Cup in Champaign, Ill., having finished as the only team undefeated in round-robin play. The team beat JB Marine out of St. Louis 3-1 before knocking off the Carmel Crusaders from Indiana 1-0 in their second game. They also pounded the Little Hill Soccer club 7-0 before tying a team from Libertyville, Ill. 2-2.

The Hawks reached the finals of the Oakland University Soccer World Classic last month, outscoring their opponents 26-1 to reach the championship game. They lost to the LA Dynamite in a shootout after tying them 1-1 in regulation.

The team is coached by Tiffany Graves and include Katie Chaklos, Alyssa Fraser and Jamie Fratto of Novi, Kyle Richard of Northville, Alyssa Curtis (Brighton), Jalese DiBiasi (Allen Park), Allison Eckler (Arlington Hills), Alyssa Wombwell (Grand Blanc), Courtney Whalen and Kathleen Griffith of Livonia, Sara Ross (Canton), Sloane Levin (Hamburg) and Kelsey Kassab (Pinckney).

This doubles team really got it clicking after the halfway point of the season. They racked up nine straight wins before bowing out to Ann Arbor Pioneer in the regional semifinals. Along the way the pair won the KVC title with wins over Howell, Milford and Brighton. The latter two wins came in three sets.

"If anyone played the most three setters, they did," Hanson said. "In tough matches they came through. They were 4-0 in three-set matches."

Both junior varsity members last year, Andrews and Dinsmore posted a 17-5 record together. Dinsmore was 19-6 overall and Andrews had an 18-6 record.

AnnaMarie Jasieniecki
Milford Freshman

Jasieniecki played beyond her years, losing only two matches all season as Milford's third singles player. She was KVC champion, then won her first round match at the regional tournament. Her final record was 17-2.

Jessica Hunt
Lakeland Junior

"She ended up being our best player by the time the end of the season rolled around," Lakeland coach Gerhard Schubert said.

Though she finished up at 5-0, Hunt played her best tennis when it mattered. At the KVC tournament she avenged two regular season losses to clinch the league title at fourth singles. During the regular season Hunt also won her flight at the Walled Lake Western Invitational.

Tara Stevens
Novi Junior
Christina Cypher
Novi Junior

Stevens is perhaps the best doubles player the school has seen. Cypher could match Stevens' efforts by the time she graduates next season.

The duo were 17-2 at first doubles this year, winning the KVC crown and falling to lose a set. In fact, Stevens and Cypher lost just six sets all season long, and just one in 14 conference matches.

Stevens has a 55-16 career mark at Novi, one less win than 1999 graduate Sarah Pippas, who holds the school record with 56 wins. Cypher has 21-2 overall this season.

"If we ever had a 'sure' point, it was Stevens and Cypher," Hanson said.

Mami Ito
Novi Senior
Sarah Ehlers
Novi Sophomore

"They didn't play the entire year together, but when they did they were impressive. As a unit, Ito and Ehlers were 7-1 and KVC champions. The defeated Brighton in three sets to help propel the Wildcats to the league tournament win and a share of the league title.

Individually, Ito was 11-4 and Ehlers 11-5 on the season. "It never played all the time on the varsity, but she came through when we needed her in the end," Hanson said. "With her and Ehlers, I was trying all kinds of combinations, and when it was all said and done these two came through."

McDONALD FORD SALUTES NOVI ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Joe Irimescu - Senior

Irimescu followed former Novi standout Alan Lyskawa's lead, being named HomeTown Newspaper's player of the year for 1999.

The senior had nine goals and a team-leading 14 assists this year. He had four assists in Nov's 6-1 win over Dearborn in the regional semifinals. He was named to the second all-area first team squad this season.

Ryan Rzepka - Senior

Along with Irimescu, Rzepka was named team MVP. He was named to the second all-area first team squad this season.

understood how good of a player he was and they voted him to the all-WLAA team. He and Bethell were two of just 12 players selected from the entire conference.

Erik Anderson

Northville senior
Anderson made the move from defense to the midfield this year. Last season he was a second-team all-area selection, and after scoring three goals and adding two assists, he makes the move up to the first team this season. He also won the highest senior grade point average award for his team (3.96).

Tim Haffey
South Lyon senior
Haffey was a four-year varsity player. For the final two of those seasons he was an All-KVC and all-district selection. He was a South Lyon co-captain.

"Tim was very dependable as our defensive sweeper," Lions coach Bill Stevanovic said. "He was the most talented and knowledgeable player on our team."

Pat Lombardo
Milford senior
Milford coach Dave Poniatowski said once Lombardo smooths out the rough edges of the game, not only could he be a good college player, but one with professional potential. Already, he excels at every aspect of the game.

"He can defend, he can attack," Poniatowski said. "He has speed, size, great skill, scoring ability, an outstanding attitude. He leads by example and makes everyone around him a better player."

A third-year varsity player, Lombardo led Milford with six assists.

Chris Ming
Milford senior
Milford's team MVP, Ming was a rock at the sweeper position.

"He was virtually impassable," Redskins coach Dave Poniatowski said. "His defensive positioning is second to none. His ability to read the opposition's attack is as good as I've ever seen. His speed, size and strength make him a dominant player."

Ming was a goal scorer from the back line, putting five in the net. He also tallied four assists.

Mark Poniatowski
Milford senior

"This player has the most impressive shot that I have ever witnessed at the high school level, and in many cases, beyond," Milford coach Dave Poniatowski — Mark's brother — said. "He doesn't have great speed, size or strength. He makes up for that with heart and ability. When every team in the conference knows about a certain player's ability and attempts to stop that player but still fails, that's when you recognize you're working with something special."

Poniatowski was Milford's top goal scorer with seven, and for the second-straight season led the team in points, with 12.

Hot Picks

The second season of football picks has begun and everyone will be trying to top the defending champion, Jason Schmitt. This year we've even given the coin a chance, so hopefully, everyone has at least a 50 percent chance of finishing out of last place... we hope!

U-M doctors helping cancer survivors

Modern medicine has made amazing advances during recent decades, especially when it comes to fighting cancer. However, in an ironic twist, pediatric cancer survivors are faced with a unique set of problems because of these advances.

Long-term effects include problems with growth and development, complications from prior surgery, organ system abnormalities from drugs and radiation therapies, potential problems with fertility, and the small but real risk of the development of new cancers.

"It's really amazing because many of these patients have a complete lack of understanding of what drugs they received, what therapies they received, and in many instances, they don't even remember much of what they went through," said Dr. Valerie Cast, a pediatric oncologist with the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center and director of the Late Effects Clinic.

Cure rates for pediatric cancers have risen dramatically during the past 20 years. It's estimated that by next year, one in every 900 adults, age 16 to 44, will be a survivor of pediatric cancer. These survivors face unique challenges as they become adults and move through life. They need to know what they went through as children and how it may impact them now and what ongoing and future problems they should anticipate.

With this in mind, the U-M Comprehensive Cancer Center has created the Late Effects Clinic to help pediatric cancer survivors answer questions about their medical condition, their medical histories and assist them as they move through life. This is a new and evolving area of medical treatment. Many of these survivors would have died in an earlier generation, so there's a limited, but growing body of knowledge on what happens with pediatric cancer survivors 20 or so years after first treatment.

"When we talk about survival rates in pediatric malignancies, we now realize that diseases that were uniformly fatal 40 years ago are now curable up to 75 percent to 80 percent of the time depending on the malignancy," said Marcia Leonard, a registered nurse and coordinator with the U-M Late Effects Clinic. "We've learned, however, that survival comes at a price for a great deal of these children. There are organ systems that were adversely affected because they were growing and developing at the time of cancer therapy."

Many of the patients were infants or very young children when they were diagnosed and treated, and their parents did not keep detailed records, so their understanding of their disease is limited. Patients who come to the Late Effects Clinic receive a comprehensive review of what their disease is, what treatments they received as children, and how both may impact their life now and in the future.

"We all know that our understanding of these diseases and the side effects from therapy is continuing to evolve, so one of our major roles is to remove the misinformation and provide our patients with good solid medical information that allows them to appropriately define what their medical needs may be in the future," Castle said.

Castle said issues facing the survivor go far beyond just their medical treatments.

"It's their psychological well being, it's issues related to their insurability and their employer," said Castle. "We've had many instances where we've been able to intervene on behalf of the patient to reassure an employer that the patient is a good candidate. One of our major roles has to be an advocate for the patient and we take that role very seriously."

The Late Effects Clinic is held once a month and is primarily run by a physician, two nurse practitioners and a social worker. Leonard points out that the clinic staff receive valuable assistance from a large number of doctors in various subspecialties, such as cardiology, obstetrics and gynecology, radiation therapy, endocrinology and others throughout the health system.

"I think, first and foremost, we teach our patients to be advocates for their own health and to be good health care consumers," said Leonard. "These patients have many unique needs that they need to be aware of and they need to be aware that they are responsible for much of the follow-up care they're going to receive. It's very important for survivors to help educate the people who are going to take care of them."

University of Michigan Health System submitted this story.

UM-FACTS

Facts about pediatric cancer and survivorship:

- By 2000, one in every 900 adults, age 16 to 44, will be a survivor of pediatric cancer.
- Many cancers that were uniformly fatal 40 years ago are now curable up to 75 percent to 80 percent of the time depending on the malignancy.
- Long-term effects related to a patient's cancer and subsequent therapy include problems with growth and development, complications from prior surgery, organ system abnormalities from drugs and radiation therapies, potential problems with fertility and the development of second malignancies.

Health Notes

Stepping Stones

It's a divorce-recovery workshop for children and parents. It starts Nov. 4 and is offered by pre-registry only. It runs every Thursday for six weeks at Ward Presbyterian Church in Northville.

The cost is $10 and scholarships are available. For more information please call (248) 374-5920.

Cancer Support Group

"Focus On Living," a self-help group for cancer patients and their families, meets the first Wednesday of each month at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

Co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society, "Focus on Living" provides an opportunity to discuss concerns, obtain answers and gain support from others who share the same experiences.

Registration is not necessary, and there is no charge to attend. For more information, call (313) 655-2922, or toll free 1-800-494-1650.

Diabetes Education

This comprehensive program includes self-monitoring of blood glucose, diet and meal planning, disease management with exercise, potential complications of the disease, and presentations by a pharmacist and a podiatrist.

This is a continuously revolving six-week program held on Monday evenings from 6 to 8:30 p.m. at Providence Medical Office Center, Ten Mile and Haggerty roads. There is a $20 fee. Call (248) 424-3903 to register.

Surgical Preparation

Through the Sally the Surgery Star program, children scheduled for surgery are taken on a tour and familiarized with the surgical experience. A variety of educational materials and supportive teaching tools are used to help children deal positively with the idea of a hospital stay.

Admission to the program is by appointment only. There is no charge.

Call the Providence Medical Center-Providence Park at (248) 380-4170 to register.

Weight on the Run

Conducted by an exercise physiologist and a nutritionist, this 12-week program starts with a fitness assessment and nutritional consultation, followed by three weekly monitored workouts and weekly nutritional support. Day and evening classes are available.

A $300 fee includes enrollment in the class "ABC of Weight Loss." For more information and to register, call (248) 473-5600.0, South Professional Building, 28080 Grand River Ave. in Farmington Hills.

For more information or to make an appointment, call (248) 473-1320, weekdays 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Northville dominates all-area team

above the rest, and her Western Lakes' title at the top singles spot showed her dominance throughout the season.

She was a regional finalist and bowed out against Okemos at the state tournament. Mills beat Novi's Sarah Holt 6-2, 6-1 in Northville's 6-2 win over the Wildcats early in the season.

"She improved a lot from last season," her coach Uta Filkin said. "She was more powerful this year, that was the biggest difference. She's always had great ground strokes."

Kerry Woolfall

Northville junior
After having held down the No. 1 singles spot her sophomore year, Woolfall had few problems adjusting down to the second slot. The junior finished the season with a remarkable 24-4 record, which included a loss to Farmington by default. She was the WLA champion and went on to win a regional title as well.

But Woolfall has always been at her best at the state meet. She won the state title at third singles as a freshman, and reached the state semifinals this year before losing to Portage Northern's Ashley Smith.

"Only her knee problems in the off-season kept her from playing No. 1 this year," her coach said. "She's a tremendous athlete."

Lauren West

Northville sophomore
A victim of a talented team, West could have played No. 1 singles on most others. She had a near flawless 25-2 record. Her only losses were to Birmingham Marian at the state tournament and against former teammate, Marta Walasek, who transferred to Ann Arbor Huron and won a state title in Division I. "She was just outstanding for us," Filkin said. "We were hoping she'd go far in the state tournament, but she just had a bad day at states."

West was the WLA champion and did not lose a game in three matches en route to capturing the regional title.

Carolyn Vermeulen

Novi sophomore
Like most fourth-singles players, Vermeulen's best asset was her competitive nature, her ability to give 110 percent every time she stepped out onto the court.

Because of that, Vermeulen finished the season with a 17-7 record at both third and fourth singles. The sophomore split her two matches with Lakeland's Jessica Hunt, defeating her in straight sets in their first meeting and falling in three sets in the conference finals.

She went on to reach the regional semifinals before bowing out to Ann Arbor Huron.

Nicole Lindholm

Northville senior
Joanna Lee
Northville junior
This duo was 21-3 when playing with each other in 1999. They lost just two games at the regional tournament, taking that title as they did at the WLA tournament. Although they didn't play as a pair against Novi, Lindholm and Lauren Farris teamed up to top Novi's No. 1 team 6-2, 6-3 in their dual match.

"Joanna didn't want to play doubles at first, she wanted to play singles," Filkin said. "So it took her a little bit of time to get used to it."

The pair went on to reach the state quarterfinals before falling to Birmingham Seaholm 1-6, 5-7.

Sarah Poirer

Northville sophomore
Lauren Farris

Northville sophomore

Best friends in school and on the court, this Northville team posted a 22-3 record this year. Farris and Poirer played every match but one (Novi) together, winning the conference and regional titles with relative ease. Actually, it did take them three sets to defeat Harrison in the regional finals.

"They adjusted to each other and played well together," Filkin said. "They played the most three-set matches on the team, but they always told me, 'Don't worry coach, we have a plan.'"

Rachel Huang

Northville junior
Emily Stevenson
Northville junior
A prototypical doubles team — when one needed to be picked up, the other one was there for her. Stevenson and Huang picked up 22 wins in 1999, against just six defeats. A team that "hit it off very well," according to their coach, this pair won the WLA title and went on to finish as regional runners-up to North Farmington.

They fought hard, but lost to Grand Rapids Forest Hills Central 5-7, 3-6 in the second round of the state tournament.

Emily Krywko

Northville junior
Jamie Lindholm
Northville freshman
Not too many teams were able to beat this duo in 1999. Krywko and Lindholm were 16-2 at fourth doubles and epitomized the depth of Northville's tennis program. They were Western Lakes' champions at the flight.

"Jamie has very nice volleys," Filkin said. "I can see her following in the footsteps of her sister (Nicole). And Emily can play singles if needed, but is a more productive doubles player."
