CLARKSTON

The travelers have literally seen the light. Though just a flicker in the dark, they know it very well may be their only hope of survival.

"We concluded to go at (the light) at all hazards. Upon arriving in the vicinity, we saw two squaws and an Indian boy seated around the fire in front of a small tent. As soon as we made our appearance, they ran into the brush like wild deer. We were anxious to communicate with them, for it was in their power to save us. Fortunately I could speak a little of the Indian language, and that little was spoken in as loud a voice as I could then command. They soon came shying back, and we approached nearer the fire. No sooner had my companion felt the warmth than he fainted away. The squaws commenced rubbing his face with snow and in a short time he again revived, but was very feeble. One of the squaws pounded up some parched corn and added thereto some oil. This mixture she offered the sick man, but no sooner did he swallow it then he vomited it up ... I offered them $3 to pilot us through to Livingston Centre (Howell). To this proposition they readily agreed. They had a pony ... and after being seated on the pony, the squaws wrapped a blanket around my companion, and after giving directions to the boy what course to pursue, and where to meet them at night, bade him start. On and on we went, through swamps and over hills ... It often seemed to me that the lad was guiding us wrong, but on mentioning my fears to him, he would only shake his head and say "Kah?" We were doomed to pass another day without food or rest, but towards night our eyes were greeted with the sight of a rail fence, a sure mark of civilization."

Next week: the last of the story.

City to tap into township well water

■ Second time is the charm. After once defeating a proposal to make Independence Township water available to city residents, Clarkston voters showed their support 2-1 in Tuesday's election.

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER

Independence Township well water will be flowing through homes and businesses in Clarkston in the future.

That became a fact Tuesday night after voters approved a general obligation bond proposal to bring township well water into the city.

The funds from the bond issue will be used towards laying a main water pipe from the Independence Township's water system along Main Street from Paramus Street to I-75. This will be done when the Michigan Department of Transportation conducts its M-15 resurfacing project next spring.

Thirty percent, or 252 of the 844 registered voters in the city, voted in the special general obligation bond proposal election. Twenty-eight people turned in absentee voter ballots.

Almost 63 percent, or 158 voters, supported the bond proposal. Thirty-seven percent, or 94 voters, voted against it.

"I'm so pleased with the outcome," said Scott Meyland. The councilman headed up a committee that researched and developed the language for the general obligation bond issue.

Steve Arkwright, Douglas Roeser and William Basinger served on the committee with Meyland.

"I'm pleased not because the committee put so much work into the proposal but because I honestly believe that

The Moyes will have plenty of visitors Saturday and Sunday, June 3-4, because their home will be one of five distinctive homes featured during Clarkston Home Tour 18. Fire dept. pitches improved EMS plan to board

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

If a resident goes into cardiac arrest in the northern portion of Independence Township, he may have to wait up to 15 minutes for an ambulance to transport him to a hospital and a paramedic to administer potentially life-saving drugs.

The Independence Township Fire Department thinks there is a problem with that picture and is hoping the township board will ask voters to help them paint a different portrait of emergency services in the township. The Fire Department wants more money that would allow it to hire more paramedics, buy advanced life support equipment and operate its own ambulances to transport patients.

"We get there, we initiate care and we sit there and we wait and we wait and we wait," said Bob Cesario, the department's EMS coordinator.

Independence relies on a private ambulance company for transport. Often the vehicle is not in the township, but in Auburn Hills or even Pontiac. It takes too long for it to get to a critical case in Independence, Cesario said. The township has four people trained as paramedics in addition to Cesario. Most of the rest of the 21 people in the department are Emergency Medical Technicians. They can only defibrillate a heart, manage an airway and put in a trachea tube. They cannot administer medication.

"Within 10 minutes or so the chance of this person coming out of this (heart attack) is about zero and that's what we're up against," Cesario said.

Cesario and assistant fire chief Steve Ronk presented their ALS proposal to the township board at a special meeting Monday night. Fire department staff have been working on ways to improve medical services, which now make up 60-70 percent of their runs.

Board members were given a thick binder with information on the proposal, medical information and background from other communities who have shifted to providing their own ALS and transport services. Guests from other fire departments were on hand to answer questions as was Dr. Robert Aranosian, director of the Emergency Department at POH Medical Center in Pontiac. Michelle Leonard represented Accumed, a company that does billing for communities with ALS.

The department worked out three options for the board to ponder.

The first would entail hiring three paramedics. The cost for each with wages and benefits figured in is $63,150. Also in that proposal would be purchase of a Yukon-type vehicle that could take the paramedics to a medical emergency without tying up the other rescue truck that has all the extrication equipment on it.

The total cost on option one is $297,495. Ronk said that is not the preferred option for the department because it still leaves the paramedic ranks thin and does not solve the transport problem.

Option two would mean hiring six paramedics, buying a Yukon-type vehicle and two ambulances. The price tag is $900,185.

With option three, the department would hire 12 paramedics and buy the same equipment as option two. The cost would be $1.15 million.

With the township handling its own transportation, it could bill insurance companies and recover some of its costs. By the second year in operation an estimated $260,000 could be recovered from ambulance runs, Cesario said.

The department estimates a 1.25-mill tax increase would pay for the start-up and continuing costs of ALS. The fire millage is up this year and currently residents pay 2.4 mills. Citizens voted in a 3-mill tax levy for fire and emergency services years ago, but the figure has been rolled back over the years by the Headlee Amendment.

The department's budget is currently about $2.4 million annually. Each additional mill brings in about $1 million.

The township board hopes to have more discussion about the proposal at its May 16 meeting and could vote on ballot language for the proposal. The issue could go on either the Aug. 8 primary ballot or the Nov. 7 general election ballot.

Township board members agreed that considering upgraded services is a good idea, but had some specific questions. Larry Rosso wanted to know how many lives this new system could save. He said that is what it may come down to for many residents.

Dr. Aranosian said it is more of a question of the quality of life that can be retained by working on a patient in the best manner.

"It's not lives saved. It's morbidity. It's damage done. There are lives we've lost because of this. It's a quality of what's left," he said.

Trustee Dan Travis said the quality of care and morale of firefighters could improve with ALS because one person would follow a patient from initial care all the way to the hospital. Cesario said it is often frustrating not knowing what happens to patients once they send them away in an ambulance.

Trustee Neil Wallace said he thinks the financial portion of the proposal can be tweaked to keep the millage rate at 3 mills. He advocated a more transitional approach to gradually improve services.

Several community members attended the meeting including local family physician Dr. James O'Neill. He said he thinks if the township asked for 4 mills people would vote for it.

"One of the things you don't want is a tragedy at one of our schools, the freeway, the train going through here, a tornado," he said, and not be prepared.

Ronk asked the board to keep in focus the two main problems — response time and transport.

"We have a problem in the community," he said.

having township water is the best option for the city's future," Meyland added.

"I'm also pleased about the margin that the proposal passed, although it never seems like there are enough voters. I think it paid off that the voters were well-educated about the issue. I think that showed in the results," he said.

The current plan is for the city to finance and build the water system in three phases. Phase one is with the general obligation bond issue that was approved.

The estimated annual tax rate to retire the 30-year bond is 3.89 mills, or $3.87 per $1,000 taxable value. The city has to levy a one-time only tax of 1.4 mills, which will be collected on the July 1, 2000, tax bills. This translates into $1.40 per $1,000 of taxable value.

The plan also includes building the water system over eight years. Property owners will have the choice to disconnect from their individual wells and hook up to township well water. Main Street residents and businesses will get first choice.

Meyland said Special Assessment Districts will be established to help pay hook-up costs.

Jean and Don Frayer, who reside on Main Street in Clarkston, had voted by 10 a.m. Tuesday.

"We both are for bringing township water into the city," said Frayer. "We consider it a health issue. It's the right thing for the city."

The township wells are tested regularly. If one well becomes suspect, it is shut off to eliminate polluting the entire system.

Frayer said he spent some time talking to neighbors and encouraging them to vote for the bond issue.

"At least we'll have steady water pressure," he added.

Independence trustee won't seek 3rd term

Independence Township Trustee Jeff McGee has announced he will not seek a third term on the board.

McGee cited family as one reason he has decided not to run again at this time.

"My children are 3 and 5 years old, and they need me," he said.

He said the time commitment was becoming excessive with not only the board of trustees meetings twice a month, but his position on the Zoning Board of Appeals and membership on three lake boards. The preparation for and attendance at all those meetings takes time.

"It becomes almost like a full-time job," he said.

McGee also said he is eager for other citizens to step up and use their talents to make the township a better place to live. Fresh ideas are a positive, he said.

"I've been in it for two terms. I believe in term limitations," he said.

DEQ: Lead shot came from Sportsmen's Club

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

■ 'It's possible there are other solutions, but I'm not convinced that's likely.'

Steve Kitler— DEQ project manager

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality has found the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club responsible for the lead shot in Woodhull Lake that killed several mute swans earlier this spring.

DEQ project manager Steve Kitler said Monday he planned to send a letter to the Independence Township club advising it that it needs to take action to correct the problem. The club's shooting range is near the waterway and it had been suspected the lead shot from target practice was landing in the water, where the swans ingested it while feeding.

"The number of lead shots, it seems to indicate a single source," said Kitler, who works out of the DEQ's Livonia office.

He said he doesn't subscribe to the theory that someone could have dumped the lead in the water to intentionally poison the swans. Three swans were pulled from the water in March after an area homeowner noticed approximately nine dead birds. One bird had 891 lead pellets in its intestinal tract. In another, 357 pellets were found after a necropsy, or animal autopsy, was performed at the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Wildlife Disease Lab in East Lansing.

The matter was then turned over to the DEQ. Kitler said he took sediment samples on April 29 with the help of Sportmen's Club president Gary Mobley.

"They've been concerned about this not only because of the liability but because lots of these guys are waterfowl hunters," Kitler said.

He added the club has been cooperating with the state agency throughout its investigation.

Mobley, who lives in Waterford Township, also said Monday the club is waiting for the official report from Kitler. He added the club has brought an environmental consultant on board. How much taking the lead out of the water would cost is unknown, he said. Mobley also is not sure how the 1,700-member club would pay for it, either. Regular insurance likely won't cover an environmental cleanup, he said.

"We're going to have to look at that over time," he said.

The club has been in operation for 57 years, he said, with members from not only Oakland County but around the country and Canada.

The affected area is at the northwest corner of Woodhull Lake. There is a channel that is actually the Clinton River and then it opens into the lake, Kitler said.

Mobley said one target shooting station is likely to blame for the lead in the water.

"According to the range (of the guns) it shouldn't have," Mobley said.

That station is being repositioned. Mobley added that lead shot is still permissible in game hunting and target practice. It was banned for waterfowl hunting in 1989 because it could land in water.

Kitler said he arranged the sampling area using aerial photographs and with the help of colleagues figured out the trajectory of the shooting range shots. Then they swept the area taking sediment samples in buckets and straining out the smaller, looser matter. He said a pattern emerged that pointed to the club as the lead source. The lead concentrations got higher as they got further in the area they would expect the shot to land and faded to nil farther out in the lake where they did not expect to find the shot, he said.

He added that the concentrations ranged from nothing farther out into the open water to 40 pellets per square foot to 600 pellets per square foot in the most affected areas.

"That pattern also picked up across the river channel," he said.

The club will be expected to respond to the DEQ's request for cleanup. Kitler said they will probably bring on a consultant and together with the DEQ will work out the best way to proceed. He said cleansing the area could mean taking out up to 6,000 cubic yards of sediment from the open water area. That would be a worst-case scenario, he said. The affected area is 600-700 feet long, he added.

"It's possible there are other solutions, but I'm not convinced that's likely," he said.

What could be done about the cattail and bog area closer to shore poses a more complex problem. Disturbing the cattails probably would not kill them. The bog area, however, is much more sensitive. Some sort of barrier like a netting might have to be put over the bog to keep birds from flying in until the area is cleaned out, he said.

Kitler said the most immediate problem is to get the lead out of the feeding areas of waterfowl before winter. DNR personnel have said the lead as it exists now does not pose a threat to humans. Swan feed off the sediments and that explains why they are dead and not ducks, whose bills don't normally go down that far.

Kitler added that mute swans don't migrate in the winter. They stay in the marshy areas where it's easier to find food. He doesn't know what happened this year that caused the birds to ingest the lead.

Parks and recreation director resigns to take job in Canton

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER

INDEPENDENCE

For more than 11 years Parks and Recreation Director Ann Conklin has overseen Independence Township festivals and softball programs, senior citizen activities and capital purchases.

After June 2, Conklin will take what local officials say is enormous creative energy to Canton Township. Conklin, 44, resigned Monday. While officials say they are sad to see her go, they are happy for her in her new endeavor.

"Ann Conklin has been an outstanding department director, an outstanding citizen in the community," Supervisor Dale Stuart said.

He added she has done much for developing the kind of quality of life Independence wants for its citizens and will be missed. The township board will likely initiate a statewide search for a new director quickly, he said.

Conklin has a hard-work ethic and a contingency plan for everything, said Penny Shanks, executive director of the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce.

"Rain, tornado, hail storm? Yep, I've got a plan for that," Shanks said of Conklin.

The two women worked closely on many projects including the Fourth of July parade, the fireworks displays, Taste of Clarkston and Fall Fun Daze.

"There so many things Ann Conklin has done in this community I think it will take six people to replace her," Shanks said.

She said in every situation, Conklin is never cross and always willing to work as hard as the staff she oversees.

"The remarkable thing about Ann Conklin is I would be hard-pressed to find someone who has anything bad to say about her," she said.

The chamber has planned a community reception for Conklin from 3-6 p.m. on Friday, June 2, at the Clarkston Cafe, 18 S. Main St. Hors d'oeuvres will be provided, along with a cash bar.

Conklin, who will relocate with her new job, said it was an opportunity she could not pass up. Canton Township is in southwestern Wayne County with a population of 75,000. The rapidly growing suburb places much emphasis on recreation.

Conklin said she is "excited and thrilled" about her new position as leisure services director of Canton Township.

"It's a wonderful opportunity," she said. "Rarely in one's life does an opportunity like this come along."

Her new post puts her in charge of parks and recreation for the township in addition to senior citizen activities. Canton also has two golf courses; a large community center called The what they had envisioned.

Ann Moye grew up on a Reese Road farm and she said buying the home had some sentimental value for her. But also attractive was its location in downtown Clarkston among other historic homes. They also wanted lots of room.

John Moye recalls when the home was first getting renovated.

"It was basically a gut job," he said.

Added Ann, "It was really traumatic. We were without a kitchen for two months."

All the inconvenience paid off. The blue room begins in the back of the house with the kitchen area. In the middle is the table and toward the front is a sitting area. A deep blue covers the walls and white paint makes the low windows stand out. The beautiful, long, low windows were one feature Ann Moye fell in love with when she first saw the home.

Choosing a color for the large room was easy. She collects flow blue dinnerware and it is displayed prominently around the room. Her favorite pieces are plates with turkeys because it reminds her of her youth on the farm.

The home is filled with antiques, many of them family heirlooms. The house itself once belonged to and may have been built by Eugene Vliet. The family was prominent in the Clarkston area. He was born in 1853, according to his distant cousin, Georgena (Vliet) Miller of Ortonville. She said the Vliet family came to the Clarkston area in 1833. Eugene and his wife, Ettie, lived until 1931 and 1936, respectively. Upon their deaths, the house was given to their daughter, Mattie Vliet, who had married George Harris. The home eventually went to the Harris daughters, Miller said.

John Moye said they have not been able to pinpoint when the house was built. It's been through several renovations over the years. The current wood flooring was laid over two existing layers. In earlier times remodeling evidently meant just putting a wall up over whatever was already there, Moye said they found in their renovation adventures three walls when they were expecting only one.

A major part of the transformation was to reunite the house. John Moye said sometime during the Great Depression, the home was divided and became a duplex. It had two doors and two staircases at the front leading to the second and third floors.

The Moyes took the wall out, got rid of one of the doors and kept one staircase. They made use of the other carved out area as a bathroom. Another stairway leads up at the rear of the home.

The blue room actually had been three rooms, but Ann Moye liked what she saw in the open space during renovations and decided to keep it that way.

Upstairs more walls were knocked out to make bigger bedrooms. The master bedroom is in what was an uninhabitable attic. Modern air conditioning makes it comfortable in the summer. Part of the space looks as if it may have been a maid's quarters at one time, with evidence of a stairway leading straight to the kitchen.

"We just created a new house, inside an old one," Ann Moye said.

Utilities slammed

Engler urges immediate rate cuts

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

As state lawmakers get ready to debate the restructuring of Michigan's telephone and electric utilities, Gov. John Engler has lost patience.

"I'm tired of waiting," he said, proposing a 5 percent immediate reduction in telephone company and electric utility charges. "I want Michigan customers to get a rate cut now."

"It's been nine years since the enactment of the Michigan Telecommunications Act, which sunsets at the end of this year. The intent of the act was to spur competition among all telecommunications services which in turn would reduce costs. But competition for services remains anemic and Michigan consumers are paying for it — with many rates that are among the highest in the region. In almost all cases, Michigan's prices for basic services as well as enhanced and toll services are higher than those in surrounding states," Engler said.

He called for immediate passage of legislation to accomplish several goals:

- Enact a 5-percent rate reduction on all intrastate services until 2003, or until the Michigan Public Service Commission determines that a competitive market has been created.
- Quick resolution of disputes. "We need marketplace competition, not committee room fights or courtroom litigation," he said.
- Sanctions for "non-competitive behavior. State tools for enforcement should be sharpened."
- "We need to require providers to vigorously compete. This gives us, as customers a choice among providers," he said.

Engler said he hoped his proposals would break a "legislative logjam." Likewise, he contended the state House and Senate have moved too slowly on restructuring of the electric industry.

"The legislative debate has taken too long. The complexity of the issue precludes resolutions of the issue. The Michigan Public Services Commission did design a plan for electric restructuring. It was approved in June 1997, but that plan fell to a court challenge. Since then, numerous states have passed legislation, but Michigan has not. The legislature can't agree, and the PSC can't act. The bottom line? Michigan is falling behind in electric restructuring".

For the electric industry, Engler called for a five percent reduction in rates with rate cap guarantees for 10 years, or until the PSC concludes that a competitive market has been created in that industry, too.

Critics of the utilities approved of the governor's plan.

"The governor's proposal sounds like everything the small business community has been asking for and we look forward to seeing the details," Barry Cargill, vice president of the Small Business Association of Michigan, said. "It's very appropriate for the governor to exercise his leadership to break the logjam."

■ 'The legislative debate has taken too long ... The legislature can't agree, and the PSC can't act. The bottom line? Michigan is falling behind in electric restructuring.'
Gov. John Engler

On the other hand, the utilities were less receptive. Scott Stevenson, president of the Telecommunications Association of Michigan, which represents local telephone companies in Michigan, said he did not believe the governor's proposals would lead to more competition.

"I am certain that to have the government, rather than the free market, set prices will not lead to more competition," he said.

Rep. Robert Gosselin (R-Troy) was positive about Engler's plan. "Now the governor has weighed in with a plan to quickly give the state Public Service Commission the tools it needs to 'kick open the door' to local phone competition," he said.

"The Oakland County House delegation took the matter into their own hands, by holding a hearing on the issue in Pontiac. Dozens of angry citizens showed up to complain about excessive 'local long distance' charges, local calling areas that have shrunk to 'postage stamp size,' and as one citizen put it, the fact that 'I can call Hawaii for less than Farmington Hills,'" he said. "My Oakland colleagues deserve credit for spurring the Lansing establishment on the issue. They had the guts to take on The Phone Company, probably the most powerful special interest lobby in Lansing."

A number of bills have already been introduced to address both telephone and electric utility restructuring.

Rep. Marc Shulman (R-West Bloomfield) and Rep. Mary Ann Middaugh (R-Paw Paw) have introduced a two-bill package, House Bills 4804 and 5721, that would give the PSC the authority to expedite complaints when competing phone companies have difficulty getting their services to customers. The package would also prohibit "multi-state" providers from charging more to Michigan subscribers than they do for the same services in other states. Further, the bills would outlaw "cramming," adding charges to phone bills for services not approved by customers, and require that rates be posted on the Internet.

Rep. Mike Kowall (R-White Lake) has introduced legislation to outlaw cramming. House Bill 5474 would levy a $10,000 fine to a phone company for the first offense of adding a charge not authorized by a customer. A second offense would carry a $50,000 fine.

Other bills have been introduced, toughening sanctions against "slamming," switching a customer's long distance carrier without permission.

Sen. Mat Dunaskiss (R-Lake Orion) has also introduced legislation to address telephones, although his bill is intended to simply repeal the telecommunications act. Aides say that is his "starting position," and the senator will add back regulations as they are shown to be needed. Ameritech favors the Dunaskiss proposal. Dunaskiss has also offered legislation to deregulation and restructure electric utilities.

New school start times approved for September

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

For almost two months, the idea of changing school start times in September to ease the bus transportation strain and to improve student learning in the Clarkston Community Schools District has been a main topic of conversation and concern among parents, students and school personnel.

The discussion ended Monday night when the school board unanimously approved the recommendation from the Transportation Task Force that elementary schools start at 8:30 a.m., middle schools at 7:45 a.m. and the high school at 7:30 a.m. next school year.

These times are different from the original proposed draft announced in March. It suggested all elementary schools start at 8:15 a.m. instead of 8:50 a.m., that the high school start time remain the same and that the two middle schools start at 9:15 a.m. instead of the current 7:40 a.m. and 7:50 a.m. times.

As expected, the biggest outcry about the original proposal centered on the change in the middle school students' day.

Nicholas Arkwright was the first person to address the school board and Supt. Al Roberts about the draft.

The sixth-grade student at Clarkston Middle School spoke at the first board meeting following the proposal announcement.

He told the board the later start time would mean teens would arrive home later in the day. He was concerned, as were 196 other teens whose signatures he gathered on a petition, that the shorter time after school would interfere with family time, after-school activities and homework.

"I'm really glad they didn't do the big time change for the middle school kids," Nicholas said. "Just doing this (7:45 a.m.) is good."

■ 'I'm really glad they didn't do the big time change for the middle school kids.'

Another Clarkston Middle School sixth-grader, Michael Sorrentino, led off the April 10 public information meeting on the draft proposal.

"I think we should work together to try to solve transportation problems," he said then.

And that's exactly what he thinks the adults in charge did — worked with the community to come up with school start times that benefit everyone involved.

"Most of the kids at my school seemed pretty happy that we won't be starting school so late," Michael said. "I am very happy about this because with the other time (9:15 a.m.), I would have had less time for things I do after school."

He also thinks the adults making the decisions took students' opinions seriously.

"I was happy that Dr. Roberts took the kids seriously and took their opinions to try to change it (the proposed starting time)," Michael said.

Andrea Sorrentino echoed her son's feelings.

"I think we learned that public opinion really does matter and that we really do have a say in our students' education," she said.

"I think the task force came up with a solution that pleases a good majority of the public," added Andrea Sorrentino. "I'm real pleased with the process that occurred before the final decision was made. I think Dr. Roberts did a good job."

"He said from the beginning it wasn't a done deal; it was a draft," she continued. "He was being honest. He did look to the community to help him find a better solution. It wasn't all talk."

The school district gathered information and opinions on the proposal through several methods — meeting with students and school staffs, surveying the public by phone, listening to people at school board meetings and gathering information at the public meeting.

Trash mixture problem solved

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

The current economic boom is sweet for many people, but for employers — including one local garbage hauler — trying to find qualified employees stinks.

Some Smith's Disposal and Recycling customers let Independence Township officials know they were not happy when they saw workers throwing their recyclables in with the regular trash a couple of weeks ago. Township Clerk Joan McCrary said she received several calls from residents as did assistant Department of Public Works Director Linda Richardson.

"We have a recycling ordinance everyone is supposed to follow," McCrary said, "If it had persisted, we would have had to do something."

The township licenses the approximately three trash haulers that do business in Independence. Their trucks are inspected and they are not supposed to mix recyclables with other trash.

Smith's problems came about because two of its drivers quit without notice, owner Ken Smith said.

He said without enough people to drive both the garbage and recycling trucks, it was an emergency situation.

"It's not something we like doing," he said.

They have two people in training now who he hopes will stay. Smith said it's hard to find people who not only have a commercial driver's license with an air brake certification, but who also have a good driving record and can pass a drug test.

He said there have been a few times the garbage has had to be mixed.

The Clarkston-area trash hauler business has been around for nearly 50 years and Smith has owned it for 19 of those years. He said he is one of only a few independent trash haulers left. Mergers have left mainly large companies for residents to deal with.

Smith's has 13 trucks and serves approximately 20,000 households in Clarkston, Waterford and Ortonville. Smith said if people don't want the recyclables thrown in with the other trash if a similar situation arises, they should call his office. The customer can just bring the recyclables back off the curb it they aren't picked up and put them out again the next week.

He added his philosophy is that in an emergency, it's better to collect everything than leave the recyclables.

Patterson makes it official — he'll run

County exec to seek 3rd term

In the running: Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson and his wife Kathleen were off to an early start Tuesday, as he began his campaign for a third term at a breakfast meeting at the Kingsley Inn.

BY PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITER
pmurphy@oe.homecomm.net

How's this for a political objective: A "recession proof" Oakland County.

When he announced his bid for a third term as Oakland County Executive Tuesday, L. Brooks Patterson said a recession proof Oakland County — along with better roads and more technology — would be his goals over the next four years.

"I know that's probably unrealistic," Patterson said privately when asked to elaborate. "But it's something we can shoot for."

Oakland can, for example, create a business climate that attracts quality companies which are less affected by the cyclic ups and downs normally associated with economic swings, he said.

"If we can't make Oakland recession proof, we can at least create a climate in which the county doesn't feel the affects (of an economic downturn) as much as other areas," Patterson added.

"We can shoot for a county that is the last to feel the impact, and the first to benefit when the economy turns around again," he said.

Patterson, of course, has been riding the crest of what is considered the most prosperous period in Oakland history — much like President Bill Clinton is enjoying the most bountiful economic booms in U.S. history.

Patterson took note of that prosperity Tuesday when he announced his re-election bid at a kickoff breakfast at the Kingsley Inn in Bloomfield Hills before about 150 avid supporters.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic of those supporters was Fred Hoffman, director of state relations for DaimlerChrysler, who introduced Patterson. "During the past seven years of the Patterson administration, Oakland County has earned national recognition and respect as one of America's premier counties," he said.

"Under his leadership, Oakland County businesses have been afforded the opportunity of initiating or expanding trade opportunities that will allow them to compete on a global scale, Hoffman said, ". . . transforming Oakland County into a global technology center that can compete with the likes of California's Silicon Valley and Boston's Route 128."

Hoffman was referring to "Automation Alley," developed as a Mecca for high tech companies and highly skilled employees.

Patterson cited upgrading the county's bond rating to AAA — the highest available to a governmental entity — and Automation Alley at the top of accomplishments over the last four years. Because of the lofty bond rating, communities can finance improvements at the highly favorable interest rate of 3.89 percent, saving thousands of dollars.

"Compare that with your mortgage rate," the executive quipped.

Patterson also cited the opening this year of "Little Oaks," the county's premier childcare center, initiating full-time customs service at Oakland County International Airport and establishing the "Arts, Beats and Eats" festival in downtown Pontiac as examples of innovation under his administration.

If re-elected, Patterson said he would continue to fight for better roads and quality development and to push Oakland's technological superiority to greater heights. That superiority is evident, he said, in CLEMIS (Courts and Law Enforcement Management Information System) that enables participating police agencies to quickly exchange finger prints, mug shots and other information.

CLEMIS was originally designed for Oakland County, Patterson said. But law enforcement agencies from Lapeer, Macomb, Livingston and Wayne Counties have become willing participants, he said.

No challengers in sight— just yet

BY PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITER
PMURPHY@OE.HOMECOMM.NET

So who's going to challenge incumbent L. Brooks Patterson in his quest for a third term as Oakland County executive?

Patterson, who filed nominating papers with the county elections bureau Tuesday, may or may not face a challenger in the Republican primary on Aug. 8.

But he will most certainly face a Democratic challenger in the Nov. 7 general election, according to Gary L. Kohut, chair of the Democratic Party in Oakland County.

"Mr. Patterson's leadership has been weak in key areas," Kohut said. "He hasn't done anything about roads, and he hasn't done anything to assure that infrastructure (sewers, drains and roads) keeps pace with development.

"Roads aren't congested merely during rush hour," said the Troy attorney, "they're congested all day long."

Kohut said he'd also like to see some leadership that would help people. "What about a countywide program to provide free prescription drugs for senior citizens?" he said.

"Or what about a county program to help small companies provide health care for workers? Wayne County has such a program."

Deadline nears

Tuesday (May 16) is the deadline for filing as a candidate in this year's election. As of late Wednesday, no candidate other than Patterson had filed for county executive. But there's still time for a challenger to get on the ballot — Republican or Democrat.

Since the first of the year, Democrats have been evaluating and recruiting possible candidates for county executive as well as other posts including prosecutor, sheriff, county clerk, treasurer, drain commissioner and county commissioner.

"We will definitely have some strong candidates," Kohut said. "But we probably won't announce them until Tuesday (the filing deadline)."

Also confident about the Democratic slate this fall is State Sen. Gary L. Peters of Bloomfield Hills. "Some people approached me about running (for executive)," he said Tuesday. "But I'm committed to finishing the job voters gave me.

"I'm also exploring a bid for governor (in 2002) when my term is finished," he said.

Poppy Days set for May 18-20

American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary volunteers will distribute the familiar red hand-crafted poppies honoring America's war dead May 18-20.

Chief Pontiac Post No. 377 and Auxiliary Unit No. 377 will be out in force to distribute poppies.

Planned to coincide with the Memorial Day holiday, the annual event pays tribute to veterans who died in the past 80 years. It also honors the millions of Americans who have willingly served their country in seven decades.

Proceeds benefit local programs for veterans and their families. Each nine-piece poppy is made by veterans for veterans in auxiliary-sponsored poppy shops that supplement physical and psychological therapy needed by hospitalized and disabled veterans. The auxiliary provides the materials and the volunteers. The veteran makes the poppy and is paid a small amount for each painstakingly-made flower. For some it is their only income. No matter what the cost of maintaining and supplying the Poppy Shops, the memorial poppy is never sold, but given in exchange for a contribution.

The purpose of Poppy Day has always been to honor the dead by assisting the living. This is the true significance of Poppy Day.

Summit, which includes a five-pool aquatic center; workout areas; a gym and a banquet facility. Last year the township bought a 12-field softball complex from a private owner. Plans for a golf dome are in the works and the possibility of an indoor ice rink is under discussion.

"Independence has been very good to me," Conklin said.

She said much has been accomplished during her tenure with the help and support of her staff and the township board. Stuart, she said, has been extremely supportive of parks and recreation programs.

While she couldn't pinpoint one shining moment in her time in Independence, Conklin said everything taken together has been wonderful. The improvements at parks including Bay Court, Clintonwood and most recently Sashabaw Plains have been points of pride, she said. All the festivals through the year make her feel like she's accomplished something as well.

Township Clerk Joan McCrary said Conklin puts all her effort into her job.

"We're just really going to miss her. I know that. She just has so many good ideas," McCrary said.

McCrary said Conklin knows how to stretch her budget dollars, too.

Conklin said parks and recreation is important because it helps build a strong community.

"Parks and recreation gives people an opportunity to create a sense of place, to build self-confidence," she said.

And strong communities, she added, builds a strong society.

Should state sales tax be sent on a short holiday?

LEGISLATIVE WATCH

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mimalott@homecomm.net

Cutting the sales tax as a way to return Michigan's budget surplus to taxpayers has certain advantages, House Tax Policy Chair Nancy Cassis told her committee Tuesday, May 9.

"It never leaves taxpayers' wallets," said Rep. Cassis (R-Novi). "They don't have to wait for a refund next April or to get a tax credit. The money is never sent to the government in the first place."

Cassis is pushing for the creation of a sales tax holiday, two weeks around the Labor Day weekend when clothing purchases would be exempt from Michigan's 6 percent state sales tax.

Committee members are receptive to the proposal, although they are asking that the cap on the cost of clothing eligible for exemption be trimmed from $500 per item to $150.

Still, if enacted, the tax cutting measure would save taxpayers an estimated $16 million per year, according to House Fiscal Agency analysis.

That's money Cassis said she believes the state will recover, because state consumers will likely spend that same cash elsewhere.

"They'll go out to dinner or buy a piece of jewelry they hadn't planned on buying," she said. Similar tax holidays enacted in Texas, New York and Florida have not cost the state coffers as much as was originally projected, due in part to that extra spending consumers tend to do when they save a few dollars.

Possible by Labor Day?

If the committee acts quickly on the bill and it gets a good review from the full House and Senate, Cassis said she hopes the holiday can be in effect for the coming Labor Day weekend.

It will benefit not only families that are shopping for clothing to send kids back to school in the fall, but should be a boon to Michigan retail businesses, which can use the holiday to attract shoppers from out of state on the last big tourist weekend of the summer, she said.

Sales tax revenues are growing so far this year, up 8 percent over this time last year, Cassis said.

Despite the signs that the economy may be slowing down and volatility on Wall Street, she said she doesn't see a slowdown in consumer spending in Michigan.

Gov. John Engler is likely to be receptive to the bill as well. Engler's aides have said he is looking for "broad based tax cuts" as a way to return the state's surplus.

"What could be more broad based that this," Cassis said. "Everybody wears clothes."

Mail carriers to collect food donations

The Food Bank of Oakland County will cosponsor its annual Postal Food Drive with the Macomb Food Program Saturday, May 13. Residents from both counties are encouraged to place a bag of canned or boxed food in their mailboxes that day for postal carriers to pick up.

Last year the Food Bank of Oakland County gathered 212,000 pounds of food during the Postal Drive. The Macomb County Food Bank amassed 152,000 pounds of food.

Daniel Florkowski, president, Michigan State Association of Letter Carriers, said, "It is our pleasure to keep this food drive going each year. It has become our personal way to make a difference for all hungry people in the world."

Eight-year-old Jared Corr will read a poem written by his grandfather, Pontiac Poet Laureate Ken Corr. Music to be provided by local talent Daniel Carthane.

The Food Bank of Oakland County is one of 189 Second Harvest National Food Banks. Located in Pontiac, it serves all of Oakland County's emergency food providers.

Take action tonight

Help protect your kids from drugs

Ten or 12 years down the road, we know there will be some parents looking back who will be regretting a chance that passed them by. It's going to happen tonight, and you still have time.

Parents have an opportunity tonight to decrease the chances their youngsters will experiment with and possibly become addicted to drugs.

The Clarkston Coalition for Youth (formerly called the Task Force) is co-sponsoring a free, three-part training series for parents on drug awareness and prevention beginning at 7 p.m. today in the Senior Center in Clintonwood Park on Clarkston Road west of Sashabaw. The program runs until 9 p.m.

Called "Parent to Parent," the nationally acclaimed series will be continued 7-9 p.m. the next two consecutive Thursdays, May 18 and 25.

We encourage all parents of school-age children to attend.

There is no need to register in advance. Simply show up tonight.

The series, in which a facilitator shows a video and then leads parents in discussion, was developed by Bill Oliver and Milton Creagh. It teaches parenting skills that help protect adolescents against drug use and lessen their risk factors.

Though it will hold special interest for parents of children in fourth through eighth grades — when parental influence is at its strongest and youngsters are beginning to choose the type of friends they want to associate with during adolescence — the series offers practical tips that all parents can use.

Parents are an integral part of drug prevention. According to research, it takes parents, schools and the community working together to most effectively protect and immunize kids against drugs.

The Clarkston schools are doing their part — health teachers teach how and why kids should avoid using drugs — and the Clarkston Coalition for Youth is doing its part.

Parents have an opportunity tonight to continue to do their part. Attend the video series. Help protect and immunize your kids against drugs. It may be the best six hours you ever spent.

New spring, new beginning

MARY LAUNDROCHE

In May 1996, I took over as editor of a large suburban weekly under an especially challenging circumstance that was indifferent to set-in-stone production schedules. The overwhelming mandate that initial week was to shepherd the newspaper through its normal routine, but among the many picky details embedded in that assignment was to fill a dedicated chunk of 18 inches with a clever column. It was not an easy task when the newspaper's rhythm was decidedly out of whack.

Used to the luxury of writing columns only when something needed to be said, I knew I couldn't fill the space in that inaugural week with material as witty or succinct as the previous editor. Instead, pragmatism took over, and I opted in an uncharacteristic fashion to reflect upon the beauty of the landscaped yards in the established neighborhoods in our readership area. In my defense, the flora was indeed stunning that spring. But the piece was admittedly wimpy, if heartfelt, and came to be known by sympathetic and amused colleagues as the "magnolia" column.

So it is with some irony that I find myself in a new position again during the same season of the year, compelled to comment on the beauty of springtime blossoms and gorgeous flowers. This time, though, it is not because of competing priorities.

In fact, this is legitimate commentary, since my arrival in Birmingham and Oakland County coincides with the breath-taking results of remarkable landscaping efforts.

Fragrant snowball bushes, colorful crab apple trees, luscious lilacs and unusual tulips brighten the neighborhoods around the county. And yes, of course, there are those magnificent magnolias. A trip around charming residential streets on the way to The Eccentric office in Clarkston proved a treat in its own right, as I relished in the magical quality of the cottage-like houses there.

All this natural beauty confirms the cliché perspective that if one is going to make a major life change, spring is the season to do it. It is an easy time to be an optimist.

But despite my delight at the ability to enjoy the spring beauty that seemingly links this new venture as managing editor to my last major undertaking, I can assure Eccentric readers that my experience in community journalism allows me to see far more important connections than just magnolias.

In my 15 years in community journalism, I've encountered every type of story that affects the lives of people in the suburbs. I know the issues that are of concern to readers in Oakland County, because they run along the same themes as elsewhere.

The faces may be different (and the traffic may be lighter) from my experience, but I have reported on or directed the news coverage of all the big topics: progress, congestion, school expansion, school decline, residential growth, annoying neighbors, zoning issues, politicians who take themselves way too seriously, complainers who take themselves way too seriously, wonderful public servants who are dedicated to their communities, wonderful residents who seek reasonable resolutions for their communities, outstanding students, troubled youths, inspiring volunteers, vocal naysayers, police heroes, police misfits.

Although I covered Dearborn for most of my career, I can see how the issues and events I was exposed to translate into the same type of institutions in Oakland County. I am familiar with major manufacturing sites, like the Rouge Industrial Complex; corporate world headquarters, like that of Ford Motor Co.; major hospitals, like Oakwood Hospital; major universities and large community colleges, like the University of Michigan-Dearborn and Henry Ford Community College. No need to say that all of these have counterparts in Oakland County.

I also know how diversity can enrich a community in enviable ways, even if longtime residents are at first reluctant to embrace it, only to be embarrassed later at having created such an overblown fuss.

So, bolstered by this experience, I am nonetheless excited by the chance to learn more about Oakland County and serve the readers and customers of The Eccentric Newspapers. If you want to tell me about issues of importance — or where the most striking magnolia actually is — call me at (248) 901-2563. Or, you can e-mail me at mlaundroche@oe.homecomm.net

We need Neil Wallace on Independence board

Today is a very sad day for Independence Township. I told my family that I had retired from government watching. But, the news that Neil Wallace is not going to seek an elected office this November is too upsetting for me not to speak out. Mr. Wallace wrote a very compassionate letter to the newspapers expressing his concern about the Independence Township government. He asked the people of Independence Township to write their thoughts on how they felt about the present and future of Independence Township.

You have all had the chance to read Mr. Wallace's extremely well-researched reports in the newspapers and if you have attended an Independence Township Board meeting, you saw the many pages of excellent research that he used on any given proposal.

Wallace wants to preserve our land and not put a development on every available area. Many of you moved here from southern Michigan. Do we have to be completely developed in 10-20 years? Hudson, Ohio, my home for nine years, has passed a law that only 100 building permits can be issued in one year. They have so much traffic on their main street, Route No. 91, that pedestrians have to push a button to stop traffic so that they can cross the street. How close is this area to that same road condition?

Neil Wallace is needed as an elected official in Independence Township government. He is qualified because of his keen insight, dedication to do extensive research, and he has the courage to question in a knowledgeable and intelligent manner. The number of regular voters in Independence Township is so few. Do you realize the power you have to keep Independence Township from falling by the wayside in a mass of concrete?

Call Neil Wallace and tell him it is imperative that he run in November to help save us from the developers and bulldozers that have consumed southern Michigan.

Dispose of household hazardous waste properly

First we would like to applaud the officials and trustees of Independence Township for providing the community a day set aside for the collection of household hazardous waste. Secondly we urge all to take advantage of this service.

Why is this important, you ask? The simple answer, water quality. The garbage we place in our trash can affect water quality in our drinking water aquifers, our lakes and streams. Some of the products included in the list are: some household cleaners — oven, toilet, furniture, floor; some items used in painting — primers, paint, varnish, stain, turpentine; some items used in the garage — engine cleaners, antifreeze, brake fluid, oil, household batteries; and gardening items — herbicides and insecticides; to name just a few. These items leach out of the landfill into our drinking water, streams and lakes. They pose a threat to our health.

Special equipment is used in the collection and hauling of these items to a designated site designed to specific government standards. This disposal is costly. We should not discard these items in our normal trash.

If you are truly concerned about our water quality, please properly discard old and unused household hazardous waste 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 13, at the Department of Public Works Building, 6050 Flemings Lake Road. Do you have a question regarding a product? Call DPW at (248) 625-8222.

Make this Sunday Mother's Peace Day

Mother's Day was Julia Ward Howe's original idea, not Hallmark's. She chose June 2, 1872, as the proper date and wrote Mother's Day peace letters to friends and family. Mrs. Howe's idea was not sending flowers and gifts.

Howe conceived Mother's Day as the day when everyone should be bringing about world peace. This Mother's Day, May 14, I would like to reintroduce Mother's Peace Day. On this day, have all mothers, grandmothers, aunts and sisters wear a black and white ribbon. White for peace and black in mourning for the killing fields in Kosovo, the tragedy in Colorado and our more recent tragedy of a 6-year-old child's shooting of another classmate.

We have natural disasters like the tornados in Oklahoma and the more recent flood of Mozambique. Let us put a stop to the self-manifested disasters. On this Mother's Peace Day, let us take a stand and wear a black and white ribbon.

Teach our children and send letters to our Congress: "We will not have questions decided by irrelevant agencies. Our husbands shall not come to us reeking with carnage, for causes and applause. Our sons shall not be taken from us to unlearn all that we have been able to teach them of charity, mercy and patience."

POINTS OF VIEW

From kindergarten to college: A primer for surviving school

JAIME GREEN

Elementary School

When you first start school in kindergarten, the kid with the biggest box of crayons is the coolest. That's when the competition starts. That's when you want a bigger box than the cool kid has. Your teachers teach you how to share and to be nice. You don't have a care in the world. To you, in first and second grade the opposite sex still had cooties. You didn't have to compete for any stupid guy's attention.

Middle School

Middle school starts out fun. In sixth grade most of you are going through the gangly and awkward stage so boys/girls aren't really too big of an issue. Everyone is meeting for the first time, and the cliques start to form. Everyone starts to compete to be in with the "cool" crowd. It's not as simple as having the bigger box of crayons either. You have to work to be friends with them.

You start to worry about how your hair looks, which color eye shadow matches your shoes, and silly stuff like that. You begin to form these long-lasting (or super short) crushes and you even start to get boyfriends/girlfriends.

You declare your love to each other and are seen around school hugging and holding hands. Everyone tells you how lucky you are, and then comes the dumping stage of the relationship. Someone makes this big scene calling the other names and making him or her all upset. All the guys laugh, and the girls call them "jerks."

High School

When high school starts, everyone is put back onto the playing field. You don't know half of the people in your class now, and they don't know you.

Freshman year you get picked on by the seniors, and you start to get a feel for the best four years of your life.

Sophomore year is another story. In ninth grade you usually start a reputation for yourself. So now, you either have to keep it or get rid of it.

You'll strive to keep or get a good reputation for the rest of high school.

I'm not trying to scare any future freshmen; I'm just giving you the heads up. By sophomore year you are boy/girl crazy. You can't wait until the new hot guy looks your way. Most of the girls start falling over the big jocks, and everyone is so in love. Your parents will tease you, and you won't care. You'll be on cloud nine.

Junior year is a blast. You may or may not have a boyfriend/girlfriend right now, but it doesn't matter. You'll most likely have your license, and you'll have your group of friends that you try to spend every waking moment with. Your parents should start giving you more freedom, and you are carefree.

On the other side of that, you'll probably have a job, and school gets tough. You have ACTs, MEAPs and SATs. You have to work hard; junior year is one of the most important grade-wise. (Every year is important, don't get me wrong.) Your life is most likely good, and you're soaking it up.

Senior year is when senioritis sets in. At first your senior year is strenuous! You have senior pictures, spring break, prom and graduation! You have fun too, though. You have fun partying with your friends, and you can't wait to get out on your own. You're now looking forward to college. You may have a boyfriend/girlfriend, and now it's serious. You're madly in love, and you hope to spend the rest of your lives together.

In high school you have to deal with sex, drugs and all that stuff. As a freshman it was tempting, and as a senior you know what is right and wrong.

By now you make your own choices. Right or wrong, you are starting to lead your own life.

College

In college you will meet many new people. You see the world in a different light. You are now an adult. You have grown up, and now it's time to make something out of yourself. You will meet many new boys/girls, who are now men/women. You may keep that high school sweetheart or get a new flame. You start to have an adult relationship, you make choices and start to get emotionally attached in a way you never knew existed. You now have your life ahead of you, and you'll go and get what you want.

Life

I can't tell you what will happen after college. All of this is a stereotypical situation. I am going by what I and people I am very close to have gone through. You have to make a life out of yourself. Don't let a boy/girl influence the choices you make. Everything is up to you. Don't loose sight of what you want. Someone out there is meant for you. Someone believes in your dreams, and all you need is to believe in yourself and you'll always be happy.

Virus attack shows how much the Info Revolution impacts us

PHILIP POWER

Whoever would have imagined a couple of years ago that an e-mail virus masquerading as a love letter would shut down computers all over the world? And those whose computers were infected last week now have a clear idea of just how dependent we've become on e-mail and computerized address books and JPEG picture files.

And that's just small beer compared to the profound impacts the Information Revolution will have throughout our entire society.

Take taxes, for instance.

With more than a third of all homes in America hooked up to the Internet, home shopping is turning out to be the biggest growth sector in the entire economy. And when you're shopping on amazon.com and click the "execute order" button, the one thing you won't find on your screen is a line detailing how much sales tax you owe.

By contrast, when you shop at a local store in Michigan, you'll pay 6 percent state sales tax on most purchases, excepting things like food and medicine.

Most states and a few cities rely on the sales tax as a big part of their revenue base. Nationally, the sales tax produces around $150 billion in taxes for states, which is about two-thirds of their total revenue. In Michigan, the sales tax last year produced $6.4 billion, which is 17.5 percent of the total $36.6 billion in total state revenue.

Up to now, taxpayers who shop from catalogs or over the Internet have found it easy to ignore the question of tax liability for their purchases.

But anybody who filled out the Michigan income tax forms last month knows that this year, for the first time, there is a question on line 30 asking whether you owe "use tax" (another term for sales tax) on purchases you made from another state on which no tax was collected. You could either check the box marked "no" — in which case you might have been cheating on your taxes — or you could turn to page 11 to calculate how much you owe.

Some people I know confected an arbitrary — and low — number for their Internet purchases and computed a use tax obligation on this basis. Sure, they're cheating on their taxes. And no, they probably won't get caught.

So the Information Revolution, through the entirely new phenomenon of home shopping via the Internet, threatens to undo a very big chunk of the system of tax revenues throughout the entire country. Not surprisingly, this is producing a whole lot of strange bedfellows and alliances.

Gov. John Engler, for instance, is normally a tax cutter. But he is also a governor who is responsible for maintaining the revenue base of his state. And State Treasurer Mark Murray estimates that something $100 million in Michigan sales tax revenue on catalogs and Internet sales was lost last year.

So Gov. Engler went down to Washington to urge Congress to pass a law requiring companies that sell by catalogs or the Internet to collect sales taxes at the time the purchase is made and remit them directly to the relevant state. His testimony was compelling, even in making the distinction between imposing new taxes (which he's against) and providing states with the ability to collect sales taxes already on the books (which he's for).

But the U.S. Congress, normally vigilant in maximizing revenue for the federal government, is not about to pass a law that most people would regard as a big tax increase, especially not in an election year. Moreover, a bunch of Engler's traditional (and very conservative) supporters — the Mackinac Center for Public Policy and the Michigan Federation of Young Republicans — are going after him as a big taxer, of all things.

Engler replies that it's simply unfair to tax brick-and-mortar Michigan retail businesses but not tax Internet companies selling similar products. He's absolutely right.

But the topsy-turvy twists in the politics of the argument only demonstrate how profound the consequences of the Information Revolution will surely be as the years go by.

Nurturing families help children to grow up resistant to drugs

CLARKSTON COMMUNITY CLARKSTON COALITION FOR YOUTH CORNER

Alvera Stern, Ph.D., a national leader with 31 years experience in the community anti-drug coalition movement and grandma to 3-year-old Ben and 3-week-old Katie, spoke recently at an Oakland County Coalition leadership retreat. She shared many helpful insights from the "public health model," which forms the basis for current community drug prevention and positive youth development efforts. The 40-Developmental Asset framework could be considered a list of "personal health habits" that help to achieve and maintain optimal physical, mental, social and spiritual health for the individual. Also known as "protective factors," they offer young people (and others) protection from many high-risk behaviors including alcohol abuse and illegal drug use. However, protection is not the same as immunity.

Just as with heart disease, risk factors outside one's personal control — in the external environment [community] and possibly in one's genetics — remain. Some children are born into families where "asset-building" and nurturing are instinctive to parents. These children grow strong, like spring perennials pushing up through the snow, because they are nourished by an unseen life-sustaining bulb. Other children are born into families where, for any number of reasons, asset-building is a low priority, and the nurturing these children receive may be marginal. They sprout and grow the best they can, but like annuals that have been placed into the garden before growing conditions are optimal, they struggle against the elements.

However, as all children grow, they enter a high-risk stage of life called adolescence when their normal development nudges them to become more independent. As the "spring juices" begin to flow, society calls out to them with both positive and negative messages. Parents are still very important, but they must adapt their parenting style to this new stage of life and hope their children will have enough "stored assets" to sustain them through this sometimes stormy stage of life when they will surely come face-to-face with the American drug culture.

For children who may have the genetic predisposition to chemical dependency, regardless of their asset level, casual drug experimentation can become a life and death issue within five to 15 months. Ten percent of the general population carries this genetic predisposition to alcoholism (also called chemical dependency/ addiction.) These people may or may not be aware of their genetic risk. Although heredity is outside their personal control, the choice of whether to use alcohol and other legal/ illegal mind-altering drugs will determine if the disease is triggered. "Age of first use" becomes a significant factor in developing the disease of chemical dependency, or possible life-long struggle with problem alcohol/ drug use.

Strong, knowledgeable, caring families are still the biggest factor in positive youth development. Community efforts can also help to increase protective factors and decrease risk factors by addressing needs of the individual, the family, the school and the community. Risks in the social environment — availability, boundaries, healthy alternative activities — are most effectively addressed through a coalition effort involving all sectors.

In the words of Joseph K. Hart, "No child can escape his community ... it is our shared social environment. He swims in it, goes to sleep in it, and wakes to the new day to find it still surrounds him ... pure or foul. It nourishes him, or starves him, or poisons him. It gives him the substance of his life."

A mother's heart never lets go

Even after a daughter has grown, been educated, married and gone off on her own, a mother still sometimes sees that daughter as a little girl. I know my mother is guilty of this because every now and then she treats me like a child.

I am trying not to judge her for that, though, because I catch myself making the same mistake with my oldest, some days.

I think that letting go of a daughter — setting the bird free from the nest, so to speak — must be one of life's greatest challenges.

The hands and the head release, but the heart holds back.

I assume that the letting-go process is equally difficult for mothers of sons — or fathers of sons, or fathers of daughters, too.

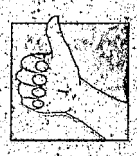

God has blessed me with two daughters and a son, all vastly different in age. Regular readers of this column know that my son is still a child. And that my youngest daughter is developmentally disabled.

Even though she is 22 years old, it is ever so easy to see the child in her. Because of her disability, she is trapped for life in childhood — though her body has gone through all the changes that were necessary to make her a woman.

I don't write about my oldest daughter, now 27, very often because

Interpreters break down barriers for deaf at church

■ Two Clarkston churches offer sign language interpreters for deaf parishioners.

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

Imagine attending a church service and not being able to benefit from the message of the sermon, the melodies of the music or the morals behind the scriptures.

That's what happens to deaf and hearing-impaired worshippers who want to have a spiritual experience in a church setting.

Getting that experience is no problem at two Clarkston-area churches. Maranatha Baptist Church, 5790 Flemings Lake Road, and Mount Zion Church, 4900 Maybee Road, provide deaf interpreters at every church event, whether it's a service, special event or meeting.

Mount Zion Church has a full-time deaf ministry led by Terri Neal of Clarkston. She and her husband, Ron, are both pastors at the church. They have four children, Donnie, Andrew, Jennifer and Jessica. Ron is responsible for many things at the church, including building maintenance, construction and reconstruction.

"There are about 40 deaf adults and children who call Mount Zion their home church," said Neal, who started the deaf ministry in April 1996. "We service all their needs for interpreters at any service, class and program they attend at our church. The church also offers American Sign Language classes for free to anyone interested as well as special programs and events geared specifically to deaf individuals.

Neal founded the Deaf Ministry after MaryAnn Suffridge, who is deaf, began attending Mount Zion.

Neal's initial interest in learning American Sign Language began in the late '70s after she met Billy Ingham of Clarkston. Ingham is the father of Elizabeth Clarno, who works with the deaf ministry at Maranatha Baptist Church.

Neal feels very fortunate to be considered part of the deaf community through her ministry. She's learned the nuances of American Sign Language through her deaf friends, including Suffridge.

Ingrid Kocik assists Neal in the ministry along with Billy and Janet Schwall, whom Neal calls her advisors about the deaf culture. The Schwalls are deaf, as are their children.

The situation is different at Maranatha Baptist Church. Its group of deaf interpreters is larger than the number of deaf or hearing-impaired congregation members.

There are nine people involved in the Deaf Ministry. Their skills with American Sign Language range from beginning to professional deaf interpreters for the few adults and two children congregants who are deaf.

These deaf interpreters sign for every church function and are available to sign for a Sunday school class, for a church function, or whenever their services are needed at church.

"This program was started about 10 years ago because we had a deaf family that began to come to our church," said Pastor Glen Currie. "Before that, we didn't realize the need. That was the beginning of our deaf ministry."

Since then, the ministry offers beginning sign language classes as well as deaf interpreters.

"We encourage our congregants to learn some sign language, if it's for nothing more than to carry on a casual conversation with our deaf members."

Mother of 19 kids never complained

REV. ROGER CAMPBELL

When Susanna Annesley married Samuel Wesley, she probably didn't expect to give birth to 19 children, eight of whom would die at birth. But as her life unfolded, making motherhood her primary responsibility, Susanna rose to the occasion and we're still reaping the benefits of her love for her family and her devotion to God.

Eighteenth century England was a tough setting in which to raise children. Kuiper, the historian, describes conditions there as religiously stagnant and morally corrupt.

Most churches existing in the Wesley's world would have been of little help to growing families. Sermons are said to have lacked warmth and enthusiasm, being, for the most part, but dry, cold and colorless talks on morality. Many of the pastors hobnobbed with the rich, neglecting poorer parishioners.

Moral conditions were deplorable. Drunkenness was common, compounding the problems of crime and violence. Had there been an end-of-the-day television news summary at that time, the reports would have been depressing enough to rob any mother of her sleep.

Susanna Wesley's husband, Samuel, was the pastor of a small church in rural Epworth. He was a good man, somewhat laid back, and given more to writing poetry than to facing the difficult decisions required of the father of such a large family. Most of the responsibility of raising the children fell to Susanna, and she accepted it graciously, determined not to disappoint either her husband or her children.

■ Susanna's secret of contentment endures in her well-known slogan: "Give others the sunshine. Give Jesus the rest."

There must have been times when this mother of so many felt almost overwhelmed, but she had discovered a great stress reducer that carried her through the pressure periods; she simply gave her daily difficulties to the Lord. Susanna's secret of contentment endures in her well-known slogan: "Give others the sunshine. Give Jesus the rest."

As a result, Samuel had a happy wife and their children a happy mother — one who was given to thankfulness, no matter what was going on around her.

When Susanna's eighteenth child, Charles, wrote "Oh For a Thousand Tongues to Sing My Great Redeemer's Praise" (still found in most hymnals), he was drawing on childhood experiences. He had grown up under the influence of a mother who was known for praising rather than pouting.

Susanna's faith and self-discipline paid off. Her 15th and 18th children, John and Charles, shook their century for God and the impact of that spiritual earthquake continues to reverberate, enriching the worship of churches today.

So deep was Susanna's devotion to her Lord that her greatest joy was to see her children serve Him. When John and Charles left England in 1735 to do missionary work in America, she wrote: "Had I 20 sons I should rejoice that they were all so employed, though I should never see them more."

When John and Charles Wesley returned to England, they entered into the personal and genuine faith experience their mother had longed to see in them and for which she had prayed, becoming the prime movers in a spiritual awakening that changed their nation and still influences the world.

Some historians believe England was spared from a violent revolution by the moral and social changes that took place there under the powerful ministries of Susanna's sons.

We should never underestimate the power of praying, praising mothers. They deserve our praise and should be counted among our most valuable national resources.

■ What a sweet and special image is provided for me when I envision my wonderful grandmother ... overseeing my daughter as she romps ... in my grandmother's yard.

she has requested that I not do so.

Today, however, she will have to try not to judge me. I am unable to resist the urge because my 95-year-old grandmother recently told me a story about my daughter that I had never heard before.

As she did so, I relived the wonderful years when my daughter was a toddler. When I let her thick hair grow long so I could "do it up special" and I reveled in buying her fancy dresses and I took her regularly to photographers who would capture for eternity her beauty and her wonder.

As my grandmother — who used to occasionally baby-sit my daughter — unfolded her story, she explained about how my daughter used to pick the heads off of the dandelions that were gone to seed in her yard, put them in a little wagon, and then later blow those seeds into the wind as children do.

My daughter also, my grandmother said, used to do the same with her garden chives. She plucked them and she wagoned them and she pulled them behind her and, eventually, she blew them out into life.

My grandmother, in response, let the chives grow where they fell. And so, over time, with nothing more than simple patience, my grandmother came to produce a most prolific and generous crop.

"It didn't bother me," my grandmother said, using the language of advanced age that I so love.

"Heavens to Betsy," she said, "I've supplied everybody on the street. Oh, honey, there's gobs."

What a sweet and special image is provided for me when I envision my wonderful grandmother, seated perhaps in her old lawn chair on a hot summer's day, overseeing my daughter as she romps and lives in youthful innocence in my grandmother's yard. Or when I picture my grandmother taking the flavor of her home-grown chives to her many neighbors.

My grandmother now, of course, is within an arm's reach of being 100. My daughter, if she looks closely, approaches her third decade.

I, on the other hand, am hovering on the distant shores of middle age. Still, I need look no further than my grandmother for the secret to a great bounty.

You release your seeds into the wind and you grant them patience, knowing that in the great scheme of things they will take root and flourish.

Currie said. "We also want deaf people in our community to feel welcome here and to see that they are not treated any differently from anyone else. We minister to people of all backgrounds and needs."

In fact the church is sponsoring a Deaf Awareness Day on Sunday, June 4. Currie explained one of its purposes is for people to learn what it's like to be deaf so they may learn to be more sensitive to deaf or hearing-impaired people.

Elizabeth Clarno and Christine Pendley are two of the interpreters at Maranatha Baptist Church. They both have first-hand experience with the deaf. Since Clarno's father, Ingham, is deaf, she's been using sign language her whole life.

"It's like a second language for me," she said. She and her husband, Pat, live in Springfield Township with their children, Thomas, Dustin and Alissa.

For Pendley, learning the language was also a necessity. She and her husband, Eric, have two deaf children, Teshia and Caleb. Their other two children are Brendan and Tobi. The family lives in Brandon Township.

Pendley and Clarno are very active in interpreting for the church congregation.

■ The two women are busy preparing to interpret the play, Crossroads at Columbine ... at 6 p.m. Sunday, May 21. The public is welcome to hear this true story about Cassie Bernall, one of the victims of the Columbine High School shooting last spring in Littleton, Colo.

"We try to make sure all events are interpreted, even banquets and Bible study," Pendley said.

There usually are two to four interpreters scheduled for every service, for example. The less experienced interpreters interpret songs sung by the choir. They have time to get the words beforehand and can practice how to sign the song.

The more experienced interpreters, such as Clarno and Pendley, interpret the sermon.

Interpreting is more than spelling out words with sign language letters. "It's a whole different language," explained Pendley. The interpreter actually has to take what someone says in English and translate it into American Sign Language.

It's like interpreting from English to Spanish on the spot.

Clarno is a professional interpreter. She accompanies people to doctors appointments, for example, and interprets plays, business meetings and other situations. Pendley just received her bachelor's degree in concentration of interpreting.

The two women are busy preparing to interpret the play, Crossroads at Columbine. The drama team, The Proclaimers from Northland Baptist Bible College from Wisconsin, is presenting the play at Maranatha Baptist Church at 6 p.m. Sunday, May 21. The public is welcome to hear this true story about Cassie Bernall, one of the victims of the Columbine High School shooting last spring in Littleton, Colo.

Sunday morning service at Maranatha is at 11 a.m. The times at Mount Zion are 8:10 a.m., 9:30 a.m. and 11:15 a.m.

Mt. Zion has full-time deaf ministry

Mount Zion Church, 4900 Maybee, Independence Township, has a full-time Deaf Ministry program.

Pastor Terri Neal and her small staff provide deaf interpreters for every service and event a deaf person might attend.

There is always deaf interpreting going on for the following events: 9:30 a.m. Sunday services; Sunday school classes with deaf children attending; Sunday evening Bible study classes; Sunday evening teenage program at Clarkston Christian Association; Monday evening Steps to Life Enrichment class; Tuesday morning healing service followed by lunch at Great Lakes Crossing for deaf worshippers; Wednesday evening worship and communion service and children's classes, Friday evening family night events at Waterford Christian Association and Saturday evening singles fellowship. The church also sponsors a monthly Kids of Deaf Adults meeting during the Friday family nights.

There is a Bible study class for the deaf at 6 p.m. Sunday, conducted completely in American Sign Language.

The church also provides interpreters for the 8:10 a.m. and 11 a.m. services if a deaf person comes to worship.

It provides interpreting at the ministers training school on Tuesday evenings. Neal said nine deaf people are enrolled in the three-year program.

Davisburg man makes Commandant's List during 1st year at Navy Academy

Two years ago, Nick Strelchuk graduated valedictorian from Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes and had just been awarded the U.S. Navy's highest ROTC scholarship in the amount of $80,000 by competing academically and physically against 68,500 other high school students in the country. He headed out to the engineering honors college at the University of Arizona in Tucson in the fall of '98. But soon after he came to realize that to reach his ultimate goal of flying the Navy's F-16s, he'd need a strong edge ... and that edge would be to graduate from the Navy Academy in Annapolis, Md.

So even though it would mean starting over again as a freshman (plebe) and competing against the best of the best for the $250,000 scholarship, he decided to go for it. After months of countless interviews, applications and physical exams, all he needed was an official nomination. He eventually received not one but four nominations (Sen. Spencer Abraham, U. S. Rep. Dale Kildee, Sen. Carl Levin and his NROTC commander at University of Arizona). That was the icing on the cake, and Strelchuk was inducted into the Naval Academy on July 1, 1999, in the Class of 2003. Now a year later he has just finished his plebe year.

4th Class Midshipman Strelchuk

He survived the hottest summer on record in Annapolis and lost 17 pounds while competing in six weeks of induction training. His new life as 4th Class Midshipman Strelchuk revolves around Bancroft Hall, the largest dorm in the country where all midshipman reside. His day usually starts at 5:30 a.m. with physical training and ends late at night studying for his engineering degree. Luckily his recruiter, Chief Petty Officer John Getty, who had become his mentor, was transferred from Michigan to the Pentagon and was chosen as Strelchuk's sponsor to provide Strelchuk with a home away from the rigors of academy life on weekends.

Strelchuk has made the Commandant's List and is looking forward to his summer duty, which will include three weeks of sailing the Navy's 44-foot sailboat around New England and then three weeks of navigating the East Coast on its Yard Patrol boat. When he comes home to Davisburg for the remainder of the summer, he'll continue the process of earning his private pilot's license and will soon be flying solo out of the Oakland International Airport. He hopes that in another three years, he'll be commissioned as an Ensign in the US Navy and will be heading to Pensacola, Fla., to earn his wings as a Navy fighter pilot. Strelchuk's parents, Dennis and MaryAnne Strelchuk, reside in Davisburg along with his sister, Lisa, who graduates from Michigan State University this spring.

NOTABLES

Albion College student Misty D. Hensley of Clarkston completed an original research project titled "Upton Sinclair and the American Surveillance State" and made a public presentation of her research during the college's recent Elkin R. Isaac Research Symposium.

Designing and completing an original research project is much more than writing a paper, and not something that most college students do as undergraduates.

Hensley was one of approximately 70 Albion students chosen to participate in the symposium, which featured research in the areas of classical sciences, psychology, sociology, political science, art history, literature, education and economics.

Hensley, a junior, is a member of the Ford Institute for Public Policy and Service. She is the daughter of Charles W. and Pamela J. Hensley of Clarkston and a graduate of Clarkston High School.

May 13 is really a party day for the birds — and for us, too

OAKLAND... NATURALLY

JONATHAN SCHECHTER

Plume-hunting – the killing of migratory birds for fashion-conscious women – was big business early in the last century. Great blue herons and American egrets fell victim to the shooters, and fell dead from rookery tree tops by the hundreds of thousands.

President Theodore Roosevelt took direct action in 1903 and established the Pelican Island Refuge, our nation's first national wildlife refuge, an action that gave refuge to herons and egrets and other migratory birds, and an action that created consequences that spanned almost a hundred years.

May 13 is the day to party for the birds. Just don't forget old Teddy.

Spring brings the annual migration of millions and millions of birds. Great blue herons and American egrets are just two of the great variety of species that nest in Oakland County. From the teeniest of our garden birds, the feather-weight ruby throated hummingbird, to the turkey vultures that soar over Southfield on six foot wing spans, birds are a part of our lives. Their habits are as diverse as their behaviors and shapes.

Birds are diverse. Hummingbirds maneuver with precession that make military plane designers drool. They even have a "reverse gear" to fly backwards, and can quickly assume a "locked in space" position to suck nectar from a flower while hovering on wings that beat so fast they can not be seen. And then there is that seeming ungainly turkey vulture that descends to earth with a slight thud and tears away at dead things. Can't forget peregrine falcons in power dives that exceed 200 miles per hour, or the great myriad of warblers that confuse all but the best of the birders.

Count me among the confused.

No confusion here

What I am not confused about is the significance of the day, May 13, International Migratory Bird Day, a day that is for more than the birds. And often, very, very often, what is good for the birds is very good for humans. Jamie Rapport Clark offered a quote. You don't know who Jamie is? She is the woman who directs the U.S. Fish and Wildlife service and manages the 93 million-acre National Wildlife Refuge System which encompass more than 520 refuges. Her quote?"What we do for migratory birds, even in our cites, has the potential to doom a species or to save it from extinction. As communities keep growing and expanding, it is important to the health of their environment that they preserve vital open spaces close to home. It's good for the birds, good for the environment and good for the people." Good for Oakland County, too, I might add, for birds know no boundaries.

Recognizing a need to take cooperative action to protect migratory birds from new hazards, Partners in Flight – an international coalition that includes the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, other federal and state wildlife agencies, conservation groups, academic institutions and corporations – has dedicated itself to reversing declines in migratory bird populations. International Migratory Bird Day is the hallmark event of Partners in Flight.

And here, in Oakland County, we can take pride in what citizenry and local governments have done, or look back with regret on what we let slip away. An island heron rookery visible from the new 800-foot-long Wildwing Lake boardwalk at Kensington Metropark and the acclaimed West Bloomfield Woods Nature Preserve rookery, with just under 140 active nests, are just two examples of magnificent migratory birds protected in our midst.

Our sanctuaries, parks, nature preserves and wilder sections of school yards provide habitat for migratory birds. And these places of green, in a county that swallows land for human endeavors at a phenomenal rate, do much to nourish human life and human spirit. International Bird Migratory Day is your day. Listen to the birds at dawn. Take the time to step out-of-doors when the eastern horizon glows red. Just listen.

Orion's Ashley Patten is the real deal

In the arena of athletics, there are all sorts of athletes.

There are gamers, blue-collar workers, people who just come to play and have fun, and athletes that like to rise to the occasion.

But above all, there are athletes that boast the complete package — athletes like Lake Orion's Ashley Patten.

The talented sophomore has emerged as not only one of the best in the area in the sport of track & field — but perhaps in the state and the Midwest for that matter. And she could reach even greater heights by the end of the outdoor season.

No matter what the event, the weather, the opponent, Patten has rarely been defeated during the past season and a half, and when she wins a race, she turns more than a few heads.

That was the case last Friday at the Romeo Richard Caruss Invitational.

Patten was clocked at a school record 15.24 in the 100-meter intermediate hurdles — nearly a half of a second ahead of here nearest competitor — but that was only a taste of what was to come.

She later set a meet record in the 300-meter low hurdles (46.5) at the girls-only invitational. And then less than 15 minutes later, she stepped back on the track and cruised to a win in the 800 meters (2:22.8).

"It was the amazing thing," said Lake Orion girls coach Sharon Kline. "I don't know if I've ever seen someone do that, run two events in a row and not only win, but win convincingly."

Lake Orion hurdles coach Mike Hatch didn't want Patten to even try the back-to-back events — at first.

"Honestly, I didn't think it was a good idea," he said. "But then I thought if anybody could do it, it's Ashley Patten."

For good measure, Patten came back and anchored the winning 1,600-meter relay in 4:13.0 — less than a second off the school record.

After the meet, Patten — who was fifth in the nation in the 600 meters indoors this past winter — was voted as the unanimous Meet MVP, which was the first time in the meet's prestigious history that an athlete was a unanimous selection as the MVP.

In track & field, Michigan is home to some of the best athletes around, as Rockford junior Dathan Ritzenhein, Saginaw's Charles Rogers, Saginaw Heritage's Stewart Schweigart, and Southfield's Melanie Williams, just to name a few, are among the best in the nation in their events. Perhaps Ashley Patten will join those ranks before the outdoor season comes to a close.

Stay tuned.

■ On track: North Oakland County is loaded with several top-notch performers in track & field this spring, and several could qualify and place at the state meet s in early June.

Oxford senior distance runner Karen LeRoy is closing in on 5:20 in the 1600 meters and has gone under 11:45 in the 3200 with still a month left in the season. LeRoy should be a threat to place in both at the Division II finals.

Oxford senior shot putter Eric Ghiaciuc has already cleared 51-feet this spring and is another candidate to place at the state meet.

Over at Clarkston, the Wolves' 3,200-meter relay unit of Brett Quantz, Matt Haver, David Sage and Kevin Breen has already gone 8:05 and should be under 8-flat come June. Sage is also a sub 4:20 miler and 9:30 two-miler, while Breen and Quantz are also sub two-minute runners in the 800. Breen has also run 50.6 in the 400, meaning this group of seniors could qualify and score in a lot of different events at the Division I state meet.

Clarkston's girls also have a couple of potential state qualifiers, as seniors Brittani Brewer, Rachel Uchman and Nicole Fisher have been standouts in

Clarkston football trio set to move on

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
STAFF WRITER
bmonastiere@oe.homecomm.net

Clarkston's football program is sending three more players to collegiate ranks, all coming from different parts of the field.

Last week, seniors Chad Booker, Jon Robinson and Eric Bauer all announced that they would be playing college football next year. Booker, despite being injured most of the 1999 season, will play at Division III Hope College. Robinson, a three-year starter on the offensive line, is going to Division II Ohio-Weslyan, while Bauer, also a three-year starter on the line, will play at Division III Albion.

The three players join Ryan "Bubba" Clement as players from last year's state Division I regional championship team to announce their intentions of playing in college. Clement will play at Division II Grand Valley in the fall.

Clarkston coach Kurt Richardson said the team's success last fall will help build that desire to be just as successful in college.

"They'll want the same thing in college, and it was nice they got a taste of it here," he said. "They are all going to successful programs."

Booker was injured in Clarkston's win over Pontiac Northern Sept. 24, and could not compete the rest of the season. But he remained an inspirational leader for the Wolves, who made it to the state semifinals for the first time in school history.

"KR was a big influence on helping me get the chance to play next year," Booker said. He recommended me to some of the coaches, and showed them some film."

Booker played tight end, fullback, linebacker, and defensive line during his two years on the varsity team. Richardson said that versatility will serve him well in college.

"He's played all over the field for us, and I think that will make his adjustment easier," he said. "He's an athlete who catches the ball well out of the backfield."

Booker also played two years on the varsity basketball team under coach Dan Fife.

Bauer was a All-Eccentric Area First-Team selection last fall, and set Clarkston's bench press record at last year's Lift-A-Thon. He dominated opponents with his strength and footwork along the offensive line.

Split ends

Clarkston, Kettering take one apiece in OAA I double-header showdown

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
AND DUNCAN E. WHITE
STAFF WRITERS

Never before did a doubleheader split mean so much to a softball program.

After all, it has been nearly two years since the dark cloud formed over the Clarkston softball team ... at least when it took on Waterford Kettering.

During a regional tournament game in 1998, Clarkston had Kettering on the ropes: Trailing in the post-season affair ... bottom of the seventh inning ... two outs.

What appeared to be a lazy infield pop fly, and along with it an engraved invitation to the next round for Clarkston, turned into a nightmare for Clarkston.

The ball misplayed, the baserunner rounding the bases to score the tying run and an extra-inning loss to end the Wolves' season.

Clarkston hasn't beaten Kettering since. That is, until Monday.

After dropping the first game of a doubleheader to the Captains, Clarkston rallied for an early lead in the second game and posted a 3-1 win to earn the split.

"We were kind of hoping to go in there and get a split," said Clarkston head coach Al Land. "We have a pretty nice team ourselves and we knew that if we played well we can win a game (from Kettering)."

The win was more than just a step in the right direction for the Clarkston program. It ran a little deeper for everyone, including the coach himself.

"I coached (Kettering shortstop) Andrea (Hillsey) in the summer since she was 12 years old or so ... in fact, I've coached a lot of those kids over the years so it's always an extra special thing to play against them."

Clarkston senior pitcher Candace Morgan took the mound for the Wolves in the second game and held Kettering to just two hits.

"She did an outstanding job keeping the ball down low and inside on them," said Land. "They have a lot of real nice power hitters and we wanted to hit them on the fists."

Clarkston leadoff hitter Melanie Arnold was 5-for-7 over both games, helping the Wolves' offense all afternoon.

"Whatever (Kettering head coach) Joe (Alsup) did to stop her, it didn't work," added Land. "She has outstanding speed is very difficult to get out when she puts the ball in play."

Kettering coach Joe Alsup remains confident in his team's chances this season despite the loss.

"They played eight games in three days and that's tough to do," he said. "I think we were a little tired by the time we got around to that last one. We were just walking through the motions and Clarkston took advantage of it."

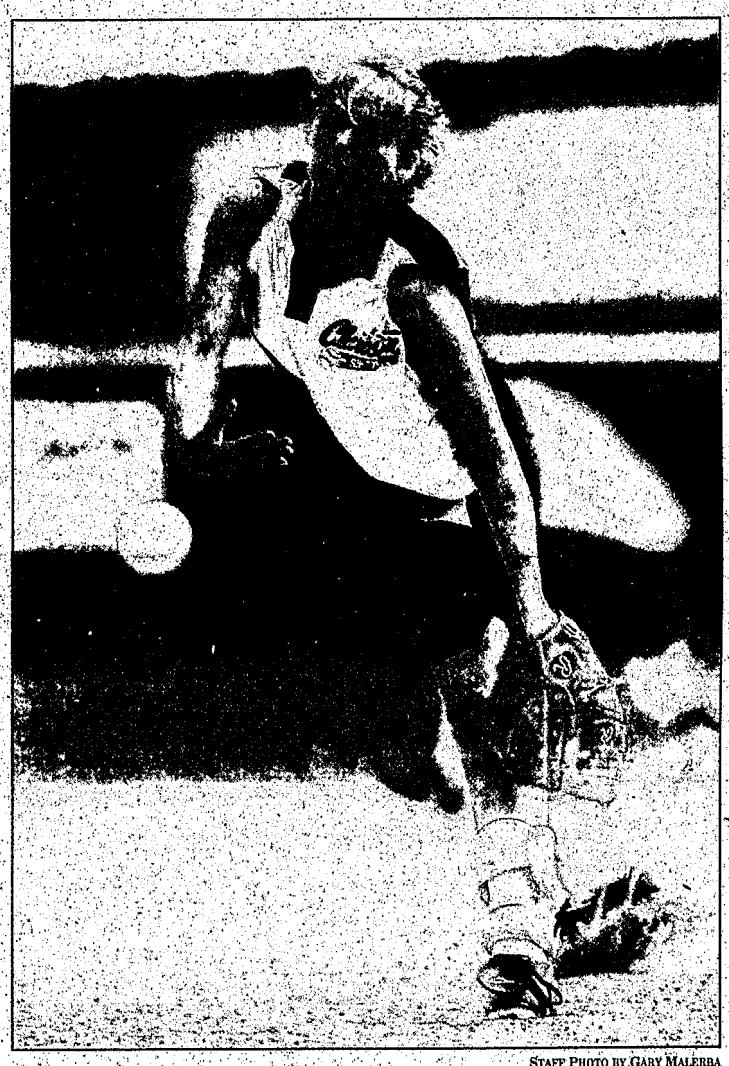

Hillsey led the Captains in the first game, going 3-for-4 with two doubles, three RBI and a run scored.

■ North Star Softball Classic — Not many teams get to finish a tournament with a win, but the way the Clarkston softball team played last weekend, a win to end its tournament was fitting.

The Wolves dropped a pair of one-run heartbreakers, but recovered to get three decisive wins at last weekend's North Star Softball Classic at Liberty Park in Sterling Heights. Clarkston wrapped up play with a 7-0 win over Harper Woods Regina, the defending tournament champ, Sunday afternoon.

Clarkston's 3-2 weekend was met with praise from Land, who said he is

Springfield kickers avenge Bethany

In an early-season non-league affair, Troy Bethany Christian dodged several bullets and wound up upsetting Clarkston Springfield Christian on the soccer pitch, 2-1. But when the two met again on Tuesday, Springfield Christian more than remembered.

Behind a four-goal explosion from freshman forward Sarah Beardslee, the Eagles got their revenge with a 4-0 Fundamental Baptist Athletic Conference triumph in Clarkston.

"Yeah, I was afraid that might happen," said Bethany Christian coach T.J. Klapperich. "I wasn't at the last game because I was sick, but the report that I got was that Springfield wasn't very organized. They sure were today."

Springfield Christian (5-2-0, 2-0) outshot Bethany (3-3-0, 3-2) by a 25-9 margin, including 15-7 with shots directly on goal, and controlled play throughout.

As for Beardslee, it took her just 11 minutes to get untracked, as she took a cross from freshman midfielder Angela Fornwall and one-timed a shot past Bethany junior keeper Rachel Jackman.

Beardslee was back at it again just four minutes later, as she collected a pass from freshman midfielder Alicia Weiler in traffic and ripped a shot top shelf from 15 yards out.

"She's a very intense player," said Springfield Christian coach Dennis Hopkins of Beardslee. "She keeps working, doesn't complain what's going on around here. She never quits and that helps her create chances."

Springfield got its third goal 10 minutes before the break again off the foot from Beardslee, who took a quick touch pass from senior midfielder Keri Dockery and beat Jackman low from 10 yards away. Beardslee's final tally came early in the second half

Wolves earn Ashley Relays title

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER

All good things come to those who wait. Just ask Clarkston boys track & field coach Walt Wyniemko.

After several top five finishes at the prestigious Waterford Mott- Ashley Relays, his Wolves finally finished on top, claiming the 15-team meet title Saturday with 79 points — some 25 points ahead of defending champion Pontiac Northern.

Walled Lake Central was third with 48 points, while Waterford Mott (46.5), Howell (45.5), Lake Orion (43), Walled Lake Western (36), Orchard Lake St. Mary's (32), Pontiac Central and Detroit U-D Jesuit (26), White Lake Lakeland (19), Novi (16), Bloomfield Hills Lahser (12), Waterford Kettering (8) and Troy Athens (4) followed suit.

"We have a strong nucleus of seniors and they are really stepping up this season," said Wyniemko. "To come in here and win this invitational against some very good teams is a nice achieve-

Clarkston, Adams split key dual meet

BY BRAD MONASTIERE

Two of Oakland County's best track teams were on display Tuesday at Clarkston High School. Although they represented different schools, each team had no trouble continuing its dominance.

Clarkston's boys track team, fresh off its win at the Ashley Relays, eased past Adams 89-39, sustaining its control over all area teams. Similarly, the Adams girls team continued to flex its muscles with a 95-33 win over the Wolves.

Clarkston's boys used its depth through all events to get the win. The Wolves took 12 first places and 10 second places, coming in all different events. Clarkston swept the long jump, 800 and 1600.

"We have a better feel for the competition in Division I, and everyone is pulling their own weight," said coach Walt Wyniemko. "We're all healthy, and this is no doubt, a big win for us."

Clarkston linkers down Groves

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

Clarkston's impressive debut in girls golf continued Tuesday afternoon.

The Wolves emerged victories for the fourth time in six dual matches, topping visiting Birmingham Groves 176-186 in an Oakland Activities Association Division III match at Heather Highlands in Springfield Twp.

Clarkston's Krista Roschak and Groves' Leslie Fozgach each fired a 42 on the par-33 course to tie for medalist honors.

Clarkston's Laura Benner was third (43), Jessica Ritter was fourth (45) and Allison Olanger tied for fifth (46) for the Wolves (4-2).

Barb Harris tied for fifth (46), Trisha Gargaro and Lindsey Naglick both tied for seventh (49) for Groves (3-1), which suffered its first dual-meet loss of the season.

a multitude of events, as well as classmate Kirsty Walford, an exchange student from England.

Track regionals are slated for May 19-20, with the top two finishers in each event, plus others that make the addition qualifying standards, head to the state finals on June 3 in the Grand Rapids area.

■ Holding court: Both Clarkston and Lake Orion are in position to capture league boys tennis championships this week, as both are currently in first place in their respective OAA divisions.

Clarkston is in first place in the OAA Division II, while Orion leads the pack in the OAA Division III.

Clarkston hosts the OAA II meet this Thursday, while Lake Orion will compete at Southfield. Troy Athens (Division I) and Hazel Park (Division IV) host the other two divisional meets.

Action is slated to start in the morning hours this Thursday, with the league meet and regular-season standings counting 50-percent towards the finals standings in each division.

Tennis regionals follow suit on May 19-20 around the state.

Good luck.

impressed with his team's continued improvement in all areas of the game.

"We're making better contact as a team, and our top two hitters are getting on base constantly," he said. "And our defense is keeping us in games. We aren't letting other teams get easy runs on us, and we are putting ourselves in a good position to win."

In its three wins, the Wolves outscored their opponents 30-3. Yet, the team could not compete for the tournament title thanks to a 1-0 loss to Brighton and a 2-1 loss to North Farmington.

Waterford Kettering ended up winning the tournament with a 7-5 win over Lake Orion in the semifinals and an 8-4 victory over Farmington Hills Mercy in the finals.

Clarkston opened the tournament with a mercy-shortened 14-2 win over East Detroit. After losing the two one-run contests, the Wolves bounced back with a 9-1 win over Hartland, and finished with the shutout of Regina.

"We had our chances against North Farmington," Land said. "They got a run in the sixth, and we have a couple hitters in the middle of our lineup who are struggling."

The Brighton game was closely contested, with neither team scoring after the second inning. Clarkston's offense was shut down by the Bulldogs' prodigious freshman pitcher Jill DeRoche.

One of Clarkston's best players at the tournament was junior pitcher Lisa Ferguson, who continued to impress with her pitching and much-improved hitting and on-base percentage.

"I think our best lineup has Lisa pitching and Candace at second base," Land said. "Our pitching has been very good, and Lisa is throwing so well right now. She's also doing a heck of a job of getting on base behind (Melanie Arnold)."

Clarkston took first in four of five field events, led by senior Kevin Breen's long jump of 19 feet, 3 1/4 inches. He was followed by Dustin Coleman (19-2 1/4) and Matt Evans (19-1).

ment. These guys have worked hard and deserved it."

Clarkston won five of the 17 events and placed in 10 overall en route to the victory. The Wolves put an exclamation point on the win when the foursome of Mark Carlson, Brett Quantz, Kevin Breen and Adam Gebus edged Pontiac Northern in the 1600-meter relay with a school-record 3:26.0 clocking.

David Sage added a win in the 3200 (9:37.1), Breen, Carlson, Quantz and Sage won the distance medley in a meet record 10:27.1, and the middle distance relay (5:49.5), and the unit of Cody Senkyr, Paul Tinetti, Matt Evans, and Dan Howard also won the shuttle hurdles (1:04.7) for the Wolves.

But Clarkston also got points from Eric Bauer and Bubba Clement in the shot put, who took third and fourth, respectively. Senkyr was sixth in the 110 hurdles, Rafael Fauza was runner-up in the high jump, and the quartet of Derek Coe, Dan Burke, Chris Weber and Matt Haver were third in the 6400 relay, which proved to be the difference.

"We have a strong contingent of seniors that really wanted to go out and win," reiterated Wyniemko. "These guys have come close before. They want to go out and try to win every meet. They are a special group of kids."

Several other Eccentric-area performers came away with titles Saturday. Walled Lake Central's Paul Lindsay won the discus (140-0) and teammate Chris Haney the pole vault (12-0).

St. Mary's David McDermott added a win in the 100 hurdles (14.3), Walled Lake Western's Lorenzo Parker won both the long jump (21-1) and 100 meters (10.7), and Mott's Andy Thorn topped the field in the shot put (54-0.5) and teamed up with Jack Thompson, Dave Humphreys and Chris Taylor to win the heavy-man relay (1:46.3).

off a feed from Karen Beardslee.

Although rarely tested, Springfield junior goalkeeper Holley Vanaman finished with seven saves — including two diving catches in the second half to preserve the shutout.

"She makes the saves she has to," said Hopkins of Vanaman.

As for Springfield's success, Hopkins still thinks there is plenty of room for improvement.

"We still have a lot to do in terms of being aggressive," he said. "If we play every game like we did against (Davison) Faith Baptist and in the second half against Holly, then we could win something. But we haven't figured out how to play at a certain level each game.

"We did some things tonight that I liked, but there is plenty to still work on."

(1995 Clarkston graduate) and Jeff Long (1998 grad), and I think that gave him the inside track to get there. It's a good fit for him, and he's walking into a program that won a national title a few years ago."

Robinson, who was recruited by some of the service academies and Ivy League schools, was a rock on offense and defense for the Wolves for three years. He was also a favorite to win the Division I state heavyweight wrestling title this year until an injury ended his season in January. Robinson is a smart, tough player who leads by example.

"He has a family tradition there. His dad and uncle played there," Richardson said of Robinson's choice to go to Ohio Weslyan. "They run the wing-T there, which will work out well for Jon because he did a lot of pulling for us. It's one of his strengths as a player, and I think it's a good fit for him as a player."

Robinson was a two-time Oakland County wrestling champion, and played one year for the Wolves' varsity baseball team.

Girls Hockey league being considered

Suburban Hockey is looking into the feasibility of a fall hockey league for girls ages 12 and under, with all games to be played at the Suburban Training Center in Farmington Hills and the Novi Ice Arena. The league would adhere to all the Michigan Amateur Hockey Association and USA Hockey rules, which means no checking.

Anyone interested in joining such a league should contact Amy Jones at Suburban Hockey at (248) 478-1600. The deadline for this phase is April 17. If enough interest is generated, registration will begin immediately.

Clement in the shot put, winning with a throw of 46-8 1/2. Rafael Fauza once again was tops in the high jump with a leap of 6-2.

Clarkston dominated the running events, led by its outstanding group of distance and middle distance runners. Senior Matt Haver won the 3200 with a time of 10:11.7. Senior David Sage took first in the 1600 with a run of 4:32.09, and senior Brett Quantz edged Sage in the 800 with a first-place time of 1:59.9.

Junior Adam Gebus keeps getting better, achieving a personal best in the 200 with a winning time of 22.55, followed by sophomore Shane Bennett (23.31).

Junior Cody Senkyr, part of the first-place 1600 relay team, said the team's sprinters have stepped up and scored key points for the team, which is a big difference over years past.

"We aren't getting swept in the sprints anymore, which helps us to get over the top," he said. "There is not an event we can't score in. Last year, we were getting swept in the 100 and 200, and that isn't happening anymore."

Clarkston's girls had a tough go of it against a team considered to be the best in the county. Adams won all but two events in keeping its undefeated record intact. The Wolves got firsts from Lindsay Hawley in the discus (96-9) and Brittani Brewer in the high jump (5-0). Adams' Nadia Bedricky and Clarkston's Lindsay Brandt also had jumps of 5-0.

Clarkston coach Gordie Richardson said he knew his team would face an uphill challenge taking on Adams, but remained hopeful his team could get closer to the Highlanders.

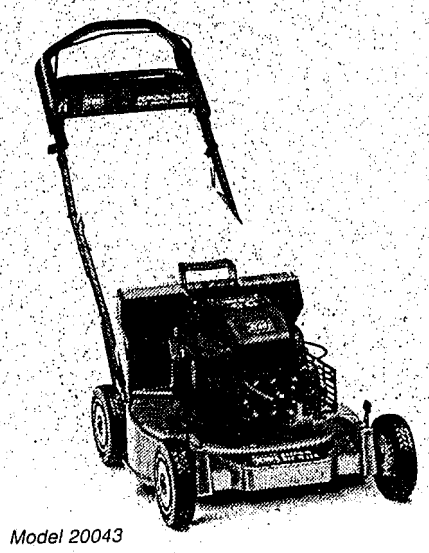

"We'll find out Thursday how we respond," Richardson said, alluding to the team's dual meet with Troy. "We knew Adams would be pretty good, and I thought if we had our best day, we might be able to squeeze out a tie. I thought we ran OK, and Adams is beating everyone else worse than this."

Richardson said he has been pleased with the efforts of exchange student Kirsty Walford, who was second in the 200 (27.81) and the long jump (15-1 1/2).

"Lindsay Brandt has been healthy, and that's been a big factor in her improvement this year," he added. "Andrea O'Day has also gotten so much better. We just don't have the horses to compete against Adams."

Saturday, the girls team hosts the Clarkston Invitational, with competition starting at 9 a.m. The boys and girls teams travel to Troy for another OAA I dual meet Thursday, starting at 4 p.m.

In with spring

Fresh look: A Rose Is A Rose has brought the beauty and freshness of a springtime garden indoors. Owner Lisa Phillips has gathered a selection of new and vintage items with a garden-inspired sensibility, many of them exclusive to the Detroit area. New lines for spring include plump pillows of vintage chenilles, bark cloth, linens and laces, handmade by a local artist, in a new selection of springlike fabrics and colors; fruit topiaries with faux lsemons, pears or blueberries that will provide a striking kitchen or dining room accent; and sumptuous tapestry tablecloths and pillows in vegetable and floral motifs, jacquard woven in France. The shop is on the second floor of Heritage Co. II Architectural Artifacts & Design at 116 E. Seventh in Royal Oak. Call (248) 582-1911.

Also for Mom are such items as trinket boxes, unusual trays, handmade candlesticks, perfume bottles and a variety of interior accessories. The boutique is between 14 Mile and Middlebelt. Check your older grills for leaks

JOE GAGNON

If you have an older barbecue grill which has a lot of rust and you're wondering if it is worth repairing, you should use caution.

Annual statistics from the Consumer Product Safety Commission reveal that thousands of Americans will suffer from severe burns this year from cooking outside. As sad as this fact may be, and I'm sure that some of it is caused by old corroded equipment, most of the harm is created by just plain carelessness.

If you stop and think about the fuel source alone, it should be enough to catch your attention. That propane tank attached to your barbecue is very close to the fire that sits above it. The fittings which attach the hoses need to be checked out and made sure not to leak. A cup of water mixed with a heavy concentration of liquid dishwasher detergent can be used for the bubble test. Take a little sponge and apply the solution to all the connections.

Take the grill apart and check the areas where the gas leaves the burner valves. This is the path the gas must take to ignite and travel to the burners. If these parts are falling apart due to rust, replace them. The Servall Co. is a good source for replacement parts and so are many of the outlets that sell barbecue units. Always have a fire extinguisher available near the barbecue. It is a good idea to have one in the kitchen, but it's of little help if a fire starts on the deck, so always have another one available close by.

Now, you should know some facts about the propane tank. Comparing propane gas to aviation fuel, it is lighter and has a quicker ignition point than regular gas for your car. In a study done on cigarette lighters, an exploding defective lighter can create a flame 12-inches long and 4-inches wide for several seconds, and sometimes even injures people.

The propane storage tank for your barbecue is a critical part of the whole outdoor cooking concept. It can be the difference between fun and tragedy for your family. The next time you have it filled, ask the technician to check the valve for any leaks.

You also should never store a full tank of propane gas in the trunk of your vehicle on a hot summer day. Some people who have done this because they went shopping or simply forgot the tank was there are now are no longer around.

Of course, when you are done cooking, always remember to shut off the burners and shut off the valve on top of the propane tank.

This column was not intended to frighten you, but enlighten you. Take heart, because you can always go to the barbecue system this writer prefers. It's the "old" style barbecue, where you place charcoal briquettes onto a grate and light them using charcoal lighter. I like to use different types of wood chips and experiment with new food flavors. I cook meat for 90 seconds on one side, then flip it over to seal in the juices.

At the end of the summer, I would like you to try something very few people know about. Barbecue several steaks so they come out as rare as possible. Take those steaks, wrap them well and put them in the freezer. Sometime in the dead of winter, when the temperature is so cold and you don't even want to go outside, finish cooking that steak in your microwave oven.

You'll be sitting there looking outside, thinking, "Wow, just like it came off the barbecue." Stay tuned.

Readers write

Colleen Milligan of Birmingham followed my recent suggestion in leveling a Speed Queen commercial heavy duty washer to get rid of a crackling noise during the agitation cycles, but it still makes noises. She writes, "If we tilt the basket slightly, the noise disappears until it re-centers itself."

She asked how to get inside of the machine to see if anything is loose.

The washer's problem may be a pump belt that has stretched and flaps together when it is running. To remove the front of the machine, remove two screws at the bottom of the front panel, pull the front off and everything is exposed. Check the tub springs.

Tang recipe revisited

I recently wrote how to use Tang's acidity in cleaning a dishwasher's motor impellers. Tom Carravallah of Livonia wondered how much Tang to use.

You can use either-sized container, the 16-ounce or 22-ounce jar, and empty its contents. (Be sure to watch for any silicon packet that may be in the jar and remove it before dumping the Tang into the dishwasher.)

Have you ever found yourself at the zoo or snapping the children in the back yard and wishing you could "bring things in a little closer?"

Well, you can! And it won't cost you a lot, either. It's a piece of equipment that will convert your normal lens into a telephoto and your telephoto into an even longer lens. It's called a teleconverter.

A 2-X teleconverter – or extender, as it is sometimes called – is a device that exactly doubles the focal length of your lens. For example, a normal 50mm lens will become a 100mm lens and a 200mm lens will perform like a 400mm lens.

A converter looks like a miniature lens. In seconds it can be easily inserted between the camera body and your other lens. So be sure to buy an extender designed for your particular camera brand.

What are the advantages of teleconverters? First, you're getting a compact, inexpensive accessory that doubles the focal length of all your lenses, even zoom lenses. Converters should cost between $60 and $120 depending on the brand of converter and camera.

Second, converters are designed to be compatible with your camera's metering system. This means automatic cameras will still perform automatically, and the older match-needle cameras will still function normally when the converter is attached.

Third, the focusing distance isn't altered by the addition of a converter. Suppose you have a 200mm lens on your camera focused on a subject 20 feet away, but the subject isn't quite filling the frame as you would like. Adding the converter to get an effective 400mm lens will enable you to fill the frame and still focus at 20 feet. This can be highly advantageous under certain picture-taking situations because most 400mm lenses lack capability of focusing at close distances.

Any drawbacks to teleconverters? You lose two f-stops of exposure or two shutter speeds of stopping power when using an extender. A subject that requires an aperture of f-16 normally will need f-8 when an extender is used. Or a shutter speed setting of 1/500 second will become 1/125 when employing an extender.

Remember, though, that while you are losing aperture or shutter speed, your camera's meter automatically compensates and proper exposure is always assured.

So when you want to "extend" your photographic opportunities, a teleconverter will do just fine!

Mane attraction: A normal 200mm lens just wasn't long enough for Monte Nagler to "fill the frame" – no lyin'! But by using an extender, Monte was able to "move in close" and capture this king of beasts.

A look at history: Winston Churchill memorablia are among the collections at Paul and Carolyn Sadows' house.

Inside story: Colle have much to te

By Susan Tauber
Staff Writer

Imagine picking out your favorite unusual items found through Sadows Auction Galleries in downtown Clarkston and filling your home with them.

That's exactly what the owners of the prestigious auction house have done.

Owners Paul and Carolyn Sadows have created an eclectic interior at their home at 7640 Holcomb Road. The house will be one of five distinguished homes featured on Clarkston Home Tour 18, taking place Saturday-Sunday, June 3-4. (See related story.)

Their contemporary house on five acres is filled with items they've been collecting for the past 25 years. These include beautiful antiques, original Art Deco pieces, aged oil paintings, rare Lalique crystal, 19th century bronzes and much more.

And they love everything they have in their house.

The Sadowses emphasized their abode is a home, not a museum. They raised their three sons, Ron and Jeff Chamberlain and PJ Sadows, there. They've hosted a wedding and numerous parties for children and adults alike throughout the house over the years.

Nothing is put away when their grandchildren visit. The youngsters know the rules at grandma and grandpa's house, Carolyn Sadows said.

"They can touch whatever is out with two fingers but they can't pick anything up or open any of the display cabinets," she said.

And they have a story to tell about every item in their house.

"There's no such thing as never having any room for another item," Carolyn said. "We never sell anything we've bought. We just keep adding and finding a place for the things

Welcome butterflies to your garden

MARTY FIGLEY

Have you ever watched a butterfly as it flitted from flower to flower to gather nectar? This is such a beautiful sight as its gossamer wings glimmer in the sunshine and its little self is so absorbed in the quest.

These ephemeral creatures can be enticed into your garden if you provide the things they need.

Whether your property is large or small, the plants and other amenities that you put in the garden have a great influence on whether the butterflies will visit.

Butterflies need specific things: sun, shelter, water and nectar. Let me explain.

A sunny area for the garden is necessary for two reasons. First, the flowering plants need sun to bloom and the butterflies need sun to warm their wings because they are unable to produce their own body heat. They also need the sun for navigation, just as sailors use the stars for the same purpose.

Shelter is important so that the wind doesn't jostle them around and make it difficult for them to fly. A living hedge or a louvered or lattice fence with vines growing on it is excellent. Be sure the wall or fence isn't solid because then the wind will rush over it and create havoc on the other side. Butterflies find that roosting in shrubs and trees protects them.

Water is another must in a butterfly garden. Butterflies really prefer a mud puddle so they can probe the mud with their long proboscis and draw up water and minerals.

Clear water will be fine if the puddle idea doesn't work in your garden; the water must be shallow. Add a few flat stones in and near the puddle to give them a place to land.

A large saucer for a flower pot makes a good container for the water. Fill the saucer with sand and pour water in until you can make an indentation with your fingerprint. Set it on the ground and watch the butterflies gather.

And finally, nectar. It's wise to plant a variety of plants with various bright colors and those that bloom at different times of the year so you'll have the creatures all summer long.

Butterflies use their long proboscis like a straw. It curls up until it's time to sip the nectar.

Butterflies are inactive below temperatures around 50 degrees F, so some of the very early blooming flowers will be gone before the butterflies arrive.

Butterflies like bright colors such as purple, yellow, pink and white, with purple being a favorite. Orange and red flowers will also attract as will those with a fragrance.

Tubular flowers allow the butterfly to dip into the center for nectar and flat flowers give them a landing spot. Small butterflies such as skippers do well with plants such as thyme or sweet alyssum; larger ones such as swallowtails need taller, sturdier plants such as yarrow or Queen Anne's lace that have clusters of many small blossoms arranged like a plate.

The centers of daisy-like flowers are composed of tiny "disc flowers" and the outer "rays" or petals make them more noticeable. These "rays" also provide a good landing area. The zinnia is another example of a good landing space flower.

Scent is another consideration in a butterfly garden. The fragrances that emit from heliotropes, viburnums, lilacs and others will draw the creatures to your garden like a magnet.

You might consider leaving the grass in an area of your yard unmowed and a bit messy. The butterflies will appreciate this wilder growth. Many nectar and larval food plants are wildflowers; violets provide food for some larvae. Some are considered weeds. It is very necessary to use no chemicals in a butterfly garden.

Who knows? You may encourage your neighbors to do the same and then there will be more butterflies in the neighborhood.

MARTY FIGLEY

Butterfly buddy: Butterfly bush, Buddleia, is a favorite. There are several varieties.

Butterflies have a life cycle composed of four stages: the egg, larva, pupa and adult.

The female adult lays eggs, the larva hatch, then these larva (caterpillars) feed heartily on plant foliage, shedding layers of skin as they outgrow them and form pupae, the dormant form in which they are covered with a shell, or chrysalis. They then rest for the proper time before they emerge as butterflies. Isn't that something?

Join me 7:30 p.m. today at Barsons Greenhouse, 6414 N. Merriman in Westland, and we'll discuss this further.

Leave Marty Figley a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then 3445. Her fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Cranbrook site of sale

BY MARTY FIGLEY
Special Writer

The annual spring plant sale at Cranbrook, 380 Lone Pine Road in Bloomfield Hills, will take place 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 17, and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday, May 18. Park at Christ Church Cranbrook across Lone Pine Road and take a shuttle to the sale.

There is a new look to this popular sale that you won't want to miss. A hospitality area will give shoppers a chance to rest a bit, and several speakers will share their knowledge about the plants.

Janet Macunovich will present "Recipes & Prescriptions For Your Plants" 1:30-3 p.m. Wednesday.

On Thursday these subjects will be covered: "Care of House Plants/Orchids," 10 a.m.; "Herbs Of Use & Delight," 11 a.m.; and "Where & Care Of Wildflowers," noon.

Many, many plants will be offered, including wildflowers, more than 300 different perennials, herbs, orchids and miniature roses, along with the popular handpainted items, mud gloves, honey hoe, books and more. The Greenhouse will offer plants suitable for your own containers that you design yourself. You may plant at the sale, or take them home to plant. Also, a "For Children Only Plant Sale" will take place.

Bring your own boxes and wagons or carts to carry plants. Wear comfortable shoes; the garden paths are hilly and may be muddy.

Pat Pampreen of Bloomfield Hills and Eva Proudfoot of Orchard Lake have been co-chairs of the Reflecting Pool Garden and the yellow portion of the garden that surrounds the pool for four years. They also care for the old-fashioned peonies that grow around the fountain.

Last year there were many problems with the algae in the water, so they put goldfish in to control it and it worked. In just one summer the little goldfish grew to 6 inches long.

These gardeners try to use unusual plants with yellow or blue blooms and those with gray foliage as accents.

For instance, many daylilies are included that have various yellow shades. Among these are "Stella de oro," a miniature that has a slightly more orange cast than does "happy returns." Coreopsis "moonbeam" has a pale, gentle color, and sword-leaf inula sports bright, daisy-like blooms. Golden feverfew is grown for the yellowish foliage; the small flowers are removed.

Cosmos "sonata" are medium height. The long, white, spiky blooms of Culver's root catch visitors' attention. Another unusual plant is Dahlberg daisy, which hangs over the pool's edge.

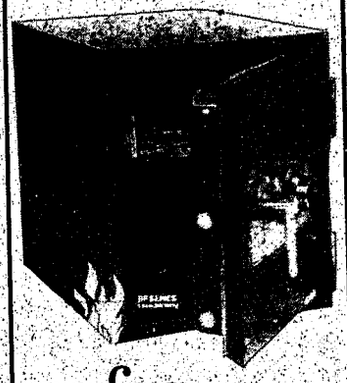

Among the blue flowers that are planted in this garden are salvia, tall delphiniums, German and Siberian iris that bloom in the spring – as do short, yellow ones. White New Guinea impatiens "moorea" edge the front of the beds and have attractive, shiny foliage.

Four faithful helpers keep everything in top condition. They are Julie Bergman and Carolyn Dritsas of Bloomfield Hills, Gayle Harris of Troy and Joan Hoisington of Bloomfield.

In the center of these beds, which border the long sides of the pool, are the White and Silver gardens, cared for by Amy Fortin of Birmingham and Julia Ritter of Orchard Lake.

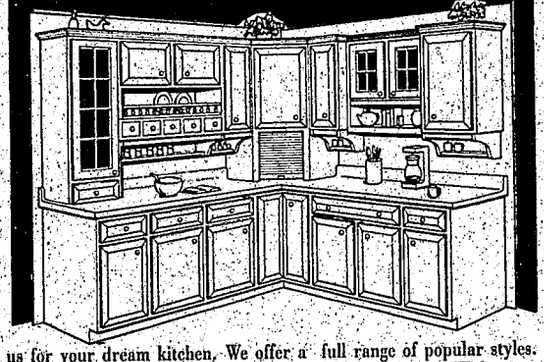

These gardens begin the season with the glow of beautiful white iris. They, too, are edged with the New Guinea impatiens for continuity. Many perennials are used, such as snow-in-summer, with white, showy flowers that bloom on 12-inch-high, silvery stems. Crambe cordifolia has large, cabbage-like leaves; white, airy flowers shoot out from the center.

Utica Antiques Market to open

When you think of antiques, you probably don't think of the great outdoors.

But outdoor makes a great setting for the Utica Antiques Market, now in its 15th year. The event features 250 dealers from all over the country and is the largest open air market of its kind in southeastern Michigan.

The market's season will begin (rain or shine) Saturday-Sunday, May 13-14, lakeside at the tree-lined Knights of Columbus Grounds on 21 Mile in Utica, one mile east of Van Dyke. Other emporiums will take place July 8-9 and Sept. 9-10.

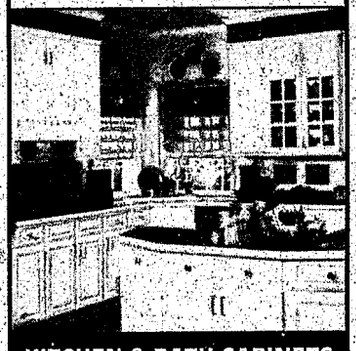

"The campgrounds are lovely," said Judy Sklar Fried, who has participated in the event about 10 times. "It's a nice show."

Fried, who also is featured at the Royal Oak Farmers Market and at Knightsbridge Antique Mall in Northville, will display art pottery, oil paintings, Bakelite and majolica.

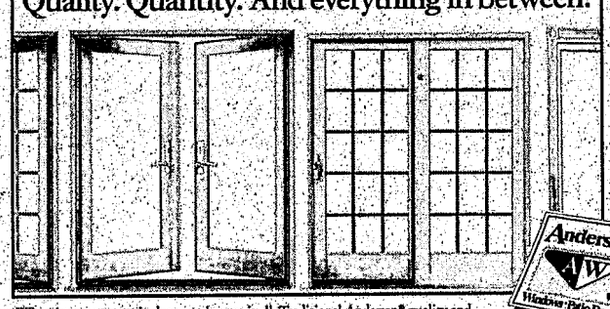

Participants specialize in antiques and pieces from all periods, with items for both serious and novice collectors. Antiques and collectibles experts will appraise pieces on site. Food and beverages will be available.

Dad, help the kids with this one!

LISA LUCKOW-HEALY

One glorious day in May moms are supposed to be recognized for their efforts throughout the year.

Someone once planted an image in people's minds that one day each year children should stop taking their mother for granted and give her 24 hours of feeling special. Hence, the meaning of Mother's Day.

But human nature often takes over. You, Dad, and your children get busy with work and activities. Before you all know it, Mother's Day is less than 24 hours away and the youngsters haven't even bought or made a card for Mom. That may come as no surprise, especially if Mom is the one who always manages special occasions.

This Mother's Day, defy the motherly instinct that makes Mom think everyone will forget her by helping your children spin their creativity into something Mom will cherish.

You don't have to run to the mall with children in tow to grab a nice outfit off the rack that you know she's bound to return the next day. Here are a few simple, heartfelt gift ideas to get the children's creative juices flowing:

Memory Lane – Help your children make outdoor stepping stones that lead to Mom's favorite place – a garden, a hammock or a reading retreat under an old oak tree.

You can buy do-it-yourself stepping stone kits at a local craft shop or specialty toy store. These kits typically include quick-dry cement and a pre-form container to make one square stepping stone.

Help your children prepare the cement as directed. Encourage them to put their personal stamp on each of their stones by pressing their handprints in the cement. Ask them to write their names above or below their handprints. They can also embellish the stones with items such as small costume jewels, small broken pieces of china or colored tile, pebbles or shells.

Allow the stone to set before removing it from the container.

Your children can also make their own stones without a kit.

Buy a small bag of quick-dry cement at a nearby home improvement store. Gather sturdy gift box or shoe box lids. Line each lid with a piece of plain white paper. Prepare the cement as directed. Pour it into the lids. Have the children decorate the top end using the suggestions as described above. Set aside the stones to dry.

After they set, peel back the lids. Under warm water, rinse the paper off where necessary.

Photo Herb Garden – This is always a good time of year to plant an herb garden Mom can appreciate harvesting for summer seasoning.

Patience will dictate your children's choice to plant seeds in a large planter or use their own individual clay pots they can personalize with colorful paints. If the children prefer, buy starter herbs at a nearby garden shop. Ask each child to plant one herb into his or her planter or pot.

The next step is to ask your children to leaf through family photographs to find one of their favorite pictures alone or with Mom. Stick to your 3-1/2-by-5-inch or 4-by-6-inch prints.

Have your children carefully cut out the people and discard the backgrounds. Adhere each photo to a piece of cardboard. Cut the cardboard to match the outline of the photo.

Each of your children now has a photo silhouette. Glue it onto the top end of a Popsicle stick or tongue depressor, leaving a tail.

Using a permanent marker or ink pen, write the name of the herb vertically onto the stick, being careful to leave 1 to 2 inches at the bottom to insert into the soil of the herb pot. Mom will now have wonderful, handmade photo herb markers she can use for years to come.

Wait until Mom isn't looking, then place the stepping stones outside or strategically position the herb garden where she'll see it the next morning.

When Mom's surprises greet her eyes on Mother's Day, she'll be embraced with the love her family put into her special day!

POPULAR SUMMER SERIES TO OPEN JUNE 8

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR
nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

The time has come to go Barefoot in the Park in downtown Birmingham.

True, there's an opportunity to kick-off your sandals or unlace your sneakers and dance the night away every summer in Birmingham's Shain Park thanks to the community's annual Thursday evening In the Park concert series.

While Robert Redford and Jane Fonda won't be there, an eclectic mix of talented entertainers are slated to perform on the venue's outdoor stage starting June 8.

The series opens with two local groups, the Seaholm High School Jazz Band and the Seaholm Maple Chorale. Running subsequent Thursday evenings through Sept. 7, concerts are slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. In case of rain, concerts will be canceled, although in past years they were relocated to Seaholm High School.

One special Friday evening concert is also planned; local bands composed of Birmingham high school students will perform June 16 in "Band Jam 3." In its third year, the jam is fast becoming a favorite tradition of those who attend the series, said June Taylor-McGregor, the series' organizer.

Program guides are expected to be available by the first concert date and can be obtained at Birmingham's city hall, Baldwin Public Library, PSD office, as well as during concerts at Shain Park.

New sounds

While many favorite performers return this year, including flutist Alexander Zonjic to kick off the series' Jazz Fest portion of concerts, a host of new entertainers are slated for the event.

Detroit's own singer, songwriter and guitarist Stewart Francke will tell stories through music on June 29 following a showcase of local songwriters.

Hugh Leal & The Motown Classic Jazz Band will lay down a little Dixieland jazz on Aug. 31. On July 13, The Laredos/Reflections, a Detroit-based vocal quintet with Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame notoriety, will take concert-goers on a 50s and 60s classic rock trip.

Other returning favorites include Steve King & The Dittilies, the Birmingham Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra wind ensemble and the Fiddlers Philharmonic, a group of 30 Saline High School fiddlers.

'The Sound of Music' touches audiences

BY KEELY WYGONIK

Watching The Sound of Music on stage or TV is an emotional experience for many people. It evokes memories, makes you want to "Climb Ev'ry Mountain," and say "I Have Confidence."

"I see people crying in the audience – it touches their emotions," said Jeanne Lehman who portrays Mother Abbess in The Sound of Music opening Wednesday, May 17, at the Masonic Temple Theatre in Detroit. "It reaches human values we can all relate to – love, hope – in the face of adversity. The music is inspiring, it touches people in so many different ways."

What: The Sound of Music
When: Matinee and evening performances Wednesday-Sunday, May 17-21
Where: Masonic Temple Theatre in Detroit
Tickets: $25-$55, call (248) 645-6666

Richard Chamberlain stars as Captain Georg von Trapp and Meg Tolin as Maria Rainer in this Broadway revival, which is being directed by Susan H. Schulman.

Lehman has portrayed Maria five different times in The Sound of Music, but this is her first time portraying Mother Abbess. She's enjoying the show and the part she's playing.

"Maria and Mother Abbess have a lot in common," said Lehman. "They both grew up in the mountains and have the same love of life and adventure. The Mother Abbess chose a more spiritual life, she sees herself in Maria."

Schulman and her creative team have brought more realism to this production. They visited the Nonnberg Abbey in Austria to learn how the nuns really lived.

"The nuns weren't honestly represented in the original play," said Lehman. "They don't stand around and sing. Work and prayer are spiritual commitments, they're all the same. The Mother Abbess is elected, it's very democratic."

There's lots of attention to detail in this Sound of Music, and more sense of

'Forever Plaid' is eternally fun

BY HARRY KNITTER
SPECIAL WRITER

In the day time, Steve Worley manages the Damman Hardware store in Southfield. At night, he takes the stage at the Birmingham Village Playhouse and becomes Jinx from the play Forever Plaid, a story about a group of aspiring, young male singers beginning their show business career with their sights on the top of the pop charts.

Then, something terribly unnerving happens to the members of the Plaids. Their lives are instantly snuffed out in a horrific collision with a bus load of teens heading for the Beatles' 1950s debut in New York.

What: Birmingham Village Players present Forever Plaid
When: 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. performances May 12-14, 19-21 and 26-27
Where: Birmingham Playhouse, 752 Chestnut In Birmingham
Tickets: $14 at box office, (248) 644-9667

But spare them no tears, for they miraculously reappear on-stage and climb the top 40 ladder to stardom, achieving acclaim beyond their wildest dreams.

The catch is they're still dead.

Thus, the audience joins them in the dream of a lifetime – in the after-life.

Looking for a G-rated entertainment for yourself or the family?

Don't look any further than the Clarkston Village Players' next presentation – A Bad Year for Tomatoes.

Opening May 12, the play is slated to run three consecutive weekends through May 27 at Depot Theater in Independence Township.

"A Bad Year for Tomatoes is rated G," said show director Bill Bailey of Auburn Hills. Better yet, it's pure entertainment. "It's a fun show with no profound message, no objectionable language, and one that doesn't educate its audience," said Bailey.

What: Clarkston Village Players perform the comedy A Bad Year for Tomatoes
When: 7:30 p.m. May 12-13, 18-20 and 25-27
Where: Depot Theater, 4861 White Lake Road in Independence Township
Tickets: $12 at theater's ticket office, (248) 625-8811

The attraction of A Bad Year is its convoluted plot and zany characters. The story revolves around an actress who wants to get away from her hectic life in Hollywood grows more every year, said McGregor. And, concert-goers can always expect a few surprise, last-minute performers, too, she said.

"We've been able to grow the series over the years, attracting more and more top-notch performers and diversifying the concerts," said McGregor. "Every year, we just seem to go up a notch, to go up another rung on the ladder. We're climbing. Sometime, I hope we'll be able to climb up to a permanent band shell."

Family and community

Depending on the event, between 500 and 1,500 people show up in Shain Park for the free concerts. "Sometimes, we have several thousand for Jazz Fest," said McGregor. "It's like a big family reunion every Thursday," she said.

Perhaps the most familiar site is of families sitting on blankets and enjoying a picnic dinner before the concerts. Others build an evening around errands, shopping or dinner with friends at a Birmingham restaurant, said McGregor. "You can shop in downtown Birmingham and then plop down on a blanket, relax and listen to music... And they come from everywhere."

While there's a slew of outdoor music concerts in metropolitan Detroit during the summer, In the Park, like Birmingham, has its own share of special peculiarities.

Many attendees, for instance, come with their "musically inclined" dogs in tow, said McGregor. And, since dogs aren't allowed in the park, there's typically a petting zoo of dogs (with owners) surrounding Shain Park. "Last year, we had a lady with a cat on a leash, and we had a cockatoo, too. ... a lady with a cockatoo on her shoulder. We have everything," said McGregor. "People have even gotten engaged in the park during a concert."

Theatre.

Castle's Birmingham co-director is Bill Haycook, who assisted with the Magic Bag and Gem Theatre productions.

Forever Plaid goes back to a time of show biz legends like Frankie Avalon, Sandra Dee and Brenda Lee. It's also reminiscent of the days when teens learned silly dances like "The Walk" on Dick Clark's daily American Bandstand show.

Listening to the music and dialogue of the play is like plugging in a time machine and setting it to 1954. The songs are intimately familiar to anyone who "doo-wahhed" through the era of the Four Lads, Aces, Freshmen and Johnnie Ray.

Forever Plaid calls for close harmony in the vocals, the staging, and costume manipulation, but Worley and company are up to the challenge.

Worley of Clawson is joined by Ken Ebaugh of Ferndale and Royal Oak residents Joe Moultrup and Adam Bernard. The musical director is John Dickinson of Pleasant Ridge.

They perform over a dozen old hits, including "Shangri-La," "Three Coins in the Fountain," and "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing."

At one point, a member of the audience joins the cast on stage. Later, the audience collaborates with the cast in a brief sing-a-long.

One of the show's highlights is a fast-forward sequence of The Ed Sullivan Show, which is sure to bring back memories of Topo Jijo, Jose Jimanez and Senor Wences with his hand puppet Johnnie. The Sullivan segment comes complete with an accordion rendition of "Lady of Spain" played by Worley.

The plaid theme continues to grow throughout the play, as the Plaids, the musical group, become more popular. They even introduce the audience to plaid dental floss.

Many flashback stage productions wear out quickly, expiring gracefully after one lap around the theatrical circuit. But Worley and his sidekicks breathe life into this edition of Forever Plaid, providing an entertaining program of corny dialogue, catchy tunes and good laughs just when we need them.

Written by Stuart Ross, Forever Plaid opened in New York in 1990 and has been produced in both large and small markets throughout the country. Truly, it is a production that deserves to be seen and enjoyed, perhaps more than once.

to write her memoirs and takes place over a two-day period in 1974. Renting a house in a small New England town, the actress encounters a cast of odd characters and a make-believe sister she creates.

Written by John Patrick, best known for writing the 1954 Tony Award-winning play The Teahouse of the August Moon, the play gets its unusual name from a series of conversations about growing tomatoes.

"The show features a lot of shtick that the audience will enjoy," Bailey said. "Mr. Piney, for instance, is a 'good-ole backwoods boy' who traps skunks, chops wood and sells manure."

Bailey is thrilled with his cast of seven for A Bad Year.

"I couldn't believe, after auditions, what a fine cast we found. We have some newcomers to our theater group and some who have never acted with CVP before. They are all working so well together," he said.

Responsible for the most lines is actress Susan Craves of Clarkston, who portrays lead character Myra Marlowe.

"Susan is on stage 99 percent of the time," Bailey said. "She had to memorize more than 600 lines of script and transform into three different characters. Her character, Myra, is the center ring for this circus."

Craves, who looks like an actress off-stage and on, has 15 years experience in community theater. She also has professional experience acting in television commercials and industrial training films.

"This is my comeback on-stage after taking two years off," she said, adding she stayed away from acting to care for her almost-two-year-old daughter, Adia. "Once Adia was born, I did back stage work, but I missed acting. It's such a creative outlet."

Craves will share the stage with: David Maloney of Auburn Hills; Beth Ann Sayles of Waterford; Irene Hengstebeck of Lake Orion; Melvin Case of White Lake; Juliet Gross of Metamora and Linda Van Natta of Holly.

Others involved in the production, which is being presented in cooperation with the Dramatists Play Service, are: producer Sue Owen; stage manager Barbara Curtis; assistant stage manager Joanne Anderson; Mary Beth Skinner on lights and sound; set designers Sue Owen and Mel Case; and set construction crew Verne Vacaro, John McCaffrey, Rick Shaw, Steve Smith, John McCaffrey and Owen. Linda Mata, Earlene Hillman, Owen and Skinner worked on set decorations. Craves is handling makeup, and Owen did costumes. Gordon Bardell designed the logo and Sayles Studio took pictures.

place and time.

"While the creative team was walking around Salzburg, our sound designer Tony Meola recorded the bells," said Lehman. "The bells the audience hears are actually the bells of Salzburg. The costumes are gorgeous."

To further understand her role, Lehman visited a Benedictine order in the U.S. "When they sing, the nuns became like one voice. They were radiant, their faces were glowing with their commitment."

For her, The Sound of Music is not only a role to play, but a spiritual experience.

"I get to sing Climb Ev'ry Mountain," she said. "It's the most glorious song, I just love it. I never tire of it. It's a new experience every time I sing it, something I want to share. There's so much hope in this musical – it's an emotional journey for everyone."

Based on the book by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse with music and lyrics by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II, The Sound of Music opened at Broadway's Lunt-Fontanne Theatre on Nov. 16, 1959. The production won seven Tony Awards, including Best Musical, and ran for 1,443 performances.

The 1965 film version, starring Julie Andrews as Maria, earned five Academy Awards, including Best Picture.

'Time To Discover' Blackwater Surprise

Band with Southern flavor gains following in Detroit area clubs

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise sounds more like a story title than a five-piece band.

Here's how the fairy tale goes.

Three young Detroit musicians are playing in the studio when — much to their surprise — they hear a blind street-singer crooning outside. They approach him and after time convince the well-traveled Alabama native to join the band.

What: Celebrate with Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise at the CD release party for Time to Discover.
When: 8 p.m. Saturday, May 20
Where: Magic Bag, 22920 Woodward, Ferndale
Tickets: $15, call (248) 544-3030

Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise may have been blessed with a fable-like beginning, but the band that's reinventing the soulful Motown sound says now is the Time To Discover what Detroit music is all about.

With a new album by the same name, and the addition of keyboardist and Detroit Music Award winner Tim Diaz, RBBS sounds stronger than ever. Of course radio and MTV exposure never hurts. Neither do tours with mega-stars like the Dave Mathew's Band, Beck and Sonic Youth, appearances on Conan O'Brien or write-ups in The New Yorker. Let's start at the beginning.

Chapter one

Robert Bradley discovered music around age 6. "I realized I could carry a melody and started singing along with the radio," he said in a phone interview from Mount Pleasant while on tour. Trained on tunes by Buddy Holly, Johnny Cash, Marvin Gaye, Elvis Presley and Otis Redding, Bradley moved to Michigan with his parents in the 1960s, when he said "Detroit was hip. There was a lot of good music going on."

So he started singing on the streets of Motown, finding some good spots where his voice would echo beneath the buildings. He was singing for almost 17 years before brothers Michael (guitar) and Andrew Nehra (bass) and drummer Jeff Fowlkes ever caught sight or sound of his talent.

"They were suburban guys," explained Bradley. So when asked to join the band, he first said no. "I didn't believe a word they said."

About six months later, he changed his tune and picked up the phone. It was the early 1990s, and Bradley was making $500 to $600 singing in Detroit's Eastern Market — he didn't exactly need another gig. But he split his time between singing for himself and jamming at White Room Studio with the band. That's where he met Kid Rock — who appears on two songs on Time To Discover. "He was Bob, just a white boy trying to rap," recalled Bradley.

In 1995, the band went from the studio to a music showcase in New York City. "Bob went with us," said Bradley. "He was the emcee at the show."

What's happened since then is of no consequence to this music-made man. "I'm living for what's happening right now," he said with conviction. "I was always successful in my head. This here is just fame. That's all it is."

On Time to Discover, RBBS takes its recipe for success one step further, with 11 solid songs loaded with old-school soul and modern style.

Bassist and Royal Oak resident Andrew Nehra was basking in the band's success and the flood of good press RBBS has received while at the Detroit Music Awards.

He said the new album took seven months to complete. "It was all pretty spiritual," he said. "To get perfection, it took time to find the magic and go that extra step."

Nehra, whose influences include The Temptations and Stone Roses, said notoriety for Detroit bands is "way overdue. People have been asleep."

Happy with the music

"We just want to be happy with the music first," said Bradley of this album. "That's the way we feel about it." Two of his favorite songs on the album remind him of his fiancee. You and Me and Ultimate Sacrifice reflect their relationship and impending May wedding. Bradley said it's all about being "for real."

Another change reflected by the album is the addition of Tim Diaz, whom Bradley said fit right in. "He's one of the most talented musicians in the state of Michigan," said Bradley. "I ain't talkin' no jive."

And he ain't the only one talkin'. Scott Forbes, singer and guitarist of The Forbes Brothers, also couldn't say enough about Diaz, a friend and musical colleague.

"He's so deserving," said the Farmington Hills resident after Diaz won the Detroit Music Award for outstanding rock instrumentalist. "He is extraordinary. He writes great songs and plays several different instruments."

Forbes predicts RBBS will be "the next big thing" out of Detroit.

"Detroit is in my soul," said Bradley. "When I come to Detroit things happened." The band with his namesake is one reason the city is on this musical upswing.

"Back in the '60s, it was booming. Now it's jogging. We're hoping to get it running. We need to keep moving to really pump it up."

'Virgin Suicides' looks at bleak matter with beauty

With a title like "The Virgin Suicides," movie-goers may have a tendency to cringe, rather than embrace the directorial debut by Sofia Coppola. But judging by this poignant work, she seems poised to follow in her father's famous footsteps.

"The Virgin Suicides" offers a disturbingly beautiful look at five fair-haired sisters crushed beneath the strong-hold of a domineering mother and weak-willed father. Set among the lush tree-lined streets of Grosse Pointe in the mid 1970s, the film welcomes viewers into the Lisbon home. Mr. Lisbon, a math teacher (James Woods) and his wife (Kathleen Turner) keep a tight lock on its doors, and it's that stifling climate that ultimately leads to tragedy.

"Cecilia was the first to go," says the narrated voice (Giovanni Ribisi) in the opening line. The first, youngest and most delicate of the five girls, she was literally dying for freedom. You can hear it through the wandering voices of neighbors: "That girl wanted out of that house." Cecilia, 13 (Hanna Hall), Lux, 14 (Kirsten Dunst), Bonnie, 15 (Chelsea Swain), Mary, 16 (A.J. Cook) and Therese, 17 (Leslie Hayman) are the Lisbon sisters, all trapped by the conventions of their upper-middle class family.

But the film isn't about suicide, as much as it is about the life they left behind. Dealing with issues of repression, longing, sex and death, Coppola somehow paints a soft portrait of the beauty in life while exploring – in the most profound manner – the simple question of why. Rather than a public service announcement against suicide the film comments on how society can easily crush and overwhelm the innocence of life with its rules, expectations and fears.

Told through the eyes of four young boys obsessed with the enchanting Lisbon girls, "The Virgin Suicides," flashes back to a time when the automotive industry hit a lull and the air was ripe with adolescent curiosity. Young Tim Weiner (Jonathan Tucker) leads his friends in pursuing the mystery. The girls growing entrapment is represented symbolically through the oak trees which are cut down in the Lisbon's front yard. Parks officials insist they are diseased; that if the trees aren't cut down, the disease will spread.

But the disease that began with Cecilia did spread throughout the home. The boys can only collect pieces of the Lisbon girls – lipstick, a diary, postcards – and try to fit them together to make sense of the events that destroyed their fantasies and an entire family.

James Woods gave a fabulous performance as the under-stated, devastated father who retreats into his collectable war planes and televised ball games. Kathleen Turner is chilling as the overbearing, nervous-minded mother. Her plight is described through the words of a whispering neighbor "You always wonder if there was something you could've done."

Danny DeVito, Michael Pare and Scott Glenn make notable cameo appearances in the film. But its true impact lies in its young, and somewhat unknown, cast. Josh Hartnett portrays Trip Fontaine, the football hero everyone wants to date – everyone except Lux. Jonathan Tucker and Anthony DeSimone portray Tim and Chase, the wide eyes through which this story is told.

The Lisbon girls: Chelsea Swain, Kirsten Dunst, Leslie Hayman and A.J. Cook star in The Virgin Suicides.

Thanks to Coppola's careful attention to detail, from the red velvet suit trip wears to Homecoming to the sack-like flower-printed dresses Mrs. Lisbon sews for her daughters, the film never strays from its setting. Cinematographer Ed Lachman uses quick close-up glimpses of the girls in an amber glow, dream-like sequences and mirages that blend reality with imagination to make a seamless film. The deaths are jarring without offering an explicit look at the aftermath.

With an original score by Air and a soundtrack packed with Todd Rundgren and Heart, "The Virgin Suicides" transforms Jeffrey Eugenides' novel of the same name into a hauntingly beautiful film bound to be remembered come Oscar time.

'Gladiator' recreates ancient Rome

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

Epic story: Russell Crowe fights the good fight in "Gladiator," directed by Ridley Scott.

The Roman Empire, circa A.D. 180, was apparently run less like an empire and more like a family business. Sort of a Caesar and Son Inc.

"Gladiator," an epic on a scale rarely seen in four decades, is at its core the story of Son being passed over in favor of the hired help. Put into local perspective, imagine if Richard Golden had been told by his father that one of the optometrists, not him, was going to take over D.O.C.

"You are the son I should have had," aging Emperor Marcus Aurelius (Richard Harris) tells General Maximus (Russell Crowe). When spoiled and cowardly Commodus (Joaquin Phoenix) gets wind of Pater's plan, he does the old man in and oozes his way onto the throne, ordering the execution of Maximus, his wife and son. Escaping his assassins, Maximus is caught by slavers and shipped to a training school for gladiators. There he vows to return to Rome, take his revenge on Commodus and fulfill Aurelius' dream of restoring the empire to the will of the people.

Lifting whole chapters from "Spartacus" and "Ben-Hur," "Gladiator" is nevertheless a major league legend of its own, thanks to bravura performances by Crowe and Phoenix and "Titanic"-like direction by Ridley Scott.

With computer graphic imaging, the kind that gave us the Titanic and its 2000 passengers and crew, "Gladiator" rebuilt ancient Rome and put 35,000 cheering citizens into the Colosseum. Chilling overhead shots of the city give one the feeling of being in a helicopter time machine.

Yet for all its bigness, New Zealander Russell Crowe ("The Insider") fills his armor with a hero's heart and the physique to go with it. His Maximus is a family man; he doesn't seek the power offered to him, asking only to return home after years of war. Put a sword in his hand, however, and heads will roll-along with a plethora of other body parts.

Crowe is a sensational champion and a worthy successor not only to Aurelius but to Charlton Heston and Kirk Douglas as well.

Commodus, meanwhile, is afraid of the dark and lusts after his older sister Lucilla (Connie Nielsen). In some respects his scenes with sis are grosser than the bloodletting on the battlefield. Phoenix ("8MM") makes an appropriately oily heir apparent, acceding to vox populi only when it suits his grand purpose.

In his final screen role, the late Oliver Reed plays the sympathetic gladiator procurer, the same role and with some shamelessly similar lines for which Peter Ustinov won an Oscar in "Spartacus." Reed died weeks before the end of shooting.

"Gladiator" is rated R for its graphic fight scenes.

Spring inspires art and music from the heart in Detroit

BACKSTAGE PASS

ANN DELISI

After our first weekend of warm weather, do you find that your thoughts are drifting a bit? Don't knock yourself for having an eroding attention span. There's a good chance that you're just opening your mind to the possibilities of spring. It's a season that fosters meaningful reflection on important issues – such as the amount of time you spend stuck in your office.

Most of us are in a constant quest for the right balance of work, family, recreation and spirituality. When it seems that I'm doing a pretty lousy job of balancing all the things that matter to me, I usually find solace in the arts.

Maybe that's what photographer Russ Marshall had in mind when he drew upon his family's working class roots to document the evolution of labor and industry in an inspiring exhibit which runs through July 28 at the Henry Ford Community College gallery in Dearborn. This Working Life consists of stark black and white images that reflect his childhood memories of the coal mines near Pittsburgh and his more recent experiences in the auto plants of Detroit. Marshall's exhibit is made even more powerful by a series of working class poets who contribute works that accompany the photos.

■ The first major event is the Greektown Festival, which runs from Friday-Sunday, May 19-21. It offers the finest in arts, food and music, with this year's bill featuring legendary rhythm and blues artist Sir Mack Rice.

The son of the late Michigan painter and alternative press co-founder Ann Mikolowski has developed a unique tribute to his mother, who died last August. She left a treasured roll of canvas to Michael Mikolowski, who turned it into a heartfelt memorial by enlisting the talents of nearly 250 prominent artists who were friends and admirers of her work. On the next edition of Detroit Public TV's Backstage Pass, airing at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, May 14, visual arts segment host Gerry Craig visits the Alley Culture Alternative Gallery to give viewers a look at this very moving remembrance and the loving story behind it.

Let's not forget the rejuvenating effect of experiencing the arts and the people-watching potential of the coming festival season. The first major event is the Greektown Festival, which runs from Friday-Sunday, May 19-21. It offers the finest in arts, food and music, with this year's bill featuring legendary rhythm and blues artist Sir Mack Rice, who also performs in the Detroit Public TV studio for the May 14 episode of Backstage Pass.

I've been impressed with the growth of the Greektown Festival over its 10-year history. The pleasure of being part of such a community event is difficult to describe, but we know when we feel it, don't we?

If it has been years since you've been in the area, you'll be amazed at all that is new in downtown Detroit. It is uplifting to see the activity in the Greektown area, especially compared to a decade ago. Since it's a prime season for reflection, pause to imagine where we can be ten years from now.

SOUNDING OFF

MP4: DAYS SINCE A LOST TIME ACCIDENT

Michael Penn
Epic Records

Though Lucky One, the initial song on Michael Penn's latest album, might give the impression that his fourth release is merely a collection of overproduced pop drivel, nothing could be further from reality.

The saccharin lead – which, incidentally, is the only tune on MP4: Days Since a Lost Time Accident that Penn didn't produce – has some intriguing chord shifts, but the deeper tracks are what will satisfy fans of this wry songwriter.

Lately, it's been Penn's wife, Aimee Mann, who's taken the limelight, having received an Academy Award nomination for Save Me from her Magnolia soundtrack.

But with MP4, Sean's older brother shows that he can carve out intelligent lyrics and passionate observations while keeping within the confines of the four-minute pop song. His tunes seem perfectly formatted for mass radio play, and yet, except for his hit single No Myth with its winsome refrain, "What if I were Romeo in black jeans," Penn's work gets little notice. His first two albums, March and Free-For-All aren't even in print.

Perhaps MP4 will change that.

In High Time, Penn's hard-edged guitar punctuates his classic turns of phrase ("You've done bereaved and been bereft enough") as he resonates about heady life choices. Over-instrumentation in Perfect Candidate masks Penn's natural ability to enhance quirky lyrics with his low voice that easily swoops to falsetto, but he is still a master of sly narration. One could speculate that Bucket Brigade, the album's final cut, offers an example of what music would be like if Warren Zevon had been the fifth Beatle.

Bleak and haunting, yet oddly upbeat, it exits – leaving the listener with a bittersweet longing, and a taste for more of Penn's distinctive sound.

ALL THIS AND MORE

Cole Guerra
Not Funny Records

This Southfield native headed to North Carolina, but his music never left us. On All This and More Cole Guerra gives a glimpse of his East Coast state-of-mind through moody guitar work, delicate piano and his inspired words. With a little help from friends Jerry Kee on bass and drums, Mackie McKinney on drums and Mike A. Williams on bass, Guerra weaves this sentimental tapestry that sounds both autobiographical and all-too-familiar.

Songs like Undone, You're Not Funny To Me, and Forceps are reminiscent of The Lemonheads on a sluggish day or perhaps early R.E.M. It's contagious music, the kind that spins around you with flecks of wit and heartfelt exasperation at love and life. Believer blends a beautiful arrangement of guitar and piano which holds a steady pace even as he sings, "And all she ever wanted was to see you around." Of course, he's not all weepy. My Glass Mountain builds Guerra's conviction and aspirations. ("I will take my own way.")

But to experience Cole Guerra in his true element is to listen as he interacts with an audience – like a bunch of close friends – and watch him sing his heart out live. Guerra opened for Boston's The Push Stars on their last stop at Pontiac's 7th House. He's planning a visit back home this coming summer. Check out All This and More in the meantime, and welcome him back.

COLOUR MOVING AND STILL

Chantal Kreviazuk
Columbia Records

The newest CD by the artist named Best Female Vocalist by Canada's prestigious Juno awards – over legendary singer Joni Mitchell, no less – has some interesting moments but is disappointing overall.

A beautiful pianist and stunning voice are the best features of Chantal Kreviazuk's latest release Colour Moving and Still on Columbia records, but the lyrics, riddled with clichés, are uninspiring and sometimes dull ("I was a train wreck waiting to happen on the way to nowhere," from the song Before You).

Drawing obvious inspirations from Tori Amos and Sheryl Crow, Colour Moving takes listeners through the loneliness and heartache experienced by Kreviazuk, but the storytelling just doesn't provide anything that other angst-ridden vocalists haven't already accomplished.

Produced by Jay Joyce, Colour Moving does have its highlights with Kreviazuk's eerily beautiful voice, sweet piano and scattered spiritual, earthly rhythms. Still, much of the CD is too Tori Amos-like with not as much self-discovery.

It is an exploration of the soul, the liner notes of the CD read. And, for what it's worth, the lyrics and range of emotion by Kreviazuk seem at least honest.

Kreviazuk does have a worthy message to her music. "So much of today's society is geared toward an unattainable goal of youth, beauty and wealth. This album explores love, loss, hardships and all the experiences in life that I think are real true," she writes.

Is it worth the purchase? Barely.

Interesting songs like Souls, M, and Eve, obviously inspired by personal and witnessed love and loss – the kind of songs anyone suffering hardships can relate to at some point of their life – are comforting. It's refreshing that an artist who has earned honors is still writing and performing songs with heart.

Chantal Kreviazuk performs 8 p.m. Thursday, May 11, Majestic Theatre, Detroit. Call (313) 833-9700.

STAY TUNED...

Fresh off a 7-week North American tour that included opening dates with No Doubt, The Suicide Machines are welcoming a new addition – sort of. Singer Jason Navarro's wife, Sandra, gave birth to Adeline Grace April 25 at Huron Valley Sinai Hospital in Commerce, Mich. Congratulations to the new mom and dad! The band's taking a short break from touring, but there will be no Suicide Machine shortage on the airwaves – Hollywood Records will release the second single off their self-titled album, Permanent Holiday. While life may feel like a permanent holiday for the band whose roots stretch back to Livonia. They'll be gracing the main stage for this year's Van's Warped Tour soon enough. Then it's off to Europe next fall.

Speaking of hard-working bands, The Workhorse Movement is looking forward to a June 6 release of their album Sons of the Pioneers, on Roadrunner Records. Touring with Kittie, The Workhorse Movement performed last night at Harpo's. For those who missed it, the band will be back June 3 to play St. Andrews Hall with Factory 81.

Just signed to Mojo/Universal Music Group, Factory 81 is ready to celebrate and will re-release Mankind on the label this summer.

Speaking of summer, the heat is on for The Brothers Groove as Chris Codish, Mike Caskey and Jim Simonson pack for a performance at Toronto's North By Northeast Music Festival. The word so far is that the band will play 11 p.m. Thursday, June 8, at Cafe Havana in the Canadian music capital. Fans of the groove can get together and caravan on down to show some support.

Those wacky guys who called themselves The Neptunes and then changed it to The Mood Elevators just dropped the "s." Now they want us to call them The Mood Elevator. It's a good thing the band's music can stand alone, because keeping up with all the name changes could become a full-time gig. Ask the pop trio what'll be next when the band opens for Versus Friday, May 12, at Detroit's Gold Dollar.

Golden Mushroom picks seasoned chef to head up kitchen

BY ELEANOR HEALD
SPECIAL WRITER

Owner Reid Ashton opened the now internationally known restaurant, Golden Mushroom, in 1972. Legendary Chef Milos Cihelka, the first master chef certified in the United States, left Detroit's legendary London Chop House to become the Golden Mushroom's executive chef and Ashton's partner in 1976. Chef Milos retired in 1994.

Filling his shoes since have been Steve Allen, who left to open his own restaurant, Steve & Rocky's in Novi. Derin Moore, next on board, left recently to head the kitchen at a Charlotte, N.C. country club, leaving the door open for the talented and popular Randy Emert to be named Golden Mushroom executive chef.

At age 32, Chef Randy, a Clarkston resident, has an impressive professional résumé. Since earning an associate's degree in Culinary Arts from Schoolcraft College in Livonia, he has become an American Culinary Federation Certified Chef de Cuisine. He's also a part-time instructor in the culinary departments at Henry Ford Community College and Oakland Community College. In addition, he captained the 1996 Michigan Culinary Team that was awarded a gold, four silver, and two bronze medals in the Culinary Olympics in Berlin, Germany.

Chef Randy comes to the Golden Mushroom after having been the executive chef at Pike Street Restaurant in Pontiac and most recently, the Director of Operations and Executive Chef at Paint Creek Cider Mill Restaurant in Rochester.

"It's a challenge and an honor to follow in the footsteps of the great chefs who've been at the Golden Mushroom," Chef Randy said. "Each day that I work in the kitchen, I hope I can maintain the reputation that's been established. This is not my responsibility alone, but one that the prep and line cooks and sous chefs also take seriously."

While trained in classical cooking methods, Chef Randy uses simple words to describe his style. "Good food, presented elegantly and cooked from the heart," he said. "Pride will show on all plates. I'm very diner preference-conscious when it comes to the menu listings.

"It has been said that the Golden Mushroom is a place to come for an all-afternoon lunch. Not anymore. You can be in and out in an hour and have a great lunch, even a working business lunch. People are busy, and I'm committed to making this happen," he said.

Some Golden Mushroom sacrosanct items such as Fresh Beluga Caviar, the signature sampling of Spring Mushrooms, House Salad, Sautéed White Holland Dover Sole, and Crispy Dover Sole Murat will never change.

But diners at the Golden Mushroom will experience some delightful changes under Chef Randy. Foie Gras, the dinner experience, will take on two new faces: Foie Gras Combination of Seared Foie Gras and Foie Gras Terrine with a raisin scone and Port wine glaze; or Tableside Carved Whole Roasted Foie Gras, serving six, with appropriate garnish.

New dinner main courses include Sea Scallops and Shrimp Sauté, garnished with pea shoot and grape tomato salad and roast fingerling potatoes; Grilled Moulard Duck Breast with chanterelle barley risotto and spiced duck jus lié; Veal Medallions in Pilsner Urquell Sauce with Port Salut-Pancetta Risotto; and Roast Leg of Venison with Port wine sauce and crispy potatoes.

Desserts have a retro look. Chef Randy calls them "Back to Milos Favorites." They include Fruit Flan, Mozart Tart, Apple Strudel, Flavored Mousse Cup, Cheesecake of the Day and one or two specials.

Association members need help

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Our elected board of directors is pushing the sale of a portion of an outlot to a nearby developer.

The board isn't even sure whether they can legally sell.

It appears that the lot isn't even owned by the association.

What can be done to stop further development of the area if it includes property from the lot?

To make things worse, the board president is a developer. Is this a conflict of interest?

The members of the association should band together to hire a lawyer to assist them in determining whether the association has the authority to sell the property in question, assuming it even has a legal ownership interest in it.

The board of directors should have gotten a legal opinion as to the propriety of seeking a vote from the members in order to sell the property in the first instance.

As to whether the association president is in a conflict, that depends on the particular facts and circumstances, and the members of the association should get a professional opinion and advice immediately to ensure that their rights are protected.

The board president shouldn't partake in any deliberations of the board of directors regarding the issue since he has a personal interest in the outcome.

Needing more room is just one of the reasons to look for a new house

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER
dfunke@oe.homecomm.net

Avis Schulze moved from a house in Huntington Woods she inherited from her mother to an apartment in Troy.

"I didn't want to leave," she said. "The house was beautiful. But I didn't want to take care of it. I like to travel, and it (apartment) lets me go without worrying."

Dennis and Vicki Barill relocated from a house in Redford to another house in Commerce after her son, Andy, graduated from high school.

"Bigger house, more property were probably the two biggest reasons," Dennis said. "We wanted a little more room to entertain. We weren't specifically looking for country."

Shawn and Don Clemons, along with sons Scot, 9, and Corey, 6, are getting ready to move from one house in Rochester Hills to another.

"We kind of out-grew this house," Shawn said. "We really like the area. We didn't even look outside of Rochester Hills."

There are all kinds of signs that it may be time to move.

You've outgrown it

"I would say it's either the crowding syndrome, you've out-grown your home, or downsizing from an empty home, a lot of empty rooms in the house," said Rose Butkovich, a Realtor with Quality/ GMAC Real Estate in Livonia. "Those are the two main ones.

"A lot of times, a job change may warrant a move," she added. "It could be your children's interests, possibly. You may find a community offering different types of recreational activities or a different core (school) curriculum."

Some reasons for moving are neither voluntary (divorce, for example) nor intellectually honest (prejudice in a changing neighborhood, for instance). But those happen, too.

Homeowners have to be careful, Realtors say, because a bad choice on relocating is generally irrevocable when purchase agreements are signed. And bad choices usually have bad consequences.

"It has to be a reasoned decision," said Joe Mallison, a Realtor with Real Estate One in Clarkston.

"A home purchase, of course, being the largest investment for most people, anything that affects going in or going out needs to be considered from every angle possible," he said.

Several signs

Growing families, proliferation of in-home offices and shrinking families are the clearest signs that it may be time to relocate, said Karen Remy, an associate broker with Prudential Chamberlain Stiehl in Birmingham.

"Maybe they've expanded the family beyond the house," she said. "I've heard a favorite saying, 'Now that you're working from home, is your home still working ... for you?'

"Retirement, obviously, also has a big impact," Remy added. "Do you really need the four-bedroom colonial with all the kids grown and gone? Is it time to get a condo and leave the maintenance to someone else?"

Then, again, there may be times to stay put even though a move might appear attractive. A death in the family or a troublesome neighbor come to mind.

But more than one major life change at the same time – the loss of a loved one and a new address – can be overwhelming, psychologists and Realtors say.

"Usually I advise a new widow to let everything settle down at least a year," Remy said.

And where obnoxious neighbors are concerned, "You don't know if you move that a knucklehead may be waiting for you to arrive," Mallison said.

"I guess it's a question of a person making a decision what your toleration level is," he added. "If it were something I could adapt to and tolerate ... I'm an obstinate individual. I would tend to stay and fight."

Don't move too soon

A personal experience also taught Mallison that empty-nesters shouldn't be so quick to get rid of the large house.

"I thought my daughter was well established with a husband and two children out of state. We expected to see them only occasionally. Unfortunately, it didn't work out. There was a divorce.

"They didn't have anywhere to go, and we were happy to bring them back here," Mallison said. "We're glad we didn't make the decision to sell the larger home.

"Maybe people should wait (to sell) five years after the last child leaves the nest and make sure everything will be OK," he said.

But once a decision is made, sellers and buyers are best served by working with a professional, Butkovich said.

"It prevents them from running around in circles. We can give help on what kind of home they can afford ... profile sheets and keep on top of the market.

"A Realtor will be able to give tips on how to make the home presentable and, most important, how to price properly," she said.

Zero down, Part II

HOMELOAN UPDATE.COM

DAVID C. MULLY

Part 2 of 2

Mortgage banker Mark Organek and other lenders say that a person with a pretty good credit report would probably pay about an eighth or a quarter of a percent more for a zero-down loan than would be required for a conventional loan with a down payment.

Zero down also means zero closing costs. It's referred to as a "103 percent loan, because that's how much you could be borrowing" when you add in the closing costs. "As a rule of thumb, the closing costs will come out to about 2.5 percent of the purchase price," Organek says.

There will still be some cash out of pocket, and those are the "pre-pays." The pre-pays usually include two months of hazard insurance, two months of mortgage insurance, and then two months of county property taxes. You will also have to pay the interest on the loan for the rest of the month. These obligations usually add up to less than one's month's payment.

You pay a little bit of interest up front is because of the difference between renting and buying. When you rent, you pay in advance. You pay April's rent before April starts. When you buy, however, you are paying for the past month. April's mortgage payment covers your living in the house in March. So when you buy a house, you are required to pay the interest on the loan for the rest of that first month.

At today's rates, on a $100,000 loan, it would come out to $20 a day.

It isn't much of a stretch to figure out what you're getting when you buy compared to what you are getting when you rent for the same $800.

If you buy, you don't have to worry about your landlord raising the rent after you've been there for a year.

Check out your own situation. If your credit is in good shape, and you can afford to rent, you just might be able to buy.
