Farmer Jack takes over Food Town

Food Town Supermarket in Clarkston has been purchased by Farmer Jack, which will take over the store Nov. 1. The other two Food Towns in the area are also closing, marking the end of a family business that started in 1944.

Food Town Supermarket signs on buildings in Independence Township, Oxford Township and Hartland are all coming down.

"It's the end of an era for us," said Food Town Supermarkets vice president Robert Roth, whose office is in downtown Clarkston. Ed Adler is the president. The business has been in their family since 1944. Roth said the last day for both the 29-year-old Oxford Township and Hartland stores is targeted for Oct. 17.

Farmer Jack is expected to take over the Independence Township store on Nov. 1

"It will just take them one day to put up their sign and bring in their cash egisters at the Waldon Road store, Roth added.

Oxford Township and Hartland store customers may be saddened by the news, but they are taking advantage of the 25-percent-off-everything sales going on in both locations.

Sashabaw store personnel did want to comment on the changeover, but at least a few shoppers didn't take the news too hard. One woman who didn't want to be identified said she hates grocery shopping so it doesn't. matter where she shops. Vivian Mangus of Clarkston said she

Cooper was married Saturday at the Victorian Wedding Chapel:

"They're going to make a helmet tunnel," said Debbie Clement, whose son Bubba Clement is a co-captain on the team.

The players planned to make two lines and hoist their helmets to make a tunnel for the newlyweds. It is a fitting tribute to the popular Cooper, Clement said. The helmet tunnel is a tradition at each football game.

Cooper already had one surprise. Bubba Clement collected money from each of the three football teams and ordered an official Clarkston coach's uniform for Cooper to wear on the field. The teams presented it to her on Thursday, Angry residents of the Thendara Park subdivision filled a recent Independence Township board meeting, thinking officials were ready to reassess them for bonds that are scheduled to be paid off in 2004.

The $2.385 million, 15-year bond issue, because of a variety of problems, could be $430,000 short at pay-off time, Township Clerk Joan McCrary said. Thendara residents came to the Oct. 5 board meeting, she said, because of signs posted in the neighborhood near Clarkston and Eston roads, saying the board was going to take action. Trustee Jeff McGee had requested the item be put on the agenda as an add-on item. After discus-sion by the board, the item never made onto the agenda. Problems with the Thendara paving go back to the beginnings of the project, McCrary said. The roads in the subdivision were nearly impassable after a hard rain, she said.

"Even the school buses couldn't go the roads were so bad," she said.

It was an expensive paving project, she added, and at the time residents in favor of forming a Special Assessment Dis-trict (SAD) to pay for it had trou-ble mustering the 51 percent of the 254 households needed. As a result, the township decided not to include the 10-15 percent in take because of the complexity of the project. The paving did have cost overruns of between $200,000 and $250,000, but no contingency to take care of those costs.

A normal contingency fund of 10-15 percent of the total project cost would have amounted to about $250,000, McCrary said.

The other big source of trouble happened when former township. treasurer John Lutz lost a large sum of money in ill-advised investments. Approximately 102,000 was lost from the Thendara fund, according to McCrary. But McCrary said the township has been contributing $34,000 per year for the past four years from the general fund counteract that mistake.

Added to those problems is the lower interest rates in recent years. Many Thendara residents chose to simply pay the nearly. $10,000 special assessment right away and avoid paying interest. But because interest rates have fallen so much in recent years, the township has had trouble getting a good return on that invested money, McCrary said.

The only person on the board who was around when the original snafus occurred was Dan Travis, McCrary said, adding take because of the complexity of that much of what has happened is not the fault of current board members.

Still, McGee said he thinks the issue has been shoved into the background far too long and that's why he wanted it on the agenda at least for discussion. "I finally got tired of it and asked for the Thendara add-on," McGee said. "They choose in their wisdom not to address it."

Residents at the meeting sat through three votes before the meeting's agenda was finally approved. McCrary said the item should not be added because technically the subject should have been advertised so that all residents knew it was going to be discussed. Supervisor Dale Stuart agreed. He said the subject will be addressed in budget talks with department heads Tuesday and Wednesday. He added that would be the appropriate time to talk about how to take care of the problem.

"Comments like the most convenient or appropriate time don't sit well with me because a more appropriate time won't come,

McGee said. Finally a motion passed to approve the agenda without Thendara. Wallace and McGee were the only dissenting votes.

Most of the audience members left at that point, frustrated because they wanted informa-tion. People who are new to the neighborhood don't think they should be assessed again. (Well, maybe the school didn't have a partridge, or a large-trunked perennial. But it did once feature a beleaguered silk ficus in its main alcove - and God only knows what was making those strange sounds from inside of it.)

At long last, Leh

For the past few years, however, the school seems to have stopped reinventing itself. Of course, change continues. Walls and ceilings are being ripped out for renovations this year and a new group of students has entered the building through the latest redistricting plan, while others have left. But even with ongoing upheaval at the surface, something deep within the school is becoming more and more settled.

According to Lesley Banycky, Pine Knob's reading specialist and a veteran staff member, the school's principal - K.C. Leh has played a major role in buildhe school's solid climate. In ing her third year at the Pine Knob helm — the longest period that a principal has been there since 1990 — Leh has been a child advocate, a team-builder and a "can-do" voice, Banycky said recently.

It's been contagious.

"The expectations she (Lela) sets for herself, as well as for staff and students, is extremely high, but she provides the support necessary to meet those standards," Banycky said. "In the time she has been here, she has displayed nothing but a posi-tive, 'we can do it' attitude — no matter what the circumstances...

In a recent interview with Leh, the Pine Knob principal admitted that she has helped anchor Pine Knob. However, Leh said her suggestions and ideas have been an easy sell because she and the staff have been of the same mindset from day one.

We've had some people come and we've had some people go, but the foundation (of the effort) is a terrific staff that really wants to do what's best for kids," Leh said. "They have done every single thing I have asked them to do in the two years I've been here. I'll say, 'I think this is best for kids. Let's give it a try. If it's not, we can talk and analvze it.'

Meeting diverse needs

It's a good thing that Leh and her staff agree on so much because Pine Knob students are all over the educational board in talents and needs. Leh pointed out that if the school population seemed diverse last year, it's even more so this year, with the district's new elementary attendance lines. The change is most obvious in Pine Knob's ESL (English-as-a-Second-Language) A nonexistent Pine Knob 10 years ago, ESL is school among the top two or three. "We're in the area that had existing apartment complexes, existing rental properties," she said. "But all the new develop-ments (that are going up in Pine attendance area) are the big buck homes." Because the Pine Knob's stu-dents come to school with a variety of life experiences, Leh said she and her staff need to focus on each child's individual circumstance. Socio-economic status and a two-parent home don't necessarily immunize a student from problems, they've found.

just met with the (school's) social worker and the psychologist the other day," the principal said. "We know we can't just look at the needs of the kids. We've got to look at the needs of the parents. And with some of it, it doesn't matter if your child is in the $300,000 home or getting benefits from the govern-ment. There are problems going on in households."

Setting the pace

But though increased diversity - and a torn-apart building bring with it some unique teaching challenges, Leh said that she and her staff have passionately rallied around a common belief: 'Our kids are worth whatever it takes.'

As a result of that kind of dedication, Pine Knob has become a district trailblazer, she remarked.

"(People from) other buildings would probably laugh reading this, but I feel that Pine Knob is on the cutting edge of a lot of what's going on in this district now. We're the ones charging now. We're the ones charging ahead. We're the ones leading it. I get calls from other buildings asking, 'So how are you doing it over at Pine Knob?" How ARE they doing it over at Pine Knob?

Well, according to Banycky, Pine Knob jumped at the chance to participate in "writing workshop training" under the direc-tion of Linda Denstaedt, a Clarkston High School teacher and district writing expert.

"While several schools are not involved in the training (today)," Banycky said, "Pine Knob was the initial site and continues to be the building where Linda does the majority of her work due to the enthusiasm of our staff" staff.

And apparently, Denstaedt and Pine Knob are onto something.

On the 1998-99 MEAP test, Pine Knob's fifth-grade boys scored 85.4 -+ 15.7 points higher than the school's fifth-grade boys fared in 1997-98. Meanwhile, Pine Knob's fifth-grade girls continued to score above the district average with 88.6.

Additionally, Banycky pointed out that Pine Knob teachers have been willing to experiment with parts of the district's literacy plan. "The majority of the teachers are working hard to include small guided reading groups in their classrooms, as well as providing more opportunity for independent reading," she said. Pine Knob's staff has also worked on a building-wide plan to increase student success with high-frequency spelling words, she added. In that effort, teachers are focusing on spelling and phonics instruction in the context of "real reading and writ-supply room floor to see who gets the last pack of orange construc-tion paper. Still, the principal said that school folk — like most adults — can always brush up on the lessons they learned in kindergarten. "You treat each other with respect and kindness," Leh tells them. "You're friendly in the them. You're mendy in the hallways. And if you've got an issue, you go and talk directly to that person. You don't tell 16 people in the (teacher's) lounge." While that kind of directness might scare the bejeebers out of some administrators, Leh charges fearlessly ahead, with loyal support. Her upfront approach has not only charged the working style of the building, it's received rave reviews from teachers and parents.

April Copeman, Pine Knob's PTA president and a seven-year parent volunteer there, credits Leh for being the ultimate team player. Copeman said the mother of two is truly able to see all sides of an issue because she knows what it's like to be a principal, a parent, a teacher and a

"If a teacher can't get it through to a (mischievous) student, she can," Copeman said with a smile. "Kids respect her. They know she means what she says. You don't often see the same kids back in her office."

Beams away

While a kind of renaissance seems to be happening at Pine Knob, it's hard to miss the school's current state. Exposed pipes stare down from ripped out ceilings. Walls are gone. The principal's office is history. And classrooms have been relocated in a kind of "52-card pickup" design.

Ugly? You bet. But, then again, think about what extensive cosmetic surgery ultimately did for Cher.

According to George White, the district's renovation supervisor and a past Pine Knob princi-pal, it'll all be worth it. The school's makeover is expected to be finished next fall. By that time, the 38,000-square-foot building will have morphed into a 56,700-square-foot educational palace with updated colors, spa-cious classrooms and lots of natural light.

Pine Knob's principal from 1984-1991, White recently described the school as it was during his tenure.

"It was a blend of socio-economic backgrounds — the melt-ing pot of the community," White "The students worked hard said. and would respond when asked to do something. And because of the efforts of the teachers, the students performed beyond expectations

But while the school was diverse even then, White said there was never a need for an ESL program.

More history

Janet Thomas, a Clarkston chool Board member and a Pine Knob parent during the '70s, echoed White's comments.

'ESL didn't exist back then." Thomas said recently. "I knew of only one person in the community who spoke Spanish — and he wasn't from the Pine Knob attendance area."

Thomas, who helped plant trees in Pine Knob's original landscaping, described the school as it operated in the 1970s.

It just gets passed to a different person at each staff meeting. It can be for something absolutely hilarious, or it can be more from the heart because someone's done something really cool." Leh said staff members are expected to display the terminally tacky trophy in their class-rooms or work areas.

But that's been just one of the principal's offbeat ideas for eam-building. The first few weeks that Leh arrived on the Pine Knob scene, she encouraged her staff members to act like geese (minus the droppings part, of course). She even urged them to honk in unison. (They did.)

Even with stable leadership, however, the Pine Knob family sailed on shallow budgetary waters with throngs of students.

And then there were the rugged-looking construction workers standing near the children - all there to participate in a ceremony that will be remembered for years to come. Calvary Evangelical Lutheran Church, organized in 1961, origi-nally dedicated its place of worship at 6805 Bluegrass on Dec. 10, 1962. Since then, the building has undergone four more dedications. The fifth should be before the end of this year.

"If not, we'll have to take out the new cornerstone," Walters said, laughing. One of them reads 1999.

The cornerstone to the left of the new entrance says "Come as living stones." The passage is from I Peter 2: 4-10.

A tour of the addition shows it will house office space for the ministers, the front office, an enlarged nursery, the fellowship hall and an expanded worship area

"We were really crowded in our old space," said church mem-ber Wilbur Scott of Independence Township. Walters said the three weekly

Sunday church services average about 400 worshippers.

New 'symbol of learning' graces OU Honors College

Oakland University's Honors College unveiled a new symbol for knowledge, an outdoor sculp-ture by Joseph Wesner.

Ann Nicholson, Oakland's board of trustees vice chair, and Jim Nicholson, her husband. donated the piece to honor the opportunities the Honors College provides for highly motivated students who seek an unusually challenging education

The circular, metal Echo Cog-nitio adds the finishing touch to the new Honors College hall, which opened in 1997. Echo Cog-nitio is outside the Honors College at 112 Vandenberg Hall, where student traffic is brisk. It also can be viewed from the large, glass windows in the Honors College student lounge. The work is the second Wesner outdoor sculpture to grace the OU campus; the artist's Motherswell is on the lawn in front of South Foundation Hall. Wesner is also creating pieces for the new Comerica Baseball Park in Detroit and DaimlerChrysler Corporation in Auburn Hills.

"The sculpture has to do with understanding and wisdom flowing around like the curves of the building. It symbolizes the recurring cycles of human vision, imagination and knowledge said Brian Murphy, Honors College director.

The Honors College's contem-porary new home, Dr. Alvin R. Larson Hall, symbolizes the college's independent role and OU's commitment to modernization. Larson was a longtime OU benefactor. The hall's curved glass design represents the ambition of the college's often untraditional students, Murphy said. This fall marks the third consecutive year of record-breaking enrollment in the Honors College. The college has 350 students.

"The Honors College allows qualified students to pursue advanced course work and research and to expand intellec-tual boundaries," OU President Gary D. Russi said. "It is an outward symbol of academic quality at Oakland University and it plays a key role in preparing our students for the 21st Century workplace and society."

Russi thanked the Nicholsons for their generous gift of the sculpture.

Ann Nicholson said she hopes the piece will become part of the Honors College's unique identity. "We hope it will give a lot of pleasure to Oakland students for generations to come," she said.

It's chic to have a little animal print in your closet

Sift through the closet of any welldressed woman, and you will most likely find something in animal print.

True, animal prints are one of those recurring trends; they never really go out of style. But, this season they're all the rage. Pony hair and zebra prints, which have always signified spunk and vigor, are especially in vogue. Best of all, these black-andwhite prints undoubtedly inject basic black garb with an instant shot of "glam."

If you don't already have a dash of cheetah or zebra somewhere in your closet, now is the ideal time to acquire some. Animal prints are everywhere this season; if you can wear it, chances are you'll find it in an animal print. The look has literally spilled over into every clothing category, from purses to coats, and into every price point, from Neiman Marcus to Target. No matter

Local jewelry designer Sharon

Meyer believes women still have a long way to go when it comes to expressing individual style.

self-assertiveness or confidence in what they like to wear," said the 40-

I think women should have more

When a client recently asked Meyer which way the face of a cameo ring should be worn - should it face toward others or the ring wearer? -Meyer defiantly replied "you want to wear it facing you, you want to wear it for you

Meyer's philosophy also informs her work as a jewelry designer. Meyer creates a broad range of jewelry that suits many women's personal styles. "My jewelry gives a woman an opportunity to be herself and be unique," said Meyer, who has been creating mostly one-of-a-kind jewelry since she was 24. Her company label is called Amalgamations, and all her designs are manufactured locally. Given the range of clothing and accessories available for purchase today, women can and should be making increasingly personal style and fashion choices, she said. Just consider the range of skirt lengths typically available in an average department store, said Meyer. "There's so much available to us now, not just with skirt lengths but with textures and fabrics, that you don't have to stay with the mainstream with jewelry." Besides, said Meyer, "to me, you vear jewelry for yourself."

Meyer's pieces, which has been described both as having a Zen quality and being very feminine, are regularly carried by Neiman Marcus stores across the country in both the retailer's designer and precious jewelry departments.

Arf Loft in Birmingham is slated this month to begin selling Meyer's jewelry, and Jacobson's stores formery carried her work. Her pieces also have been showcased in several museum gift shops. Prices range $60 to $25,000 depending on the materials used.

Meyer is particularly fond of tourmaline, smoky quartz and garnets, but uses both precious and semi-precious stones and 14-karat gold and sterling silver. People also comment on how Meyer combines - and seems to fuse - color. Typically, the jewelry designer works with a limited number of colors since "the simpler, the less amount of colors in the piece, the more wearable is the piece," she said.

Fit and comfort are other chief concerns for Meyer. "I wear my own work. I know how it feels and I know how it should fit." In addition to making sure her pieces are lightweight and don't inhibit movement, Meyer, for instance, positions necklace pendants where they will sit over the wearer's heart.

While male gift purchasers are one of Meyer's biggest customers - a fact she attributes to her jewelry's femi-nine allure - she encourages women to develop and learn to trust their own sense of style. "You can have an innate sense, but you may not have the confidence in it. (Many women) just haven't let themselves express themselves," said Meyer.

But times have changed. "It's part of what women have evolved to. Fashion has been very male-dominated," said Meyer. "I think it's getting more equal. I really do, You're seeing so many more female artists, whether it's in fashion or in music'

Sharon Meyer's pieces are sold at Neiman Marcus, the Somerset Collection in Troy, and will be available starting Monday at Art Loft in Birmingham. For more information about Meyer's designs, call (248) 879-7345.

Sweaters are another way to introduce animal prints into your wardrobe. Bebe's cheetah print, Vneck, at $98, pairs well with both jeans and leather pants.

Try a few animal print accessories, At Neiman Marcus, for example, animal print goes utility chic with a leopard print belt bag. You can wear the belt alone or with its detachable pouch. It's a double-duty find for $110. Most people can always use a new pair of gloves. About seven years ago the store began carrying a little furniture.

Victorian Village carries mostly hand-carved mahogany imported from Indonesia. Gamble said when they first started selling furniture, they bought from someone else and picked and chose what pieces they wanted. Buying direct from Indonesia is less expensive for them and the savings are reflected in reasonable prices, she said.

The store also carries products from Kimball, Kingsley and Carleton McLendon. Shoppers can find dining room sets, including one piece with stylized eagle heads on the back of each chair. Headboards, dressers, armoires, decorative suits of armor, lifesize wooden American Indian figures, framed pictures and tables are all on display. Everything can be bought off the floor. The store also has a catalog to order from, Gamble said.

All the outdoor furniture is aluminum and is prepped and painted after they receive it. Victorian Village has benches, the aforementioned lampposts, planters, urns and patio furniture. Gamble said they have had good response from other mer chants and customers so far who come in to check out the merchandise. This is what we hoped for the walk-in traffic," she said. She added that more and more people are looking for Victorianstyle pieces even if they don't have a huge Victorian home to put them in. She said picking up small things and putting them in the right place can give the desired effect. As people try to get a cozier feel to their homes, Victorian decor fits in with what people view as comfortable, she said. "People like to go back (in time)," she said. # Author of young-adult books next in OCC writer's series

Author Robert Cormier will be featured in the next program of the Writers Live Series at Oakland Community College's Royal Oak Campus. The pro-gram begins at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 19, with the author reading passages from his award-winning novels, followed by a discussion, and question and answer period, Admission is free and the public is invited.

The Writers Live Series is held in the campus's Lila Jones Johnson Theater in downtown Royal Oak. An afterglow and book signing in the theater lobby follow the program.

Cormier is a widely-read author in the genre known as "young adult literature." Newsweek has called him the "Teenagers' Laureate" and his. novel, The Chocolate War has been compared to JD Salinger's The Catcher in the Rye and William Golding's Lord of the Flies.

Cormier creates stories that are suspenseful, psychologically thrilling and, because of his refusal to patronize, often bleak in outlook. He has said that he sees his novels as an antidote to the artificial realism of television, where one is aware the hero will survive to reappear the following week. His use of vivid figures of speech to evoke images and emotions without long descriptive passages appeals to young people geared to the action-packaged Television Age.

many honors Cormier's include a Maxi Award and the National Council of Teachers of English Adolescent Literature. Assembly (ALAN) Award. His books repeatedly appear on the best book lists of the American Library Association, The New York Times, and the School Library Journal.

ecently returned from a wonderful food, wine and more trip to northern California. I had the good fortune to eat in many of San Francisco's unique and fine restaurants including: Zuni, Chez Pannisse, Mil-lennium, The Slanted Door, and Bixs. After eating my way through San Fran, I headed toward wine country with no particular agenda. It being my first time in northern California. I knew I wanted to experience, as many wineries as time would permit. Upon my arrival in wine country I landed in Callastoga, famous for its natural hot springs, mud baths and general spa like environment. Callastoga is nestled at the north end of the Napa Valley. I set out on my mission to find the most unique "smaller vineyards" Napa had to offer. ుక

Cycling

As luck would have it, I happened by the Get Away Bike Shop. My usual six or seven day exercise routine had been compromised many days and meals before, so I decided to investigate Vineyard cycling tours. I ended up helmet in hand the next morning with our bike leader; Dave, ready to see, do and taste it all! Off we went; up and down the steep Napa countryside touring some of the interesting smaller vinevards.

On the tour we were introduced to wine from vineyards whose product never sees distribution. Only insiders know how to find it.

Trees

From the very first vineyard we entered I noticed olive trees, and lots of them. As the wine tasting and tours progressed so did my questions to winemakers about their olive trees and what they do with all those olives

Many of the vineyards are squashing grapes and pressing olives side by side. I learned that winemakers are very proud of their silvery branched olives trees and often will run out of their first press of olive oil before their latest wine release.

While my bike buddies were looking for their second glass of wine I was asking someone to pass the bread and spill some oil. At almost every vineyard from where I purchased wine, I also picked up a bottle of their glossy green finest. At some vineyards, I left the wine behind and opted for olive oil only

it's 'reel' good to introduce fish into your diet

By PEGGY MARTINELLI-EVERTS SPECIAL WRITER

Think back to your childhood. How often did your family have seafood?

Perhaps it was fish on Fridays. Or maybe an occasional tuna sandwich. If your experience cooking fish is limited to those sticks or a can of tuna, it's time to explore new waters.

Knowing that fish and seafood are healthy and delicious, it is a good idea for all of us to include more of it in our diet. There are over 1,000 different species of fish and shellfish harvested from the wild or raised by aquaculture. These can become a part of everyone's diet both at home and in restaurants. Many of us don't eat fish at home because we think it is tricky to cook. But most seafood is easy to prepare and can be cooked to be appealing to even the picklest little eaters.

Kids and fish

The National Fisheries Institute says that seafood sales to the. younger generation (35 to 50) are lacking. An NFI commissioned study reported that fewer than 30 percent of younger consumers identified themselves as moderate seafood users. Since fish can be a wonderful source of protein and nutrients, it is a good idea to intro-duce fish to our children.

If your experience cooking A neighborhood in Clarkston looks forward fish is limited to its annual visit from to those Uncle Dick, an Arizona sticks or a can relative of one of the of tuna, it's residents. up. If you don't have an Uncle Dick in your neighborhood, you can still introduce fish to your kids. The milder varieties of fish and seafood are usually better received. To begin, let kids try fried shrimp or fried clams dipped in red shrimp sauce. Offer them a shrimp bowl when you serve them for a and firm:

Spectacular seafood The "10 minute rule" is a good guide to perfectly cooked fish. It applies to baking at 400° F, broil-ing, grilling, steaming, and poaching. (It does not apply to microway ing.) Measure the fish, whole, steaks, or fillets, at its thickest part. Figure 10 minutes of cooking time for each inch thickness of fish.

For example, a 1-1/4 inch thick fish steak would be done after about 12 minutes of baking. For frozen fish, do not thaw, but double the cooking time. Add five minutes cooking time for fish cooked in foil or in a sauce. When boiling shell-on shrimp, use a steamer pot (a perforated pot stacked inside a stock pot) so that the shrimp can be lifted out quick-ly. Immerse in boiling water for no more than two minutes. Lift out and dunk in ice water to stop the cooking, Set shrimp aside to drain. or two from the adult's shrimp . The shrimp will be succulent, juicy

Poach oysters in lightly boiling water for about a minute – until the edges just start to curl. Remove them immediately and you'll know you haven't overcooked them.

The omega-3 advantage

Scientific evidence suggests that omega-3 fatty acids can help reduce the risk of heart disease, the leading cause of death in the United States

Omega-3 fatty acids can make blood less likely to clot and block blood vessels. Consuming omega-3 fatty acids can decrease levels of some blood fats and possibly cholesterol. Omega-3 fatty acids are found almost exclusively in aquatic organisms, although smaller amounts are found in some plants and plant oils. Seafood is considered the best dietary source of omega-3 fatty acids. All fish and shellfish contain some omega-3. fatty acids but fatty fish generally contain more. (See related story on the relative amounts of omega-3 fatty acids in various fish and shellfish.)

Lean stuffed, baked peppers are full of flavor

ship between fat and nutrition-related diseases was ill defined in those years. Saturated fat had not yet become a household word.

I set about to create a stuffed pepper that reminded me of past autumns with its flavor, yet better suited my nutrition goals with its low-fat components. I tried a traditional recipe, substituting lean ground beef and turkey but I found the filling dry and crumbly After two other versions, this was the result. See what you think.

The ground beef that I used was top round of beef trimmed and ground once. With 1.7 grams of fat per ounce. it's lower than anything in the meat counter, including ground beef labeled extra lean. It's almost as low in fat as skinned chicken breast.

I omitted the usual rice, because I wanted the real meaty flavor that I remembered. The problem with using really low-fat ground beef is dryness. So I added my favorite pasta sauce to the meat for moistness

I used green and red bell peppers of medium size and blanched them. The prepared spaghetti sauce is one of my bows to convenience. The one that I use is Paul Newman's Sockerooni. It's relatively low in fat (2 grams per serving), but rather high in sodium (590mg) per 1/2 cup serving. If sodium is a concern, select a lower sodium sauce, of which there are many.

The peppers can be frozen after stuffing and before final cooking in the oven. I like to serve this dish at informal dinner parties.

STUFFED PEPPERS

- 1 pound beef top round, trimmed and
- ground once
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 garlic clove, chopped
- 4 medium bell peppers (I like to use a variety of colors)
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 egg white
- 4 ounces reduced fat mozzarella
- cheese (2 grams of fat per ounce)
- 4 fresh tomato slices
- 1 (32 bunce) jar spaghetti sauce, your favorite

Cut tops off peppers and remove membranes. Blanch peppers by precooking in boiling water until tender, crisp. Drain.

Brown meat, onion and garlic in nontick pan over low heat. Break up lumps. Add 3/4 cup spaghetti sauce, Worcestershire sauce, blend and then add egg white. Use mixture to stuff peppers.

Place 1 cup spaghetti sauce in 2-quart baking dish. Place stuffed peppers on top. Cover.

Bake at 350°F for 25 minutes, uncover. Sprinkle top with one half of the cheese. Place tomato slices on top, then remaining cheese. Return to oven and bake until cheese melts.

Serve remaining spaghetti sauce with pasta as a side dish to the stuffed peppers. Serves 4.

Shrimp and lobster are a bit higher, about 150 milligrams of cholesterol per 3-ounce serving. But, seafood tends to be very low in saturated fat, which is what turns your body on to making too much cholesterol.

One word of caution with fish and cholesterol is if you eat fish roe, caviar, fish liver, or the liv-ers of lobster and crab. These items do contain higher amounts of cholesterol and should be eaten infrequently if you are watching your cholesterol.

Some seafood is traditionally eaten raw. Oysters on the halfshell, sushi, sashimi and ceviche are examples some of popular raw fish dishes. This practice has inherent risks because cooking foods is necessary to destroy disease-causing organisms or parasites that occur naturally or that can be introduced during handling, storage or preparation. Whenever an animal food is eaten raw or partially cooked, the risk of illness is significantly increased. Bivalve molluscan shellfish like clams and oysters, which live close to the shore, can contain bacteria or viruses that can cause illness.

Bacteria and viruses from human and land animal sources.

can be carried into coastal waters with run-off from the land, in sewage discharges. or from other sources. These shellfigh, which obtain food by pumping water through their digestive system and filtering out small organisms, may collect bacteria and viruses from the waters in which they live,

People ingest these organisms when they eat these products Faw. The potential health risks associated with eating raw bivalve shellfish are usually directly related to the quality of the waters in which they have lived.

The same food safety measures that I advocate for meat and poultry also apply to fish and seafood. Remember to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold.

Avoid cross contamination by yashing hands, utensils, containers, cutting boards, etc. and cook seafood to an internal temperature of at least 145°F. A temperature of 160°F is recom-mended to kill bacteria, but can easily cause the seafood to be overcooked, dry and tough. Some fish from our Great Lakes and inland waterways may pose a health threat to some individuals. The Michigan

Natural Department of Resources produces "Michigan. Fish Advisory,", a booklet that provides information on our. state's fish and the health recommendations for consumption. You can call them for a free copy at (800) 626-4636 or view the booklet on the MDNR's Web site at: www.mdch.state.mi.us/,

Winemaker/olive oil producer Vince, explained "In many ways, olives are as complex as wine They are intimately connected to. the land and soil in which they grbw and share the same climate conditions."

ART MUSEUMS

Varieties

The best way to begin learning about the many varieties of table olives is to first understand the differences between, green and black varieties. As with most fruits, the color of an olive reveals its degree of ripeness. Green olives are picked early while not yet ripe, usually in the early autumn between late. September and October when the skin begins to change in hue. from leaf green to yellow-green and before the flesh softens. They are characteristically firm and crisp in texture and will often have a bit of a nutty flavor and will have the least amount of oil

Black olives are green olives that have been left on the trees through late fall, often some as late as December and January. As they are brought to their full ripeness, they are softer, sweeter and often a richer, more intense flavor. The term "black" is often not accurate, as many varieties are practically purple, with intermittent shades of brown nd red. The perfectly oval shaped fruits disguise the bitter truth that olives in the freshly harvested or raw state are virtually inedible. Olives in their fresh state have a high percent-age of harshly flavored Oleuropein. In order to extract this component, olives must be cured quickly after harvesting.

Processing olives

There are three general methods for processing olives. ■ Brine curing — Is a more traditional method to extract the bitter Oleuropein. It takes at least one month rather than days, and is the most common with small producers. The brine is a mixture of salt and water. The olives will soak in this solution for at least one month with the brine solution usually being changed on a weekly basis.

Lye curing — Is most commonly used by the large volume producers. Olives are immersed in an alkaline lye solution, which extracts their bitterness in a matter of days and often will strip away some good inherent taste characteristics.

■ Dry curing — The oldest curing method Olives are merely coated in course salt and left for weeks and often months. This will produce an olive with rich flavor intensity as well as impart a dry prune like appearance to the skin.

If your have the opportunity to explore our Western wine country, don't forget to ask the vineyards to pass the oil!

Potato gnocchi: Pasta light as a cloud

The first time I tasted gnocchi, Swiss friend served these light little dumplings, baked in a tomato sauce and topped with melted cheese. When she showed me how to make this lightest form of pasta, I was amazed to find it delightfully easy.

This pasta can be finger tipsized nuggets, shell-shaped curls grooved by the times of a fork, or flat, round, scallop-like disks. They are made from flour, egg and water, like other pasta, plus a bit of grated Parmagiano-Reggiano cheese.

Sometimes though, they are made with mashed potatoes, bound with just enough flour to form a soft dough. Another ingredient, such as ricotta cheese, pureed squash, or spinach may also be added, too. Potato gnocchi with spinach are my absolute favorite. When making potato gnocchi, the cooked potatoes should be peeled and mashed as soon as they are cool enough to handle. A secret for handling the hot potatoes is to cut them in half after cooking and spear each half on the tines of a fork. Holding the fork-speared potato in one hand, use the other hand to gingerly lift off its skin, using the tip of a small knife to help. Making gnocchi dough is primitively simple. I simply mash the potatoes with a fork, though you can use a potato ricer if you like. I use fresh spinach because it tastes so good and adds lightness to the gnocchi's texture. Since it is raw, you only have to rinse the leaves and spin them dry in a salad spinner. This takes little more time than defrosting frozen spinach and squeezing out its moisture, and it makes beautifully basil-green gnocchi.

Sauce these gnocchi lightly, so their sublime, fresh flavor comes through.

They keep in the refrigerator for 2-3 days and freeze well. To reheat, combine with tomato sauce, cover, and bake in a 350 degree oven

they are cool enough to handle, peel the potatoes. With a fork, mash the hot potatoes in a large bowl. Mix in the egg yolk and spinach.

Set a deep saucepan of water to boil.

Use the fork to blend the flour, cheese and pepper into the potato mixture.

When it starts to come together, gently knead the dough until it forms a soft ball; this may take only 4-5 turns.

Divide the dough into four pieces. Tear each into six walnut-size pieces and roll them each into a ball. Reduce the heat until the pot of water is barely simmering. Gently drop the gnocchi into the water, 6 at a time. They are done when they float to the surface, about 2 minutes. With a slotted spoon, transfer the cooked gnocchi to a soup bowl. Repeat, until all the gnocchi are cooked and divided among 4 bowls. Heat your favorite marinara or fresh tomato pasta sauce. Pour it over the 4 servings of gnocchi, and serve. Pass additional grated cheese, if desired.

BBSO marks 25 years of 'continuing the journey' theme

For the last two-and-a-half decades, Karla Lamphere, executive director of the Birmingham Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, has learned that sustaining a community orchestra is an endless journey of connect-the-dots.

It's also known as an ongoing effort to build an audience and search for funding.

From year-to-year and concert-to-concert, Lamphere and the BBSO have assembled a collection of the finest classical musicians outside of the internationally renown Detroit Symphonv.

The BBSO's two-decades of longevity and the overwhelming response to their last concert in August at The Community House clearly demonstrate that the BBSO is indeed getting local residents excited about their homegrown orchestrations.

The late summer concert featured the Johnny Trudell Band, and Motown singer Martha Reeves. Literally, according to Lamphere, there were people standing in the streets outside of the Community House listening to Reeves perform with the BBSO.

Twenty five years ago, BBSO began as the West Bloomfield Symphony A few years later, they changed to the BBSO and moved their performances to Seaholm High School.

Then in 1990, the nomadic symphony took up residence at Temple Beth El. Along the way, the BBSO has become the most awarded community symphony in metro Detroit, gaining recognition at the annual Detroit Music Awards.

Sensational art, or merely causing a sensation?

f the much-publicized exhibit at the Brooklyn Museum of Art has proven anything, it's that art is the most powerful form of communication

Talking about the "quality" of communication is another matter.

The exhibit's lighting rod, Chris Ofili's "Holy Virgin Mary," has received far too much attention. The vague figurative image of the mother of Jesus isn't particularly compelling, nor well executed. The idea of attaching elephant dung to the image to symbolize fertility and honor the artist's African heritage is a bit sophomorie, and not very interesting. What is more remarkable, however, is that the exhibit has caused such a sensation, which, by the way, is also the name and intent of the show. Many of today's artists are inspired by the "art of creating a spectacle. But look around. Spectacles are hard-ly confined to the art world. Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura's recent comments about religion being for the "weak-minded" are far more harmful and inflammatory. (Can a public official fairly represent the interests of those citizens he disrespects?)

Yet Ofili's work has gotten more media attention than Ventura's ridiculous opinion, It hasn't helped. that the mayor of New York City, who happens to be a candidate for the U.S. Senate, has found a push-button issue to serve his political interests.

Since the early cave paintings, artists have held up a mirror to the world. The images have been inspira-tionally beautiful, and chillingly grotesque. The finest artists have portrayed the paradox of the human con-dition – the good, bad and ugly.

Contemporary art, if anything, has proven to be more than an image. It can be a lightning rod to provoke discussion about a range of topics, including religion, war, homosexuality and gender.

And it can also explore the limits of self-expression in a democracy. Anyone who appreciates modernism realizes that art in the 20th century is distinguished by a search for new mediums and new forms of expression. The fact that some people, upon hearing about the content of the Brooklyn Museum's exhibit, have been shaken from the routine of their lives and have been forced to discuss the meaning of art might be an encouraging sign of the power of art. Unfortunately, being awakened

Our Town has come a long way since the first exhibition took over the walls of The Community House According to many local artists, Our Town is one of the most prestigious, if not the most prestigious, of fine arts exhibitions, awarding more than $10,000 in prizes to Michigan artists. This year more than 240 works of art will be on dis-play Oct. 14-17. Cranbrook Academy of Art director Gerhardt Knodel juried the show down from hundreds of entries submitted by 855 artists,

"It's always been an all-Michigan show," said Gerak. The name of the show, the concept for the show was it would consist of paintings or photographs, image and inspired by the Thornton Wilder play based on the universal theme that our town could be any town." Gerak, who came on board as chairwoman of Our Town in 1995, dropped the theme to allow all artists the opportunity to enter.

We thought the time had come to broaden the scope, to welcome other media, to make it an all-media, all-Michi-gan show," said Gerak who also serves on The Community. #### Role of art museums

Of course, for many, the issue at the heart of the Brooklyn Museum exhibit comes down to whether public funds should go to art museums that show controversial works.

Hardly an easy topic, made even more difficult by the slippery notions about what is art.

Locally, as county commissioners consider the political implications of the proposed tri-county art tax, opponents point to the "Sensation" exhibit as their greatest fear.

What would happen, for instance, if the DIA, Cranbrook Art Museum or the Museum of African-American His tory chose to exhibit "Sensation?" Would there be an outery to cut off public funding? Bet on it. Should funding be based on a curator's selection of exhibits? No way. Ultimately, it comes down to accepting the essential role of museums as a repository of artifacts and a reflection of contemporary culture. What is the meaning and function of culture? Go to a museum and see for yourself. Basically, without public funding, museums would have a much narrow er range of exhibits. Public funding is essential for museums to continue exhibiting a range of art, including traditional and controversial work What else would you expect in a pluralistic society?

DSO uncovers the riddle of singin' swing

It's more than a coincidence that Nelson Riddle was a trombonist before he became one of the most acclaimed and sought-after arrangers of his time. The ebb and flow of his arrangements resemble the pulsating pull and push of the human breath. From the 1950s through the 1970s, time, being on radio was the equivalent of being seen on MTV and VH-1. In the early 1950s, Riddle's work on Nat King Cole's "Mona Lisa" made him a much sought-after arranger. By the mid decade, he was working with Sinatra on what is considered the definitive works of each artist. The albums included "Songs for Young Lovers," and "Songs for Swingin' Lovers," which is Sinatra's all-time best-seller.

Until his retirement in the early 1980s, Riddle's arrangements could be heard on television shows and films, including the score for the 1974 film, "The Great Gatsby." His last recording was for Linda Ronstadt's 1983 album, "What's New."

Larry Teal jokes about the members of the World's Oldest Saxophone Quintet "being so old' they never accept engagements more than six months in the future.

Better see them while you can. They're not getting any younger. Teal and the rest of the quintet will provide the music at a German-flavored brunch to raise funds for the Michigan Jazz Festival at noon Sunday, Oct. 24, in the Watermen Center of Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Co-sponsored by Schoolcraft College Student Activities, the brunch raises funds for the admission-free Michigan Jazz Festival (scheduled for Sunday, July 16, at Schoolcraft). They will be accompanied by Jim Ryan, drums, Tim Teal, guitar and Ernie Daunter, bass.

Teal, at 69, proudly admits to being the baby of the group which formed about a year ago. Norm Gladstone, Nick Seiler and Fred Boldt are 71. Fritz Moore is 80. Together they have 275 years of experience as musicians.

Teal was a high school band director at Cass, Pershing, Osborne and Cody for many years before becoming director of the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. He retired at 65 only to end up teaching classical saxophone at Wayne State University.

He retired again when the school year ended last year and since then has spent lots of time practicing and getting "my lip back in shape." It had been a while since he played with Tex Beneke and Les Elgart as well

Oktoberfest Jazz Brunch

What: The Michigan Jazz Festival committee presents a brunch, Including German delicacies such as potato pancakes and bratwurst, and music by the World's Oldest Saxophone Quintet to raise funds for the admission-free jazz fest.

When: Noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24. Where: Waterman Center at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, between Six and Seven Mile roads, Livonia. Tickets: $25 and will not be sold at the door. For more information as vocalists such as Vic Damone and Rosemary Clooney. But all that practice was worth it. In July, the World's Oldest Saxophone Quintet received a standing ovation after playing their big-band music at the Michigan Jazz Festival.

"The guys in the quintet all played with Joe Vitale's Big Band when George Benson suggested we get together," said Teal, a Milford resident. "We've had so much fun since then and hadn't thought about going public. The Michigan Jazz Festival was one of the biggest surprises of the year and we hope to continue that kind of success. For the most part we're having a wail of a good time.

"Stan Kenton, Glenn Miller, Wood Herman, they had a spe cial quality, there was a lyrical quality of that music. There was a romance about it. There was a beauty about it recaptured in the World War II era, a special flavor to that music. It wasn't microwavable. You had to put it together yourself. It was home grown. There was a rapport those bands had with the audience.

Fritz Moore agrees it's the quintet's sound (the soprano, alto, tenor and baritone saxophones standard for the era of the '30s, '40s and '50s) that has made them popular with audiences. Moore, a Farmington Hills resident, began playing clarinet at 11 in a junior high music program in Marquette. He took up saxophone as a sophomore and by age 16 had joined the union.

Moore came to Detroit in 1941 and since then has "worked all. the clubs, hotels, ice and auto shows." He also toured from to New York to L.A. with Frankie Masters.

Moore refers to himself as a jobbing musician playing with whoever calls" him sometimes as many as four to five times a week.

"As far as being 80, it's something to just get there without dying," jokes Moore. "But seri-ously, I like to play and create something that's nice and fun. We're pretty loose and relaxed. Our music is something you don't hear too much anymore and mostly in a jazz vein. Many of the pieces frequently are arranged by Lenny Niehaus, a veteran writer/arranger who started with Stan Kenton. Some. of these things are difficult to play. We strive for a good blend and sound."

Midge Ellis first heard that sound at the Michigan Jazz Fes-tival. As coordinator of the annual events and concerts held to raise funds for the festival, Ellis jumped at the chance to have the quintet play at the brunch.

"One of our missions for the festivals is to promote jazz music during the rest of the year," said Ellis. "We had funds left over from the festival this year so we're holding a big-band clinic for junior high, high school and college students. Detroit area jazz bands are invited to come as well 10 a.m. to noon Nov. 10 at Clarenceville High School in Livonia."

For more information on the brunch or clinic, call Ellis at (248) 474-2720.

TERAVIED Wondrous sense of place overcomes flaws in 'Dreams'

"The Weight of Dreams," by Jonis Agee (Viking, $24,95). become involved his story. There, among the Nebraska Sandhills,

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1999

If you enjoy novels like "The Horse Whisperer," you may find "The Weight of Dreams" to your liking, too. Former Michiganian, Jonis Agee, when she writes VICTORIA of horses, cer-DIAZ tainly seems to know of what she speaks. In fact, Agee's equine characters sometimes take on more convincing life than do the human characters in this contemporary drama.

Obviously, though, Agee intends for "The Weight of Dreams" to be something more than a story about horses. She's writing here of human frailties and relationships, and at the heart of the action is yet another highly dysfunctional American family.

This one is headed by Nebraska rancher, Ryder Bonte, a hard-drinking, hard-bitten son-of-agun marked by a tattoo that resembles "a sick lizard."

Ty Bonte, the leading player in the story, is his anguished, surviving son. (A gentler, younger son, Ronnie, has died before the story begins in a horrific tractor accident.) Ryder's wife, Muriel, lives in town with their daughter, Charla, who plays such a tiny role we're mystified as to why Agee included her in the first place.

"The Weight of Dreams" begins with exceptional promise.

Agee paints such a luminous portrait of the lonely seventeenyear-old Ty that we immediately want to reach out to him or to he struggles to maintain the family ranch and gain the love of his parents, whose own terrible loss and pain may have permanently obliterated their capacity for love. One morning, Ty rides out alone to try to rescue what is left of a stranded cattle herd after a blizzard. What he finds comprises one of the strongest scenes in the novel and, thanks to Agee's way with words, we feel almost as if we are along when he makes a grisly discovery "One calf had been strangled in the fence, its tongue hanging in a pink icy petal. . . The streams of blood had frozen in long ribbons unspooling into the snow. An old. . .cow. . .had been crushed into the corner, her. . .eyes frozen open in a sheath of ice, lips rimed white. . . her belly had. . . ripped. The. . .bloody intestine ropes and spilling stomachs draped the wire.'

This is certainly no pretty picture, but it is powerful prose. And together with Agee's exquisitely-perceptive portrait of a boy in pain, her use of the language makes this book's opening section - titled "Chasing the Lightning" - into something highly special, almost breathtaking in intensity. Then, the novel takes a peculiar turn, and begins to lose some of its footing. In the following sections, set some 20-plus years after the first, Agee's characters sort of slip in and out of that originally engaging dimensionality. Sometimes, we feel as if we've been left with a collection of rather blurry types that we've met too many times before on other pages in other tales. There's the feisty horsewoman named Dakota who hitches up with Ty. There's the crooked horse trader. There's the taciturn Native American. There are mindless lunkheads specializing in "dirty work." Ty himself grows slightly tiresome, what with his repeated brawling and boozing and his tendency to hold his cards exceedingly close to his chest.

(No)B6

The plot grows weedy with confusion now and then, and some readers may find themselves a little dizzied, trying to remember just who did what to whom, and when, and where, and why.

Agee's romantic scenes seem a little tired and trite and frayed around the edges. There are odd bits of repetition scattered throughout the book that don't . enhance the story or the characters.

These people watch each other sleep a lot. To avoid unpleasant odors, they repeatedly breathe through their mouth, which causes them to ultimately "taste" the odor (why do we need to be told this more than once?). Dakota sniffles so much you'd sort of like to give her face a smack.

To further detract from "The Weight of Dreams," Agee's concluding scenes (especially one involving an airplane crash) are so unconvincing they hardly seem to belong in this story. Agee's 'novel, "South of Resurrection;" was reviewed in this column on its publication two years ago. At the time, it was lavishly praised for her indelible depiction of its setting, the Missouri Ozarks.

She deserves the same special kind of applause here for the way she brings the fierce beauty of the Nebraska Sandhills to these pages

When it comes to backdrops, this is an author who definitely has the touch.

McMillan, Oakhurst agree to pro alliance

I'd like you to meet your newest neighbor, and my newest friend in the world of golf, LPGA player Caroline McMillan. Mrs. McMillan, 35, has taken residence in West Bloomfield with her husband John and bouncing 15 week-old son Ian. "He's got quite a set of lungs on him," Mrs. McMillan said of wee Ian as we spoke at a volume level just above his cooing.

Mrs. McMillan revealed that she has reached an agreement to represent Clarkston's Oakhurst Golf and Country Club on the LPGA Tour. She will perhaps sport the Oakhurst G&CC logo on her bag, and may also conduct clinics at Oakhurst. "Oakhurst is really a great new club." Mrs. McMillan explained of the brand new Arthur Hills design devel-oped by Graig Valassis and his Franklin Golf Management company. "It is a beautiful place for me to prac-tice and attend social events. Oakhurst is now my home club."

In fact, Mrs. McMillan can see similarities between the Arthur Hills designed Oakhurst G&CC and Cowdray Park GC, the parkland course back home in England on which she began learning to play at age 11. Cowdray Park GC was designed in 1924 by J.F. Abercromby and Herbert Fowler, two of the finest free-hand British designers of the era before World War I, and the later of whom designed the famed Walton Heath GC in the early 1900's. The Oakhurst course, like Cowdray Park features hazards very natural in appearance. "Cowdry Park was a very old course owned by Lord Cowdry and my earliest golf instructor was a professional named Jimmy Thomson," Mrs. McMillan brightly explains. "I m very pleased to have been made an Honorary Member of Cowdry Park, and very pleased to be playing out of Oakhurst." Indeed, Clarkston is a long way from Suffex, England. How did this Liverpool-born British subject find herself in West Bloomfield?

Bill and Maureen Pierce raised and supported their daughter Caroline and her twin sister Jane in Suffex, near London. Caroline and Jane are twin sisters, though they were born on different days. Caroline, six years after showing an interest in the game, won the English Girls International Championship in 1980/then repeated that feat in 1981. As an amateur, she

The Clarkston Wolves set four swim records Wednesday, but it wasn't enough against the best of two schools.

The Wolves watched their record drop to 3-4 after a 101-84 loss to Lapeer Unified, made up of swimmers from both Lapeer East and Lapeer

West High Schools. Even in the loss, the Wolves did get record-setting performances Krista Roschek shaved a couple of seconds off the 200 freestyle mark with her 2:24 finish. Kelly Orris eclipsed the old 100 breaststroke record by four seconds, finishing the race in 1:24.

The 200 freestyle relay team -Danielle Buzzo, Teresa Kuhta, Megan Williams and Diana Doyle — beat the old record by five seconds, swimming

But the best performance of the night, in terms of record-setting times, came from the 400 free relay team, which managed to knock nine full seconds off the old record, finishing the race in 4:45.

"That was a really nice drop," Clarkston coach Kenwyn Chock said of the record. "That's the best of two different high schools there, and we stayed with them. It was a very good meet for us." Clarkston is at Royal Oak Kimball Tuesday. Meet time is 6:30 p.m.

Captains pull away to win

2nd-quarter burst helps Kettering keep Wolves at bay By BRAD KADRICH

SPORTS EDITOR bkadrich@oe.homecomm.net

As long as Waterford Kettering was missing early from the perimeter, the Clarkston Wolves stayed alive in their Oakland Activities Association Division I girls basketball clash with the Captains Thursday night. But as soon as the Captains started heating up, the Fat Lady started warming up, and the points continued mounting up as Kettering rolled to an easierthan-expected 51-32 win over the Wolves to maintain their hold on first place in the OAA I race.

The Captains, the defending league, district and regional champion, simply had too much game for the Wolves, who lost for the fifth time in six OAA I games.

Though the outcome wasn't all that surprising (the Cap-tains are 10-1 overall, 4-1 OAA I), the margin of victory amazed

-Clarkston coach Kettering coach Scott Woodhull.

"I didn't think we'd beat them like that," said Woodhull. "They've played everybody tough, and (Clarkston coach) Ann (Lowney) usually gives us fits."

Clarkston gave the Captains fits Thursday, too, but only for the first 14 minutes or so. Then Kettering put together an 14-2 spurt over the final 2:20 of the second quarter and never looked back while cruising to the win. Junior Devon Hillstrom led the Captains with 22 points, while senior guard Haley Slade scored 11 and junior guard Andrea Hillsey added six. Rachel Uchman led the Wolves with 10 points. Candace Morgan added nine for the Wolves (6-6 overall, 1-5 OAA I).

Good teams have character, especially when one is coming off a loss. Clarkston found out just how much character it possesses in that same predicament.

In front of a Homecoming crowd, the Wolves rebounded from a 21-14 loss to Troy last week as they pounded Rochester Adams 35-14 Friday in an Oakland Activities Association Division I game.

The win propelled the Wolves (6-1. 3-1) into the state playoffs for the first time in two years, where they will par-ticipate in three weeks in the newly expanded División I field of 32. "I told these guys that this game was a character check. That this was a chance to see what we are made of, said Clarkston coach Kurt Richardson. "We stepped it up and were able to bounce back

Although Clarkston received another fine running game from the 1-2 punch of senior Chris Mitchell and junior Rob Conley (10 carries, 46 yards), the Wolves used the passing attack to throw the Highlanders off the mark.

Meanwhile, Clarkston's defense-bycommittee was sterling once again, forcing Adams (4-3, 0-3) into four

What did we cause, four, maybe five turnovers?" asked Richardson, whose squad also forced four sacks. "I think those turnovers might have been a big difference in the game."

The fourth and final turnover came in the fourth quarter, when Clarkston held a 28-14 lead. Junior Cody Senkyr

"I attended Houston Baptist University on a golf scholarship and was a schoolmate of Scottish golfer Colin. Montgomery," says Mrs. McMillan, who confessed to having mixed emotions about the recent controversy surrounding Montgomery and the fiercely contested Ryder Cup Match-I understand Montgomery's father was driven from the course by hecklers," she states. "The British tabloid newspapers have been very hard on the Americans, and I suppose their behavior was a little overboard, but Sergio Garcia's antics were a little much, as well." Her studies at Houston Baptist, Political Science and History, both seem to have played a somewhat ironic role in the 1999 Ryder Cup Matches.

After finishing University, Mrs. McMillan turned professional in 1988, and her rockie year on the LPGA Tour was a challenge. Presumably with a typical British Stiff upper lip, Mrs. McMillan competed in 23 tournaments, but carned only $1,153 dol-lars. Without a loss of resolve, she again was forced to endure the LPGA qualifying tournament, and emerged back on the Tour the following season, and has been there since.

To date, the brown eyed Mrs. McMillan, who returns to Great Britain each summer to compete in the Weetabix Women's British Open, has won $900,937 on Tour, which places her 84th on the career money list. She dunked an ace at the 1990

Springfield Christian gets revenge, 1st league title

BY DANIEL STICKRADT STAFF WRITER dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

Revenge is sweet. Especially when a league championship is on the line.

Clarkston Springfield Christian got its revenge on visiting Rochester Hills Christian Thursday night with a 3-1 triumph, which clinched Springfield's first-ever Fundamental Baptist Athletic Conference Red Division championship.

Rochester Hills (8-3, 7-2) was the only team to beat Springfield in the league this season, posting a 4-2 win just over two weeks ago. "It's been a long time, but we finally did it. This feels really good," said Springfield veteran coach Tigg Vanaman. This was one of our goals at the start of the season and the kids have really played well."

Senior forward II 'This team played Jon Vanaman had a goal and assist to lead Springfield (10-4-0, 9-1). "A lot of the seniors on this team have played together since we were in junior high and we've been looking forward to this season for a while," said Jon Vanaman, the coach's son. "We didn't do well against them last year, we lost two them twice in the league. We came back and back them in the league tournament championship last year, but then we came back and lost to them in the regular season this year. This feels so good to beat them and win the league in one game," 5 For Rochester Hills, the loss was a third last season and tied for second this year. "I don't know where their heads were, but they were not in this game. I am a little disgusted because these guys can play a lot better.

Springfield got on the board on the game's first shot, when Vanaman took pass from junior forward Roger Vanderver and beat Rochester Hills senior keeper Chad Hulcy on a breakaway just 53 seconds into the game.

The host Eagles scored the eventual game-winner in the 26th minute when

Rochester Hills did cut the deficit to 2-1 before halftime when sophomore forward Rob Weaver knocked in a pass from senior forward Jason Hover past Springfield senior netminder Adam Armstrong, However, Springfield netted a second-half insurance tally just 1:43 into halftime when Vanderver scored off a breakaway from Vanaman.

Springfield outshot Rochester Hills 23-18, including 14-8 with shots directly on goal. Armstrong had seven saves for Springfield Christian.

"This team has played well together all season to earn this," said the elder Vanaman. "(Sophomore) Knoa Knapper has been outstanding in the center midfield position and a lot of guys have stepped it up. And we were finally able to win this league."

Slade hit a 3-pointer, junior Amanda Batcha sank a pair of free throws and Hillstrom converted a three-point play to make it 27-15. Candace Morgan interrupted the streak with a layup, but Slade hit another 3pointer and Kettering led 30-17 at halftime.

But Mitchell countered<sup>e</sup>with a 60-yard TD sprint of his own that upped the advantage to 28-14 with 9:14 left in the game.

"This was a huge win after losing to Troy and its nice to be in the playoffs again," said Richard-son: "But we can't let up. We play Berkley next week, and they are an improving team. # Dragons cagers can't stop Oak Park

With the duo of MyEsha Perkins and Courtne Ellis handling the scoring; and Felicia Guy acting as the first, last and best line of defense, the Lake Orion Dragons needed a nearperfect effort just to stay in their Oakland Activities Association Division II basketball clash with Oak Park Thursday.

It didn't help.

Perkins scored 21 points and had seven rebounds and Ellis tossed in 17 points of her own, including three 3-pointers, as the Knights handed the visiting Dragons a 68-39 loss...

The teams stayed close through the first eight minutes, with the Knights taking a slim 20-18 lead by the end of the first quarter.

But Oak Park held the Dragons to just three points in the second quarter, taking a 39-21 lead by halftime.

The Knights then put the game away with a 21-11 thirdquarter edge.

Guy didn't get on the score-board, but she did have 12 rebounds and 10 blocked shots.

Dawn Maynard scored nine points, as did Jodi Dempsey, who hit a pair of 3-pointers. Lindsey Hood also hit two 3pointers and scored six points. Lake Orion hosts Pontiac Northern Tuesday night. Game time is 7 p.m.

Phar-Mor Classic at Inverarry CC in Lauderhill, Florida. She was runner-up at the 1995 JAL Big Apple Classic, and claimed her first and only LPGA victory by winning that same prestigious event the following year. The triumph made the 1996 season her most successful, and as part of her award, she was given two airline tickets to Japan. "My husband and I used those tickets to take our honeymoon in Bali," she recalls. It was her new husband, John McMillan, who then convinced the former Mrs. Pierce to move to West Bloomfield when he was offered an important position here with the "number one ball in golf." Mr. McMillan is the regional sales representative for Titlest. The McMillans have settled nicely in Oakland County, and the relative nearness of a number of LPGA events make the location convenient.

Events in driving distance include tournaments in Lansing, Springfield, Illinois, Toledo, and two three other Ohio cities. Hav- pregnancy. ing played in two U.S. Women's Opens at Indianwood CC in Lake Orion, Mrs. McMillan was somewhat familiar with the wasn't a very good pregnant golfer," Mrs. McMillan admits. The walking was a real strain and I had trouble hitting the ball far enough to be competitive." Even before pregnancy, length not the strong suit of Mrs. McMillan, who, in her golf cleats, stands all of 5'3 *. Her driving average in 1998, for-instance, was only 223.19 yards, which ranked 180th on the LPGA Tour, and she was 174th in the Greens in Regulation category. Certainly a great deal of pressure is placed then on her short game, an area in which she performs with flying colors. In 1998, she led the LPGA Tour on the greens with a red, hot and now average of only 28.74 putts per round.

After three months of exercise and practice, Mrs. McMillan will return to play a full schedule of 20 to 25 LPGA events beginning in January. Aside from the challenge of returning her game to competitive status, she will face the heartwarming challenge of traveling alone with wee Ian, who will then be six months old. "Getting from 'point A to point

B' on tour from week to week will be difficult," she admits. "Each LPGA stop offers the 'Smuckers Center,' which is a day care sponsored by the jam company. It is a tremendous aid to those of us out there with children.

While one might wonder whether Mrs. McMillan could better use the services of a nanny or a caddie, the sight of her baby will certainly be a cheering presence at the end of each day on the golf course. The little lad will no doubt make the circuit's lonely hotel rooms more of a home away from home for Mommy McMillan. Back here at home, the members of Oakhurst Golf & CC and the readers of this newspaper have a neighbor to cheer for on the LPGA Tour.

In 1924, founder Elijah Brown sold the dealership to his two-sons, Mert and Frank Brown: Seventeen years later in 1941, Mert's son, Bill, opened Bill Brown Ford on Fenkell Avenue in Detroit.

The Livonia dealership opened in 1954, and was maniged by Bill's brother, Gilbert. The two dealerships merged into the Livonia location in 1962, the same year the used car facility was built...

Bill Brown died suddenly in 1975. His son, Ed, took over the business, and is still the company's head.

Since then the dealership has expanded and remodeled. A used car sales center sits a few stoplights west of the original

Selling cars is family affair at Bill Brown Ford

BY JILL HOCKMAN STAFF WRITER

jhochman@oe.homeco

After nearly 20 years of selling cars at Bill Brown Ford, Phyllis Bodenham almost never works with a stranger.

She's now selling cars to her original customers' children and grandchildren. Some Ford-lovers who've relocated to Florida drive home to Michigan to lease a car from her.

One of Bodenham's clients of many years recently stopped by the Livonia dealership with her daughter and her daughter's fiance: "She introduced me to her future son-in-law as a longtime friend of the family," Bodenham said.

She admits that some of her customers even buy a car before laying eyes on the vehicle. They firm up a lease's details by phone, then visit the dealership to sign the paperwork.

In fact, almost all of Bodenham's business is generated by return customers and referrals. "I rarely, rarely talk to a stranger," she said.

"You work really hard to get to that point," Bodenham said. "To build that respect and trust?

In an industry plagued by customer cynicism and a job market where employee turnover is high, a situation like Bodenham's is unusual.

What's more uncommon is that she's not alone in her longevity at Bill Brown Ford. The dealership's new car sales staff of 25 boasts an average time of 13 years with the company, according to Mike Schrieber, new vehicle sales manager. Many employees have been on board for 20 years or more, he said. Other departments boast similar records.

"We're almost like a large family," Schrieber said. In fact, different members of at least four real families now, work at the company, "People atick around because we take care of our employees as well as our customers."

The stability of the staff works as an advantage to customers, he said. "You know when you come back from your two-year lease, the same salesman will be here to help you," he said.

Long-time customers: Car saleswoman Phyllis Bodenham congratulates Nancy and Anthony Boland from Plymouth on the purchase of their new Ford Windstar. The Bolands have been buying car's from Bodenham since 1984.

The company's family-style service can be linked to its past. The Brown family started selling Ford cars to residents of Michigan's thumb area in 1914. The Sandusky dealership also Please see FAMILY, taking the second offer. This is a business decision – nothing personal. They wouldn't hesitate to lay me off or rescind the offer because of business conditions.

It is very common for a person to go through a long dry spell in a job search, then receive several offers at about the same time. However, it rarely happens that all the offers come in at once, allowing the candidate to weigh the advan-Hages and disadvantages of, each. In fact, don't be surprised if you get calls from employers and headhunters weeks or even months after you have landed a new posi-tion.

M Ask for after hours or Saturday Interviews. Most hiring authorities realize that many good candidates are currently employed and are likely to have time management problems. People are remarkably accommodating, at least for the first Interview.

Answer:

Call it prudent. If your current employer discovers that you are looking, your exit could be expedifed.

Companies usually find out that an employee is in the market in one of two ways. First, your patterns and habits change: long lunches, phone calls with the door closed, unusual and ambiguous requests for time off. Eventually, your boss confronts you.

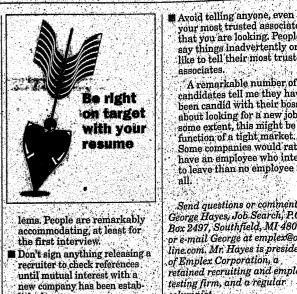

Second, word gets back to the

In some disciplines or industries, everyone seems to know every-one else. If you are seen by an acquaintance in the offices of a competitor, you're dead. People love to gossip.

Don't count too heavily on the confidentiality promised in newspaper ads or by company recruiters. While few people would intentionally blow your cover, sloppiness in handling resumes or loose lips can quickly do you in. There is always a risk; but try these ideas to minimize the odds

- 🔳 Emphasize in your cover letter that your search is CONFI-DENTIAL (bold, caps, under lined), Stress that you should only be called at home.
- Consider omitting your company's name from your resume (recruiters won't like this, but it shouldn't affect the response rate). Just outline the industry in broad terms under Current
- Empleyer. When visiting a recruiter, notice the resumes on her desk. Are they face up or face down? A pro keeps them face down in case someone a candidate knows happens to walk into the office. Don't leave your resume if it won't be handied properly.
- Ask for after hours or Saturday interviews. Most hiring authorities realize that many good candidates are currently employed and are likely to your most trusted associate, that you are looking. People say things inadvertently or like to tell their most trusted associates. A remarkable number of candidates tell me they have been candid with their bosses about looking for a new job. To some extent, this might be a function of a tight market.

Some companies would rather have an employee who intends to leave than no employee at all.

Observer & Eccentric advice your New Homes-Real Estate Hometown CLASSIFIED NO Page 1, Section

Location sells Plymouth Township homes Small town is returning

On the hot August night of the 1999 Dream Cruise, the circuit was jampacked with a crush of local crowds.

This phenomenon spotlighted the rock-solid return of small town U.S.A. We have come full circle in witnessing an amazing resurgence of the once-neglected and almost-forgotten small towns of the 1900s suburbs. The dawn of this century saw the forming of small enclaves of tree-lined neighborhoods with their charming village shops, town halls and shaded parks. However, these all but disappeared in the post-WWII crush of subdivision construction. Our towns' were replaced with ubiquitous housing tracts whose landmarks became malls, huge parking lots and a tan-gled lacing of freeways.

The decline of the small towns and cities was due to many factors. The automobile and freeway construction certainly changed our basic transportation systems. But, as important, the GI bill (which was set up to pay for housing) neglected to support needed towns and commerce. Along with shortsighted zoning regulations, these set the pattern of huge gridded tracks of subdivisions. Without centralized towns and civic areas, the identifiable communities we once knew seemed a thing of the past. It wasn't until the very end of the 1970s that a resurgence of the values that helped build our small towns returned. What built those towns in the early 1900s grew out of a need: without reliable transportation you had to be near the train stop for supplies and services.

With today's technology, we have access to most everything in the world, yet we're choosing to move back to the small towns. Whether you're in Birmingham, Farmington, Plymouth or one of the other downtowns in our area, a dramatic rise in property values is undeniable.

Whether it's the allure of a side walk coffee shop vs. a chain food drive-up window, a series of storefronts vs. a mall entrance, or just being able to leave your front porch and stroll into town, the small towns and their surrounding neighborhoods are back.

John N. Miller, AIA, senior associate - TMP Associates, Bloomfield Hills

Landscaping, air conditioning and a full kitchen appliance package are included in base price at Hunters Park, a small detached condominium community in Plymouth Township. About half of the 27 lots are still available on the southeast corner of Beck and N. Territorial roads jut south of M-14

The location, itself, is a big selling point.

"Accessibility to M-14 is quick, as well as convenient to downtown Plymouth," said Graig S. Corbell, the builder.

"All of our (building) sites have some advantage, whether on a cul-de-sac, walkout or daylight (basement)," he added. "We don't have any plain sites. All have a special feature.

"I think one of the best features here is people want the comfort of a family home but the benefits of a condo - no lawn maintenance, snow removal," said Kim Abdenour, sales représentative.

Overall, I think they (visitors) are most impressed with the finishings in here, the amount of windows, the layshe added. "They're very pleased out. M-14 is right there, (I-) 275 a few miles to the east, because with their lifestyle; they travel a lot."

Most of the buyers so far are business owners or professional people who already own a couple other homes, Corbell said.

They want to downsize but not downsize completely," he said. "They like the floor plan, the first-floor mas-ter and the size of it.

We offer probably the most extensive option list I've seen," Corbell added, citing a gourmet kitchen package, molding treatments and bay win-

"I think the home looks larger than it is," Abdenour said, "I think a lot of that is the ceilings."

We have, essentially, cathedrals throughout except for the kitchen," Corbell said. Although two different sizes of the same story-and-a-half floor plan are available, buyers have a choice of how they want to handle bedroom, bath and loft possibilities upstairs.

"The only thing limiting us here for customization is the floor print," Corbell said.

Both floor plans also include a separate tub and shower in the master. a first-floor laundry, fireplace, basement and at least a two-car garage with the 1.1

Tips on buying, using portable generators

homeowners, and businesses rely on portable power generators to keep lights and appliances running until service is restored.

A portable generator is designed to run a limited number of appliances at a time and is typically powered by gasoline or diesel fuel

Generators usually cost between $600 and $3,000 -depending on size and features. The Michigan Public Service Commission presents some important points when deciding to buy and use a portable generator.

Sizing

E2(NO)

To determine the size of the generator you will need, total the wattage of the lights and appliances you will need to power.

In the event of an electrical For example: furnace blower ower outage, many Michigan 1,200; refrigerator, 600; microwaye oven, 700; two 100-watt light fixtures, 200; total, 2,700 watts.

Appliance wattage varies these figures represent averages. Allow up to three times the normal running watts for starting up some appliances such as refrigerators.

typical portable generator is rated at 2,400 to 7,500 watts. Most household appliances are rated at 120 volts. Some larger. electric appliances (e.g., electric range, electric clothes dryer, well. pump, some air conditioners) are rated at 240 volts. If you want to power this type of appliance as well as smaller ones, you will need a generator that is rated at 120-240 volts.

Installation

installation and operation instructions for your generator. There are two ways to safely install and operate a portable generator: Direct hook-up; Portable generators are designed to power a limited number of plug-in appliances like your refrigerator, freezer, and lights or any other combination of appliances you determine to be essential. These and other home appliances not permanently wired to the electrical system can be powered directly from the generator through a heavy-duty (at least 12 gauge), polarized extension cord. The extension cord should be less than 100 feet long to prevent power loss and overheating. Safety transfer switch: Some generators can be permanently connected to your electric system

Alway's read and follow all to energize your home's wiring in , the event of a power outage. This type of installation requires a safety transfer switch. Before starting your generator, you must activate the switch. The switch disconnects your home's wiring system from the electric company's system and allows electricity to flow from the generator to your home's circuitry.

The switch prevents the gen-erator from back-feeding electricity into the power lines and possibly causing injury or death to unsuspecting workers trying to restore power. The switch also prevents damage to your generator, wiring, and appliances when electric service is restored. Only a licensed electrician should install a transfer switch.

instructions in the manufacturer's instruction manual.

Always follow local, state, and national fire and electric codes. A permit may be required for installation.

Always use a heavy-duty (at least 12 gauge) UL-listed extension cord (less than 100 feet long) from the generator to your appliances – being careful not to overload the cord.

■ Always make sure that the total electric load on your generator does not exceed the manufacturer's rating,

Always properly ground the generator according to the manufacturer's instructions. 🖩 Never operate a generator indoors or in an unventilated area. It produces deadly carbon monoxide fumes.

Always store gaseline and Always follow the safety diesel fuel in approved containers and keep it out of the reach of children.

Never refuel a generator while it is running. Shut it off and let it cool for 10 minutes before refueling to minimize the danger of fire. Parts of the generator are very hot during operation. Avoid contact and keep children away. Protect the generator from rain and other moisture sources to prevent electrocution; When not in use, store the generator in a dry location such as a garage or shed.

A portable generator can be a good, temporary source of elecy tricity during a power outage. To avoid serious safety hazardşi when using a generator, it is important to follow all operation and safety instructions provided by the manufacturer.

Mid-October correct time to feed grass more nutrients

(NAPS) - Autumn is the most crucial time to fertilize because the grass begins to store nutrients and sugars for the harsh months ahead.

Although turf growth slows in the fall, roots continue to grow, even in cool weather. To encourage a thicker root system and a denser lawn, fertilize about one month before turf goes dormant, usually mid- to late October. Fertilizer provides nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and potassium (K). Nitrogen promotes leaf growth and gives grass its healthy green color. Too much nitrogen; however, can make grass susceptible to disease, while minimizing drought tolerance and root growth. Fall applications of nitrogen can provide the benefits without the risk of producing an unhealthy turf.

Phosphorus stimulates healthy root development and potassium helps turf resist disease. Because this is the time to take special care of the lawn's root system, make sure the fertilizer contains a high percentage of phosphorus. If you experienced pesky broadleaf weeds like dandelion, soil compaction and removes clover and plantain marring your lawn this past season, apply a pre-emergent weed killer during the fall.

Other important winterizing techniques needed for an impres-sive lawn next spring include aeration, mowing and raking.

Aeration – Aeration reduces excess thatch, which allows fertilizer nutrients, sunlight and air to infiltrate the soil. This helps the turf store necessary nutrients and water to improve its : health and stress tolerance, directly benefiting the lawn's appearance next summer. Mowing-Mowing too short in cool fall weather can be harmful. During the autumn months, maintain mowing height to the recommended distance to help stimulate stunted roots.

Raking - Don't forget to remove all large piles of leaves, twigs and other debris. These elements break down slowly, suffocating the lawn and contributing to rot, mold and other turf diseases.

Attorneys and Realtors may play important roles in your next real estate transaction. I am a firm believer that you should use the services of a professional when entering into a large financial obligation. We live in a much more complicated world today when compared to the simple times of the past, Real estate purchases have also become more complex.

AND REALTOR"

The typical sale requires marketing of the property and negotiation of an agreement of sale, mortgage financing requirements and documents, a home inspection and/or a home warranty, a survey, title insurance, and closing papers that include a legally executed deed which conveys ownership from seller to buyer. Some of these functions should be handled by a Realtor® while other areas are the rightful domain of an attorney. When using both of these professionals, be sure to seek their advice on the issues that are their particular specialty. Here are some specifics:

SERVICES OF AN ATTORNEY

As you would expect, an attorney should be consulted for legal matters. One of the typical services provided by an attorney includes examining a written offer to purchase real estate. Don't, however, ask the attorney to give you advice regarding the amount of the offer. This is a common error made by buyers who seek legal advice. Your Realtor® is the person who has the facts regarding current values and recent sale prices. You may also want to have your attorney present at the closing to check the title insurance commitment, mortgage documents, and the deed.

SERVICES OF A REALTOR®

Although not a legal expert, your Realtor® does know how to price your home, market it to the buying public, and negotiate the eventual selling price. After terms are agreed upon, you should also be able to rely on assistance from your Realtor® when selecting a mortgage lender and following up on all the details of the closing process.

ADVICE: Don't buy or sell real estate without the advice and guidance of a professional. Be sure, however, to use their services properly. Seek legal advice from an attorney and real estate advice from a Realtor®
