Boys of summer

Baseball must bring out the kid in everyone. A group of senior citizen men in full uniform were excitedly discussing the highlights and pitfalls of their softball game during a recent trip to a local Coney Island restaurant.

The same scene could have been played out with people a fraction of their age at an ice cream stand. The food may change, but the fun and camaraderie of a good ball game evidently stays the same.

Everyone wins

Post office workers, student and adult volunteers and North Oakland County needy residents are all winners after Saturday's annual Post Office Food Drive on behalf of the Clarkston branch of Lighthouse Emergency Services.

The Clarkston post office workers collected more than 1,500 bags of food on their routes to help restock the Clarkston branch's food pantry, according to Jane Carr, volunteer coordinator for special events. Helping transport the food from the post office and pack it up were members of Waterford Harley Hogs and students from New Hope Baptist Church, St. Daniel Catholic Church and the Clarkston High School National Honor Society.

"We are so grateful to everyone for their contributions and help," Carr said. "This community is wonderful."

State leader

Independence Township Clerk Joan McCrary was elected president of the 720-member Michigan Association of Clerks (MAC) at its annual meeting.

Clarkston Cinema to reopen soon

■ Closed since October, the Clarkston Cinema is poised to reopen with improvements and updates within a month, its owner says. The movie house will feature first-run films.

Within a month, Mission Impossible 2 will be showing at the Clarkston Cinema.

The local theater has been closed since October and owner Lawrence Sefa has been on his own mission to reopen the movie house. A trial run with a second-run movie was to take place over the weekend. Sefa has been cleaning up and planning improvements for the theater and is excited he will be able to offer local residents a movie experience again soon.

A divorce and two stress-related heart attacks caused the business to suffer, Sefa said. During the theater's closure he said he has received calls from local officials, businesses and just everyday people who have been encouraging.

"(They would ask) What are we going to do with our cinema," Sefa said. "We don't want to lose our cinema."

Sefa said now that its opening is pending, it will be up to the community to support it.

"It will be their decision whether we lose it," he said.

Planned improvements to the 266-seat theater include THX surround sound, a system designed by Hollywood heavy-hitter George Lucas. Neon lighting inside and out also is planned. The cinema will show first-run movies, but prices will be lower than most of the large complexes. Adults will pay $5 for

'Shades of Grey'

Play teaches students to respect differences

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER

Three actors. A table and chairs. Jewish-style music.

They all intermingled to bring a message about respecting others to 500 Clarkston High School students Tuesday at a special production of the play, Shades of Grey.

The actors portrayed a story about three people with their own scarred histories that kept them from "seeing" others.

Rick Hudson played Grandpa Sol Levine, a religious Jewish man who listens to Kletzmer (Jewish-style) band music, buys special bread for the Sabbath at 3 p.m. every Friday from the same bakery he's frequented for 65 years and offers milk and cookies to his granddaughter who adheres to a low-fat diet.

Tricia Smith acted out the role of the teenager, Dani. She's been sent to live with her grandfather because her divorced mother has a new boyfriend who moved into the house. Dani makes up stories about her life to the first friend she makes at her new school.

The character, Ray Connor, is played by Thomas Hoagland. Ray befriends Dani immediately at school, if you consider threatening her when he first meets her as a method of befriending.

Ray's way of reaching out is scaring people. Dani's way is lying and keeping a chip on her shoulder. Grandpa Sol's way is living in the past.

But a confrontation of the three in Shades of Grey causes them to open their minds to each other, look beyond their initial reactions and see each other with respect.

The message was subtle, but it was there.

"I think they did a good job," said CHS student Ashley Bonneau. "The play wasn't as corny as I thought it would be. It showed that just because someone's being a jerk to you, they may have a reason for it."

Clintonville Road exit opponents speak out

BY SARA CALLENDER

Easing the traffic gridlock on I-75 in Oakland County won't be cheap.

Consultants laid out a $701 million plan during informational meetings last week, including one in Springfield Township, to widen 46 miles of I-75 from Hazel Park to Holly Township. The plan, presented by Joseph Corradino of The Corradino Group, includes nearly $460 million to add one lane in each direction, improve seven freeway interchanges and add a new interchange at Clintonville Road in Independence Township.

The plan also calls for $213 million in improvements to 32 roads that feed the freeway.

Independence Township resident Kathy Anstandig said a vocal group of about 18 residents showed up at the local meeting at the Colombiere Conference Center. Ironically, they waited about an hour for the consultant's group because of an accident on I-75 that had the freeway closed and traffic snarled.

Anstandig lives near the corner of Clintonville and Eston roads and says a Clintonville exit would negatively affect her neighborhood. She said there has been too much development too fast with no thought to widening roads as subdivisions go in. She said it is already dangerous to drive on Clintonville. Taking people off (I-75) at Clintonville to get them to Clarkston Road or Sashabaw would be a mistake, she said.

"January, February, that's death trap USA," she said.

She added widening east/west arterial roads like Waldon and Maybee might help matters.

Corradino — who has been conducting a 16-month, $400,000 study on I-75 improvements for the Michigan Department of Transportation, the Road Commission for Oakland County, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments and the Traffic Improvement Association — said the plan would shave off around two minutes of drive time at morning and afternoon rush hours.

"That might seem like a minimal amount of time, but it adds up when you consider the amount of traffic that is out there," Corradino said. "There is no way to take out all the congestion."

The population of Oakland County has doubled since its part of I-75 was constructed in the 1960s, and the popu-

Heather Anne Ingham, 6, is getting to go on a trip many children dream about.

She and her family are leaving May 25 for Disney World in Orlando, Fla., where they'll stay for six days and five nights.

But the reason she's going isn't a happy one.

Heather, a first-grade student at Pine Knob Elementary School, has a rare blood disease, histiocytosis. It causes an over-production of white blood cells. She has to undergo chemotherapy every three weeks.

Her wish, despite her illness, has been to go to Disney World.

Rainbow Connection and Farmer Jack Supermarkets together are fulfilling Heather's wish.

"We're so glad we can help her have her wish," said Chris Abratowski, director of wishes for Rainbow Connection in Pontiac. "She has to go through so much. This trip will help her exchange what she has to go through with a wonderful experience."

Through the sponsorship of Farmer Jack's, Rainbow Connection is also sending Heather's parents, Billy and Laura Ingham; brother, Billy, 9; and her grandmother, Carol Hodges. The Ingham family lives in Clarkston. Hodges lives in Waterford Township.

an evening performance. Children 12 and under and senior citizens 65 and older will pay $3.50. Everyone pays $3.50 before 6 p.m.

Shawn Short, 21, of Independence Township will manage the theater. He worked for the cinema through high school and will help Sefa keep everything running smoothly. He also will keep his other job as a firefighter at the General Motors Proving Grounds in Milford.

He thinks the higher-quality surround sound and personal service will attract customers.

"We can treat each individual customer with respect and make sure they have a good time," he said.

The food will be good, too, he added. He said with fewer people to serve, more care can be taken in every aspect of the business. Sefa said a full concession area will be running.

He has some ideas for promotions, too. One plan is to have an additional concession area outside sponsored by Pepsi. Local non-profit groups can run the concession selling food for low prices during the weeknights and use the proceeds as a fundraiser. He also hopes to cater to school groups and others who want to come see a movie together for a package rate.

Short added that a float touting the cinema may be in Clarkston's July 4 parade.

Sefa has not set a firm date for the grand re-opening, but once back in operation the cinema will likely be open six or even seven days a weeks, Short said, with four or five shows a day.

The cinema was built in 1973. Sefa bought the theater in 1984, but he did not begin running it himself until 1997.

"They wanted to close it in 1997, and I thought it was a shame to lose it."

He said he wants to offer the community an entertainment outlet close to home at a reasonable price.

"It's an hour and a half to two and a half hours of fantasy," he said.

brought her advanced swimming class to see the play.

"Anytime we can get topics like this, it's worth our students listening to the message," she said. She hears more name calling and teasing among students, she said, than regular class teachers since her classes are more informal.

The theme of the show—to respect others, regardless of their differences—echoes the theme of the club that sponsored Shades of Grey.

The club is STAR. This stands for Students Teaching Acceptance and Respect.

Teachers Nancy Gingell and Susan Chang are club sponsors.

"The idea behind STAR is to teach acceptance and respect," explained Gingell. "The students are believers in respecting others and in equal rights, and they try to get those messages out to the student body."

STAR members have had a variety of experiences this school year, Gingell said they participated in a weekend retreat, Crosstown Youth Leadership, with students from other counties. They had a school exchange day with Mumford High School students from Detroit. They'll attend Anytown Summer Camp, where they learn how to counteract prejudice, discrimination and institution forms of oppression.

"We want to thank the Clarkston Foundation for the grant that allowed us to bring Shades of Grey to Clarkston High," Gingell added. "This was a wonderful way for us to give students an understanding of issues of diversity including generation stereotypes."

Shades of Grey is a presentation of the Jewish Ensemble Theater, a professional theater company in its 11th season. It produces four productions in the Aaron DeRoy Theater in West Bloomfield and sponsors two touring productions. Shades of Grey is aimed at middle and high school students. I was Just Kidding is geared to elementary school students.

Master plan adopted for historic farmstead

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

■ Some of the ideas for the property include getting an oral history of the property from its last owner ... or allowing 4-H groups to farm part of the land. Other suggestions include offering the area around the farmhouse to local garden clubs, organizing a self-guided tour for the natural areas and adding some picnic tables.

Independence Township officials approved the master plan for an historic homestead and adjoining 34 acres, and now the work begins to decide what to do with it from among the suggestions in the master plan.

Township board members said they agreed with the master plan for the McCord/Stickney property that it should be a passive type of park. That means no ball fields or intense uses. The property at the intersection of Pine Knob and Stickney Road was given to the township by developer Alex Bruni, who also is a township resident. He is building the Stonewall Farms subdivision on adjacent property.

Township planner Dick Carlisle told board members at a recent township board meeting the property is significant because the Greek Revival farmhouse is the second oldest home in the township. The farmstead also includes a barn, well, horse troth and some remnants of stone walls used approximately 150 years ago when the land was first cleared.

"This site could provide future generations a good picture of what this community was like 150 years ago," he said.

About half the acreage portion was farmed. The other portion includes interesting natural features. Some of the ideas for the property include getting an oral history of the property from its last owner, Janet McCord, or allowing 4-H groups to farm part of the land.

Other suggestions include offering the area around the farmhouse to local garden clubs, organizing a self-guided tour for the natural areas and adding some picnic tables.

The township hopes to hire an architect who specializes in historic preservation to look at the structural integrity of the house.

Approving the master plan is the first step in trying to apply for grants or even budgeting money to fix up the property, Trustee Dan Travis said. He added that no money is set aside for improvements in the 2000 budget.

Carlisle said the theme through the master plan is to keep the property in as natural a state as possible. Trustee Neil Wallace suggested working with a land conservancy to get a conservation easement. He said then the land would be untouched forever.

"There's no telling what future pressures they (future boards) might face," Wallace said.

Travis said on a recent walk through the property he saw a wide variety of plants in addition to deer, nesting owls and blue herons.

"We are blessed with the chance to preserve something absolutely worthwhile," he said.

Rules for political signs to be amended for Springfield Twp.

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

■ 'It's simply an ordinance that's very dated.'
Nancy Strole
—Springfield Township Clerk

"Signs, signs, everywhere signs."

With the election season close at hand, it's not likely citizens will see many "long-haired freaky people" applying for office, but candidates will surely hope they will "read the sign."

Just in time for the 2000 campaign, Springfield Township wants to repeal its 1984 political sign ordinance and add language to its regular sign ordinance to include political placards.

"It's simply an ordinance that's very dated," Springfield Clerk Nancy Strole said of the 1984 law.

The old ordinance includes rules that require things like bonds from candidates, lists of addresses where the signs will be posted and locations of all the signs. Strole said those things have not been enforced for a long time. In general, she said, candidates seem to use common sense with their signs.

The new ordinance would allow signs to go up 28 days before the election instead of 21 and the signs would have to come down 15 days afterward instead of 13. The reference to size also was deleted.

At a recent township board meeting, members talked about restricting the size of signs, especially in residential areas. Strole said the consensus of the board was that the size issue was not important enough to debate further.

The changes will go back to the Planning Commission for a report in June, and the matter will be back to the township board for approval at its next meeting June 8.

Also at the May board meeting trustees approved purchasing a pumper/tanker for the Fire Department. Fire Chief Charles Oaks received approval to spend up to $238,000 on the new vehicle. Only one of the nine bids received followed specifications so the bid was awarded to Halt Fire Inc. of Northville.

I-75 crash injures 2, closes freeway

An accident Wednesday on I-75 near Clintonville Road in Independence Township has left Derrick Moorehead of Pontiac in critical condition in the intensive care unit of POH Medical Center in Pontiac.

The accident, which caused Michigan State Police to shut down the northbound lanes of I-75 for five hours, occurred at 2:40 p.m. when a vehicle driven by Sequita Coleman, 20, from Grand Blanc and the van driven by Moorehead collided. Debris from the collision caused damage to a third vehicle driven by Gary Davis of Lewiston. He was uninjured.

Coleman got herself out of her car, according to the accident report by Trooper Chad Gruenwald. She was transported to Hurley Hospital in Flint. She was discharged Thursday from the hospital.

Independence Township and Springfield Township substations from the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and Independence Township Fire Department assisted Michigan State Police with the accident scene.

POLICE NEWS

Following are some incidents recently reported to police and fire agencies in Independence and Springfield townships and the city of the Village of Clarkston.

Independence Police

Attempted assault with a fire device

On May 18, someone threw a brick with two orange flare-like objects taped to it through a front window of a home in the 5400 block of Oak Park Drive. The flares caused carpet to start to burn. A resident was upstairs sleeping when he heard the crash, according to the police report. The resident got the other residents outside, then picked up the device and threw it out of the house. The incident is under investigation.

Larceny from vehicle

On May 18, someone entered a vehicle parked in the 4500 block of Indianwood by prying out a door cylinder. The person removed a cell phone, portable compact disc player, fishing tackle box, pair of golf shoes, compact discs and some cash.

Possession of marijuana with intent to deliver

On May 17, police made a traffic stop for erratic driving on Maybee Road. The driver, a 25-year-old Orion Township man, had two ounces of marijuana in his pocket.

Fraud

On May 17, police received two reports of counterfeit checks cashed at the T&C Federal Credit Union, 7075 Dixie Highway. On April 20, one person cashed a check for $1179.90; another cashed a check for $1196.75. Both checks, written with the same company's name on them, were returned to the credit union as counterfeit checks. Police learned the identification the suspects used had recently been stolen from two employees at Crittenton Hospital in Rochester. The two suspects also cashed counterfeit checks on that same date at T&C Federal Credit Union locations in Orion and Waterford townships and Pontiac.

Malicious destruction of property

On May 16, someone drove on a lawn, destroying the grass, at a residence in the 8500 block of Ortonville Road. The person also pulled up some plants and stomped on others.

Springfield Township

Larceny in building

On May 17, police received a report that someone entered a new home under construction in the 6400 block of Arrowhead. The person removed a miter saw, a radio, a brad nailer and a spot light.

Mobile home fire

On May 15, police and fire responded to a mobile home fire in the 17000 block of Sleepy Hollow. A witness walking in front of the home noticed several stacked boxes on fire. They were located next to the front porch on the ground. The witness went to the next-door home and asked the owner to call 911. The fire spread and caused considerable damage to the home, according to the police report. No one was home at the time of the fire.

Christian musician returns

By Sally Slaughter
Staff Writer
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

Shawn Smith says at the ripe old age of 32, he is tiring of traveling 200 days a year so the Christian musician is coming home to Clarkston.

Smith has planned a concert for 7 p.m. Wednesday at Calvary Evangelical Lutheran Church. A 1985 graduate of Clarkston High School, Smith has spent the past 10 years writing music and performing his contemporary Christian folk/rock tunes all over the country.

"I had no intention of doing this with my life," he said.

While he was at the University of Michigan earning a degree in secondary education, he also was in a band. By the time he was a senior, the band was booked nearly every weekend.

"The rest of the band got married and got real jobs," he said.

He decided while he loved teaching, a music ministry was his true calling. He said he felt more a sense of peace performing music than when he was doing anything else.

He recently released a greatest hits CD titled "Ten." It is his 10th CD in his 10th year of his ministry. He has relocated to the Clarkston area from western Pennsylvania. He had been living at Camp Lutherlyn there where he was an artist in residence for several years. But over the last four he has been touring extensively. Smith decided he wanted to be a bit more grounded.

He still maintains his membership at Calvary Evangelical Lutheran Church in Clarkston. When he heard it might have some space available, he decided to move his ministry base there. His parents, Frank and Harriet Smith, still live in Springfield Township.

The goal is to travel on weekends during the school year and save the more extensive tours for the summer. Meanwhile he is helping to launch a new program at the church. It's yet to be named, but it will take place on Wednesday nights.

With an emphasis on something for the entire family, the evening will begin with a meal. Then he will lead a short music program. After that the children will have programs geared toward them while the adults can go to Bible study or take courses in current events or special topics like parenting.

"At Calvary we're trying to offer the family time to learn and grow," he said.

He said it's difficult to get to know other church members just by going to a Sunday service. The Wednesday night sessions are a way to study and to make new friends. Smith's job at the church will be "less than one-quarter of a paid staff position," he said.

His main job will continue to be his own music ministry. He said about 80 percent of his concerts feature original work. The other portion is contemporary church music and camp songs.

The concert, held at Clarkston High School, included other classic songs like 'Zippity Doo Dah,' 'On Top Of Spaghetti' and 'Itsy Bitsy Spider.' While Dylan appears to be a natural on stage, Haleigh Orr, 3, of Clarkston (bottom photo) was a little shy when it came to singing with her classmates.*

lation is expected to increase by another 30 percent in the next 20 years ,Corradino said.

The study includes improvements to the I-75 interchanges at I-696, 12 Mile, 14 Mile, Rochester Road, Long Lake/Crooks roads, Sashabaw and Dixie Highway.

Corradino said the improvements have never been used in Michigan and would eliminate the traffic backups onto the freeway.

"This design will help traffic flow, but it is also an added safety feature," Corradino said.

Corradino said the plan does not include improvements to the I-75/M-59 interchange in Auburn Hills, which is currently being studied by the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Arterial north-south roads that would be improved under the plan include Dequindre, John R, Rochester Road, Livernois, Crooks, Greenfield, Adams, Joslyn and Sashabaw. Among the east-west roads are 13 Mile, Big Beaver/Quarton, Long Lake, Square Lake, South Boulevard, Dixie Highway and Walton.

Corradino said the final report for I-75 improvements will be ready in August. If the plan is implemented, construction could being by 2003, he added.

It's I-75's turn

13 miles of resurfacing begins May 22

Work begins Monday to resurface more than 13 miles of I-75 from M-59 to M-15 (Ortonville Road) in north Oakland County.

Work is planned for off-peak, nighttime and weekends to minimize motorist inconvenience. This portion of I-75 serves between 80,000-140,000 motorists per day.

"We're planning weekday work to minimize the impact to commuter traffic. Weekend work on the northbound roadway is planned to accommodate our customers traveling to and from Michigan's beautiful north country. In addition, I-75 is slated to be open to traffic on major holiday weekends," said State Transportation Director James R. DeSana.

This preventive maintenance project is expected to extend the pavement life for five to seven years.

The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) and its contractor, Ajax Paving of Warren, will keep two lanes open during peak travel times with a reduction to one lane planned between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. during the week. TO accommodate weekend travel, two lanes will be open on northbound I-75 until noon on Saturday. A minimum of two lanes will be open from noon Sunday until noon on Monday.

The project is expected to be completed in late October, 2000. This project is part of this year's record-level, $1.4 billion road and bridge repair program and is funded through the passage of Gov. Engler's Build Michigan II plan.

Depleted blood banks issue call for donors

The American Red Cross Blood Services of Southeastern Michigan continues to experience a shortage of O type and B type blood. O type blood donors are the universal donors and most widely used in medical treatment.

"A sufficient inventory of O negative is critical," said Dr. Newman, the organization's medical director. "O negative is the most important blood type for emergencies. Emergency rooms count on sufficient supplies for immediate treatment of incoming patients in need of blood."

Added Greg Vasse, the group's chief executive officer, "We found ourselves in a position this morning of having to ship below the required number of units needed by our hospitals. Southeastern Michigan imports blood from other areas of the country. When collections are down in those areas, it puts us in a precarious situation. Our blood supply is very fragile; we rely on voluntary blood donors to have enough blood for all patients who need it."

All eligible blood donors are asked to call (800).GIVE-LIFE for an appointment today.

SUMMER CAMP 2000

Oakland University's School of Business Administration and the Department of Campus Recreation will host the Surf 'n' Splash Summer Camp 2000 for children ages 11-13. The camp will run from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in one-week intervals during the weeks of June 19-23, 26-30 and July 10-14, 17-21.

The summer camp incorporates a unique mix of computer classes and recreational activities. From the business school, campers will learn about the Internet, including web page development, word processing, spreadsheets and databases. The recreation department will host activities including swimming, basketball, jump rope, soccer, outdoor activities and wellness exercises.

The cost of the camp is $295 per camp session. If paid before June 5, the cost is reduced to $275 per camp session. Class sizes are limited. For more information or to register for the camp, call (248) 370-3128, or e-mail sba-ce@oakland.edu

OU GETS SPORTS FACILITY AWARD

Oakland University's Recreation and Athletic Center recently received an Outstanding Sports Facility award from the National Intramural Recreational Sports Association.

The NIRSA recognizes indoor and outdoor facilities across the country based on a variety of criteria such as architectural design and aesthetics, functionality traffic flow and unique and noteworthy features.

"Oakland University's Recreation and Athletic Center has key aesthetic features such as color, lounge and open areas to facilitate socialization and plenty of natural light," said Jacqueline Hamilton, a voting member of NIRSA who works in the Division of Recreational Sports for the University of Texas at Austin. "The facility is meeting its intended purpose on campus by accommodating programs and planned usage."

Getting a great tan sans sun

DISCOVERING BEAUTY

MARY ANNE TOCCALINO

When you play the name game and hear the word, self-tanner, you may conjure up the image of an orange, streaky, George Hamilton, over-tanned look.

These are old stereotypes.

Today in our health-conscious world, creating a tan is as essential to preparing for summer as is dieting and suffering through bikini waxing.

Effectively using and applying a self-tanner is much easier than you think. The product contains DHA, a sugar derivative that reacts with the superficial proteins in the top layers of the skin to darken the pigment temporarily.

The improved formulations have come a long way since the day of Q-T by Coppertone. The new products go on the face and body more smoothly and evenly. The color is far more bronze and natural than its predecessors. All you need are the right products, a pair of gloves and some uninterrupted time (and patience).

Your first step to a tropical tan is to exfoliate, ensuring a smooth, even application of self-tanner. While in the shower, cleanse, shave and then scrub the rest of your body. Dry yourself completely. Self-tanner will dilute and streak where there is moisture.

Wait for your body temperature to return to normal and apply small amounts of moisturizer to the knees, elbows, heels and knuckles on the toes and fingers. The moisturizer acts as a slip between these porous areas and the tanning product.

Now, your second step is to apply the self-tanner. Put on surgical gloves, apply a quarter-sized blob of self-tanner into one palm, rub your hands together and massage into your skin, starting at the tops of your feet and working your way up to your stomach, chest, arms and neck, being careful not to miss the nooks and crannies, including the area behind the ears.

Replenish the cream as necessary. Save the knees, elbows and knuckles for later. Apply the cream with upward strokes everywhere except for the breasts, where the self-tanner goes on more evenly with horizontal strokes.

The third step is to apply the tanner to the tough spots. Because joints grab the color strongly, resulting in dark patches, the knees, knuckles and elbows need much less product than the rest of the body.

Remove excess moisture from these areas by lightly blotting them. We've already placed a small amount of moisturizer here, so now gently dab a little of the tanner on these areas.

Now apply self-tanner to the backs of the hands, remove the right glove and spread the cream on it with the gloved left hand. Blot the knuckles with tissue. Then put the right glove back on and reverse the procedure.

Your final step is to sit still and wait to dry. Toss the gloves and let your body dry for 15 to 20 minutes. Then put on dark underwear and loose-fitting cotton clothing. For best results, apply self-tanner before bed and sleep in a cotton night gown.

Be gentle with your skin and don't rub too hard after showering. If you are applying self-tanner by day, wait at least an hour before you dress in tight-fitting clothing.

Apply self-tanner about every three days and in between tanner applications, moisturize your skin twice daily.

There are many self-tan products. Some favorites are Chanel Bronzage Automatique, Mia Pelle Self Tanner and Bain de Soleil Sunless Tanning Creme.

Another product is Banana Boat Sunless Tanning Spray, which is good to use after you have created a base. At this point you don't have to be as precise with the application, so the spray cuts down on time.

Which ever products you choose depends on your own personal preference, but know that in this hyper health conscious world you are being responsible to your skin and still appearing as if you've been walking the beaches along the California Coast.

Be dark, be healthy!

Buying is a creative experience at some stores

BY SHARON DARGAY
STAFF WRITER

Janice Pastorelli fished a stuffed fabric heart from a basket and held it above her head.

"I need you to lasso all the bad wishes out of it," prompted Ashley Neumeyer, manager of Build-A-Bear workshop, a new store at the Somerset Collection in Troy.

Pastorelli, a West Bloomfield mom, drew invisible circles in the air with her heart, following Neumeyer's instructions.

"Now, put it on your forehead and make a wish. Give it a kiss on both sides."

Pastorelli planted her lips on the heart.

"It's definitely mine with lipstick on it," she laughed, watching Neumeyer insert the heart in her new toy polar bear.

The mysterious ritual is all a part of buying a stuffed animal at Build-A-Bear, a nationwide chain of do-it-yourself teddy bear shops based in St. Louis, Mo.

Build-A-Bear, its competitors, including Teddy Bear Factory in Great Lakes Crossing, are among a variety of retailers in southeast Michigan who make hands-on manufacturing a part of the product purchase.

Shoppers buy an entertaining process and end up with a customized item.

"It's as if they were telling the manufacturer, 'this is how I want it,'" Neumeyer explained Build-A-Bear's seven-step process.

Customers choose an animal "skin," pick a corresponding button-activated sound, pump the stuffing machine pedal, pick a heart, fluff the stitched and stuffed toy, dress the animal and fill in vital statistics — including a name — on a birth certificate reminiscent of Cabbage Patch dolls.

"With Cabbage Patch, you were given everything. You weren't able to physically make it and put it all together. This is something they see from the empty skin and they turn their bear into life," Neumeyer noted. "You can go anywhere to get a teddy bear. We aren't selling products. We sell experiences."

Customization and camaraderie are part of the purchase, too.

"It's like a party all day long here," said Pat Tisch, Teddy Bear Factory manager. "We get the job done but we have a good time doing it."

Like Build-A-Bear, Teddy Bear Factory offers in-store parties for Scout troops, school groups and family celebrations.

"We're working to get even more personalized for the kids," Tisch added. "What they like is that they've created something themselves or for someone else."

That's why most shoppers at Bead Works in Franklin, choose individual beads rather than completed bracelets and necklaces. They design their pieces and Bead Work artisans make them.

At Fieldstone Brewing Company in downtown Rochester, customers follow one of several established beer or wine recipes, but create their own customized labels.

"Some people are in it for the labels. They're excited they can put their own label on their own brew," said Gail Tripp, who co-owns the brew-it-yourself business with her husband and brother. "For a lot of people it's just a fun, entertaining thing. They have a blast doing it."

Juliann Roush, owner of The Painted Pot in downtown Rochester, does a brisk business in both parties and walk-ins.

Customers choose from an inventory of 500 ceramic items, select glazes and paint their own purchases at their own speeds. They leave their decorated works with Roush for kiln firing and pick-up the pieces at another time.

Drop-in sessions cost $7 per hour, plus the cost of the item. Children's parties are $17 per child and include two hours of painting and pottery valued at $10.

"Our Wednesday nights are adults night out. It's three sacred hours where people can bring in their own wine and they don't have to think about children running around," Roush said.

She sells about eight or nine parties every week. Groups range from corporate offices to bridal groups.

"It's the process of doing something themselves. It's being proud of having made something. And so much of our stuff is for gifts. What better way to make a really special wedding or birthday present?"

Gift inventory includes ceramic baby booties, perfect for customizing with a child's footprint, wedding cake servers and platters.

Tiles painted with denomination amounts double as gift certificates.

"Everything is one-of-a-kind, personalized," she said. "Any one can be an artist."

Or a collector.

Taylor Pastorelli, 11, figured she'd add a grizzly bear from Build-A-Bear Workshop to her stuffed animal collection. Her menagerie includes about 100 critters, mostly bears.

"I've never seen anything like this before. It's so much fun," she said.

"I think it'll make this bear pretty special."

Wangler hopes he can win again — and make it stick

On June 12, Oakland voters will elect two people, from a field of six, to the Board of Trustees at Oakland Community College, which has about 24,000 students at five campuses. This is the first in a series of brief profiles on the candidates and their respective positions.

John A. Wangler

Four years ago, Bingham Farms resident John A. Wangler came within 130 votes of winning a spot on the Oakland Community College Board of Trustees.

In a hotly contested race for two seats on the board, Wangler was initially declared a winner. After a counting error was detected, he was informed he had lost.

The experience didn't leave Wangler bitter. It left him determined. "This time I'm better organized," he said last week as he talked about being one of six candidates vying for two seats on the board of trustees.

Wangler, 72, said his experience as an educator — coupled with extensive community involvement — give him a unique perspective to bring to the board. He taught psychology and philosophy at OCC for 24 years before retiring in 1992. Prior to that he was an associate dean at the University of Detroit and a teacher and director of adult education in the Berkley School District.

He's on the board of directors at the Fox Manor Nursing Center and he's active at Shrine High School in Royal Oak where he's on the board of education and a member of the Dad's Club.

While at OCC, Wangler was also active in OCCFA (Oakland Community College Faculty Association) and helped draft the first Faculty Master Agreement in 1968.

Wangler still teaches psychology on a part-time basis. His wife Theresa, a nurse, teaches medical classes as well as psychology.

Wangler said his direct and indirect involvement at OCC helps him understand day-to-day operations at the college. It has also convinced him change is needed on the board.

The current board lacks cohesion, Wangler insisted, and there is a morale problem within the ranks of some managers and administrators. Morale is important, he said, because people perform better when they feel like they are part of the team.

Asked to elaborate, Wangler declined. "I'm running a positive campaign," he said, "but there's definitely a need for change."

For one thing, Wangler said he'd like assurances that taxpayers are getting the most for tax dollars and that students are getting the most for their tuition. "I'm prepared to campaign on behalf of the millage renewal," he said, referring to the election in June, 2001, when voters will be asked to renew the millage that provides 18 percent of the OCC operating budget, $116 million.

"But before I ask voters to approve it," Wangler continued, "I want to make sure we're getting the most out of what we have."

Wangler said he's fascinated with continuing development in education, such as the growing trend toward so-called "distance learning," the name given to courses taught or augmented with television, the Internet or other technological advances.

"Distance learning provides great opportunities," Wangler said. "But it's not for everybody. It's no panacea."

Wangler is not particularly disturbed by the drop in enrollment at OCC. Since the fall of 1991, when nearly 30,000 students attended one or more of the five campuses, enrollment has fallen to about 24,000.

"We've experienced prosperous times," he said, "and history shows that fewer people enroll in classes when times are good."

Wangler said his major concern is delivering the best possible education. Enrollment will take care of itself, he said.

The Wanglers have three grown children — John, Marian and Dan — and eight (soon to be 10) grandchildren.

Other candidates are incumbents Carol L. Crew and Pamala Davis, and challengers Richard J. Akehurst, Athena Dumas-Lawrence and Marjorie Nanian Mugerian.

OAKLAND COUNTY HEALTH DIVISION

The Oakland County Health Division is soliciting proposals from prospective vendors who have the experience and interest in providing dental services to adults and children who reside in Oakland County and meet the eligibility criteria for the Oakland County Dental Program. The contract for services is from October 1, 2000 through September 30, 2003. To be eligible, prospective vendors must attend the Pre-Proposal Conference to be held Thursday, June 1, 2000, at 9:00 a.m., in the Oakland County Executive's Conference Room, located on the second floor of the Executive Office Building, 1200 N. Telegraph, Pontiac. Interested parties may pick up the bid packet between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., May 19 through June 1, 2000, in the Purchasing Division, Oakland County Executive Office Building.

CHEF CAROL HASKIN

Spring for flavorful asparagus

Among the many harbingers of spring, asparagus is my favorite. The green garden and European white varieties are especially flavorful. They each have a pleasant bitterness and subtle, earthy flavor similar to that of new potatoes.

The first asparagus was brought to America from Holland in 1786 and was known as "sparrow grass." Unlike the name suggests, asparagus is actually in the same vegetable family as onions and garlic. Green garden is the most common variety and is grown worldwide. In the United States, California produces more than half the total national crop, although Michigan is also a high producing state.

Growing

Growing white asparagus – a practice developed in France in the mid-1600s – requires much attention. Long rows of crowns are covered with opaque plastic to keep out the sunlight. This is to prevent production of chlorophyll which gives vegetables and plants their green color.

Asparagus can grow several inches in just one day and therefore must be checked daily. Just after their tips break through the soil, they must be harvested by hand. The stalks are cut while still under the soil. Freshness is maintained by covering the ends with damp cloths.

While some believe the German grown variety of asparagus to be the best, very little is exported. A similar white asparagus is grown in Holland and France in April and May, and is available at many specialty markets. In addition to their European counterparts, a variety of white asparagus is grown in California and South America.

All white asparagus (and only the thick-stalked green asparagus) must be peeled because of their tough, bitter outer skin. Use a swivel-type vegetable peeler and start just below the tip to peel in one stroke to the base. Repeat until done and then cut off about 1/2- to 3/4-inch from the end. Asparagus can be steamed or boiled. Cooking time will vary depending on thickness.

Preparation

The preferred European way is to boil asparagus. Place approximately one gallon of water, two teaspoons of salt, four teaspoons of fresh lemon juice and three teaspoons of butter in a large pot. Bring to a simmer and add one to two pounds of asparagus that has been tied loosely into bundles with kitchen twine. Cook on high simmer until done. Drain well. If not eating immediately, plunge the bundles into ice water to stop the cooking process.

Poached asparagus is wonderful on salads with spring greens served with thinly sliced prosciutto and herbed vinaigrette, homemade mayonnaise or a lemon or lime aioli. Nothing beats a simple presentation of melted butter or hollandaise sauce. Try making a nicoise salad with asparagus and new spring potatoes for a special treat.

Food and wine extravaganzas raise big bucks for charities

STAFF PHOTO BY JIM JAGDFELD

Started trend: Glenna Coleman chairs the 22nd-annual Le Gala de Cuisine, held on the grounds of the Cranbrook Education Campus in Bloomfield Hills. Cranbrook was the first organization in the state to showcase fine food and wine as a fund-raiser.

BY JOE BAUMAN
STAFF WRITER

In an effort to find new ways to raise badly needed funds, local charities and nonprofit organizations increasingly are turning to the food and beverage industry for help.

Combining fine food and drink with a worthy cause is proving to be a formula for success in raising cash, and is beneficial for both the sponsoring organization and participants alike. And, based on the amount of money being raised each year, events such as Cranbrook's Le Gala de Cuisine, St. Vincent and Sarah Fisher Center's Garden Party and a host of smaller events are more popular than ever with the public.

Low-key spaghetti dinners, fish frys and St. Patrick's Day meals have been used for years by churches and other groups to raise money, but the food being served always was secondary to the cause. At the same time, fund-raising goals also were modest.

But a handful of events have broken that mold, combining exquisite cuisine, fine wine and spirits, and art and entertainment to lure hundreds of patrons willing to shell out $150 and up per ticket to help a cause they may not even be familiar with.

The Cranbrook Education Community in Bloomfield Hills takes credit for creating the concept in Michigan. Now in its 22nd year, organizers expect to draw up to 1,200 people and raise about $120,000 at this year's event, scheduled for 3 p.m. today on its historic campus.

Le Gala chairwoman Glenna Coleman of West Bloomfield said such success comes at a price for all involved.

"Planning Le Gala is an 11-month process with a committee of 50 people," said Coleman, serving in her third year as event chair. "It is a tremendous amount of work, and we rely heavily on the generosity of local restaurants in order to be successful."

Bill Roberts, co-owner of 220, Streetside Seafood and Beverly Hills Grill restaurants and current president of the Michigan Restaurant Association, said it is common for restaurants to spend up to $1,500 offering tastes to more than 1,000 people at some of the larger events.

"We get between 10 and 20 requests a year to participate in some type of fund-raising event," he said. "It can get overwhelming, so restaurants look to participate in events that fit their own causes."

'Tremendous camaraderie'

Roberts said his industry is particularly generous when it comes to helping worthy, local causes. And what do restaurants expect in return for their generosity?

"Unless you are brand new and are looking to build your identity, you aren't looking to generate a lot of new business by participating at the Garden Party," Roberts said. "But it is good for your existing customer base to see you out in the community being active and involved in helping worthy causes."

Roberts said such events also allow friendly competitors to spend a fun day together.

"There is tremendous camaraderie among the restaurant people in Wayne and Oakland County, and it's fun to hang out together and chew the fat about common issues and concerns," he said. "At the same time, there also is a certain amount of competition to present the tastiest dish or the nicest display."

In addition to food costs, Roberts said restaurants also have to sacrifice precious staff resources for the various events.

"We all are struggling to find and train enough help, so these events put even more pressure on you if it is held on a day your restaurant is open. When Matt Prentice took over the Share Our Strength fund-raiser for food banks this year, he had about 50 employees donate their own time to staff the event" he said.

"Matt has developed a real sense of public service into his corporate culture, and I tip my hat to him because he deserves a tremendous amount of credit."

Matching business, values

While reasons for participating in food-and-wine extravaganzas vary, sometimes it is a perfect match of business and personal beliefs and values.

Judy Dunn is co-chair of this year's Garden Party, scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday, June 4, at the center's campus on 12 Mile Road in Farmington Hills.

Dunn helped solicit restaurants for the first Garden Party in 1987, and was hooked on the charity when she toured the center shortly after the event.

Dunn's involvement escalated in 1990 when she purchased Decanter Imports, a local wine importer and distributor and a major contributor to The Garden Party.

With a ticket price of $150, Dunn said it is critical for organizers to offer their guests a tremendous experience if they are to reach their $300,000 goal

WINERY

Montevina specializes in Cal-Itals

No recent wine column has brought more Voicemail questions than a recent one about Cal-Itals (Italian-origin wine grapes grown in California).

Because of this, we think you'd like to know more about Cal-Ital specialist Montevina Winery in Amador County. Today, Montevina has several claims to fame including:

- largest planting of Italian varietals outside of Italy
- largest production of premium barbera in California
- largest experimental block of 40 Italian grape varieties, including 70 different clonal selections.

Little Italy

Lusting for gold in the 1850s, many Italian immigrants headed to California's Sierra Nevada Foothills. By 1856, money gushed and lifestyle demands for the best food and drink gold could buy reached a pinnacle. Some 9,000 grape vines were planted in Amador County in the heart of Gold Rush country. Two years later, 20,000 more vines had been planted.

By the mid-1860s, a full-fledged pioneer wine industry had been created in the redlands and granite soils of the Mother Lode Country. Back then, more wineries operated there than in the rest of California.

Boom times ended when mines ran dry late in the 19th century. This downturn was followed by the first phylloxera outbreak devastating most vineyards. Wineries that survived had their backs broken by Prohibition.

Until 1968 foothill grape-growing remained virtually dormant.

That year, Bob Trinchero of Sutter Home Winery in Napa Valley, sampled some splendid homemade zinfandel from Amador County grapes. Trinchero began producing an Amador County zinfandel and set the inspiration model.

Montevina Winery, today owned by the Trinchero family, was founded in 1970.

Montevina, Amador's flagship winery, continues to produce ripe, full-flavored, plump zinfandels along with classic Italian red varietals such as sangiovese and barbera. Its pinot grigio, a white variety, rivals the best from Italy. Wine gold comes from this region today and is the reason Montevina calls its top-of-the-line wines Terra d'Oro – Land of Gold.

Italy's answer to merlot

"Amador's thin, rocky soils in a warm climate with cool nights, is the ideal place to grow barbera," Montevina's winemaker Jeff Meyers said. "The grapes develop well-colored skins and that's where all the flavors originate.

Grown in the wrong place, barbera can be funky, thin and acidic.

"Barbera's future in Amador is only before us. Lush and appealing, it is styled right for Americans. I like to call it Italy's answer to merlot with a lot more flavor."

If you've not tried barbera, begin with the 1997 Montevina Barbera ($12) and you'll discover that you can't buy a merlot with this much flavor at this price. Serve it with herb-roasted chicken, grilled lamb, Italian sausage with a touch of fennel or grilled portabella mushrooms as a vegetarian delight.

Mushroom stew flavored with beans

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The crimini mushrooms used in this provençal style stew sometimes are called baby portabellas, but they can be used like white mushrooms when you want more flavor.

QUICK MUSHROOM AND WHITE BEAN STEW

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 pound (about 5 caps) fresh crimini mushrooms, sliced
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 3/4 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- 2 cans (13 3/4 ounces each) chicken broth
- 1 can (14 1/2 ounces) stewed tomatoes, cut into bite-size pieces
- 1/4 cup dry white wine or water
- 2 cans (15 ounces each) cannellini beans, drained

In a Dutch oven or large sauce pan, heat oil until hot. Add mushrooms, onion, garlic and thyme; cook and stir until onion is very tender and mushrooms are slightly golden, about 7 minutes. Add chicken broth, tomatoes with their liquid, and wine; bring to a boil; cover and simmer to blend flavors, about 15 minutes.

In a small bowl, mash 1 cup of the beans until smooth; add to the stew. Stir in remaining beans; heat until hot. Serve immediately with a mound of steamed rice.

Makes 4 servings. Recipe from: The Mushroom Council

tevina Sangiovese, also at $12. Amador is California's best home for this Tuscan-origin grape variety, the base of all great chiantis. Try it with salmon or pork. The full-throttle wine of Amador is zinfandel. Vintage 1997 was great for Amador zins.

At $11 (and we've seen it on special for as low as $9!), the 1997 Montevina Zinfandel is a steal. Look no further for your best everyday red.

Farms organically

To ensure health of vineyard workers and to protect the environment by reducing the use of pesticides and herbicides, in 1992, Montevina began farming its vineyards organically. Today, all but the youngest vines on the estate are certified organic by the California Certified Organic Farmers organization.

for this year.

"I was involved before I got into the wine business because I love the center and its mission," said Dunn, who now holds a seat on Sarah Fisher's board of trustees.

"Our key to success is we offer a casual atmosphere in beautiful surroundings, and we try to provide the very best food and wines that we can."

In return for pouring hundreds of bottles of wine, Dunn said wineries and their distributors hope to increase recognition for their labels.

"Restaurants get exposure for their places and we look for the same," she said. "Hopefully, the next time a guest walks into a restaurant and looks at the wine list, they will remember a label from The Garden Party and order it.

"Beyond that, it's a great way to spend a day and help a very worthy cause."

Bananas enhanced with ginger

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indian cooking stimulates the senses with the aroma of spices and herbs that enhance the flavor of traditional fare. Therefore, it's a good choice for low-fat cooking, according to Jyl Steinback.

Steinback is a personal fitness trainer who in 1993 was looking for more healthful cooking for her family and founded Fat Free Living Inc. Her company has published seven fat-free cookbooks, which she says have sold more than 1 million copies.

Her latest book in the series is "Fat Free Living Cookbook From Around the World," ($16.99) created with the help of Alan Ksversky, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, and Debra Kohl, a registered dietitian. It includes recipes adapted from American, Asian, French, German, Greek, Indian, Italian, Jewish and Mexican cooking.

According to the introduction to Indian cooking, dessert is not an everyday item. Sweets represent prosperity and good fortune and are generally reserved for holidays and guests.

When the occasion arises, however, here is one treat to try.

GINGERED BANANAS

- 3 bananas, peeled and sliced into quarters
- 1 tablespoon fat-free margarine
- 1 tablespoon grated ginger root
- 1 tablespoon dark brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon lime juice

Lightly spray a large nonstick skillet with nonfat cooking spray. Add margarine to melt over medium heat. Add ginger root and cook, stirring frequently, until it is warmed through. Add bananas and sprinkle with brown sugar. Cook until browned, about 2 minutes. Turn bananas and cook until sauce begins to caramelize, about 2 minutes.

Remove from heat and carefully place bananas on a serving platter. Sprinkle lime juice in the skillet and mix with sauce. Drizzle over bananas and serve.

Makes 3 servings.

solved, remove from the heat and add 3 teaspoons of mixture to the warm rice. Stir and allow to sit a few minutes so rice absorbs the liquid.

Spread salmon rectangle on a piece of plastic wrap. Cover with another piece of wrap and gently pound thin. Remove the top layer of wrap and spread a thin layer of sticky rice over the salmon. Place the asparagus in the center of the rice and sprinkle caviar evenly over the spear.

Roll up toward you using the plastic wrap. Chill 1 hour.

Using a very sharp knife, slice into 1-inch thick pieces. Serve with a bowl of soy sauce. Yield 2-4 servings.

ORIENTAL ASPARAGUS

- 1 1/2 pounds green asparagus
- Zest of one orange, finely grated
- 1 1/2 teaspoons granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon sesame oil
- 1 teaspoon rice wine vinegar or sherry
- 1 teaspoon toasted sesame seeds

Slice the asparagus on an angle to give it an Oriental appearance. Blanch in simmering water until crisp-tender, about 4 minutes.

Drain and refresh with ice water. Pat dry.

Mix the orange zest, soy sauce, sesame oil and rice wine vinegar or sherry in a bowl. Add the asparagus and toss to coat. Refrigerate 1 to 3 hours. Serve cold topped with sesame seeds. Yield: 6-8 servings.

FRESH ASPARAGUS WITH RICE

- 2 1/2 pounds asparagus
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1/2 cup each Parmesan and grated Gruyere (mixed together)
- 6 teaspoons butter
- Salt and pepper to taste

Peel asparagus. Cut off tough end. Cook in salted water until tender (about 9 minutes).

Steam the rice in 1 1/2 cups of water to which you have added the wine. Bring to a boil uncovered. Lower the heat and simmer covered tightly until all liquid is absorbed (about 25 minutes).

In a shallow buttered casserole dish, layer the cooked rice with the asparagus, saving a few nice spears for the top. Sprinkle with cheeses.

Dot with butter. Place in the broiler until cheese melts and is nicely browned. Yield: 4-6 servings.

CREAMED ASPARAGUS ON TOAST

- 1 pounds green or white asparagus
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon sugar
- 1 sprig mint
- 2 teaspoon butter
- 1/4 cup light cream
- 2 egg yolks
- 4 slices toasted bread, buttered
- 1/16 teaspoon nutmeg
- Freshly ground white pepper

Using a swivel vegetable peeler, peel the skin from each stalk of asparagus.

Remove the hard woody base. Slice the asparagus into 1-inch lengths. Put all but the tops into salted boiling water and simmer 9-12 minutes.

Drain – reserving 1/4 cup of liquid. Place asparagus, seasonings, reserved cooking liquids, butter, cream, and asparagus tops into a saucepan. Simmer gently 8-10 minutes. Beat egg yolks and temper into the cream mixture.

Simmer 1 minute. Turn out on buttered toast and sprinkle with nutmeg and white pepper. Yield: 2-4 servings.

Jalapeno chili heats up potatoes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As vegetarian snack or side dish, Garlic Roasted Potato Wedges With Jalapeno Chili is both savory and nutritious. The potatoes are served with chili and cheese, plus sour cream and onions if desired. The chili may be served as a sauce for dipping or spooned over the potato wedges.

GARLIC ROASTED POTATO WEDGES WITH JALAPENO CHILI

(Preparation time 25 minutes, cooking time 45 minutes)

- Nonstick cooking spray
- 2 1/2 pounds (about 8 medium) potatoes, cut lengthwise into 1-inch-thick wedges
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- Two 15-ounce cans chili with beans
- 1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh jalapeno peppers
- 1/3 cup coarsely chopped fresh cilantro leaves
- Sour cream, optional
- Chopped green onions, optional

Preheat oven to 400 F. Lightly coat 2 foil-lined baking sheets with nonstick cooking spray.

In a large bowl, combine potatoes, oil and garlic; toss to coat. Arrange in even layer on baking sheets; season potatoes with salt and pepper. Bake 40 to 50 minutes, or until tender and browned; halfway through baking, turn potatoes and switch position of pans.

Meanwhile, in a saucepan combine chili, cheese and jalapenos; heat over medium-low heat 5 to 8 minutes, or until cheese is melted, stirring occasionally. Stir in cilantro.

To serve, spoon chili mixture into heatproof bowl; place on large serving platter. Surround chili with potato wedges; serve with sour cream and onions, if desired. Chili may be offered as a sauce for dipping or spooned over potato wedges. Serve immediately.

Makes 8 servings.

Tuna kebabs: The combined flavor of basil and olive oil in this marinade is strong enough that 15 minutes of marinating is sufficient.

Kebabs served with a twist

You can make a classic quartet with tuna, adding the biggest cherry tomatoes you can find, onion wedges and cucumber, and string up these kebabs.

The marinade, which keeps the fish moist as it cooks, features Asian flavors, pungent basil and mellow olive oil. The combined flavor is strong enough that fifteen minutes of marinating is sufficient. (This is less time than it takes to soak bamboo skewers, if you prefer wood to metal skewers.)

To further keep the lean tuna moist while grilling, cut the cucumber in crescents and nestle the fish between a cucumber crescent and a wedge of onion, which protects the tuna from excess heat.

Someone has called extra portions "intentional leftovers." You definitely want leftover brochettes, given how their flavors meld after they sit overnight. In fact, you can make the whole batch far enough ahead to serve later – the taste improves at room temperature. As for those leftovers, serve them off the skewer on a bed of chopped romaine lettuce for an outstanding, chunky, grilled tuna salad.

TUNA KEBABS

Marinade

1/3 cup fresh lime juice (about 2 limes)
1 tablespoons reduced sodium soy sauce
1 garlic clove, minced
2 tablespoons chopped Thai or Italian basil leaves
1/4 - 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil

Kebabs

1 lb. fresh tuna, cut in 12 chunks
6-inch piece cucumber, peeled
8 large cherry tomatoes
1 medium red onion, halved vertically and cut in 1/2-inch crescents

Preheat a gas grill or broiler.

In a glass or other non-reactive bowl, combine the lime juice, soy sauce, garlic, basil, pepper flakes, pepper and oil. Add the tuna chunks to the marinade, turning to coat them. Set aside to marinate 15 minutes at room temperature.

Halve the cucumber lengthwise, scoop out the seeds and cut each half crosswise into 8 crescents.

Assemble the kebabs using four metal or 10-inch (well-soaked) bamboo skewers. Slip a cucumber piece almost to the bottom of a skewer. Add a tuna chunk. Slip on a 2-3 layer onion crescent, followed by a tomato. Repeat with more cucumber, fish, onion and tomato. Finish the kabob with a final cucumber crescent, turned towards the onion. In the same way, make up 3 more skewers.

Broil the kebabs 3 minutes. Turn and cook until the fish is firm to the touch and the vegetables browned, another 2 to 3 minutes. Do not overcook or the tuna will be dry. Serve either hot or at room temperature.

2 teaspoons vanilla extract
3 cups oats, quick or old-fashioned, uncooked
1 3/4 cups whole wheat flour (see note)
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup golden raisins
1/2 cup coarsely chopped dry roasted peanuts (optional)

In a large bowl, beat peanut butter, honey and sugar with an electric mixer until creamy. Add egg whites, milk, oil and vanilla; mix well. Combine oats, flour and baking soda and add to the peanut butter mixture. Mix well. Stir in raisins and peanuts. Cover and chill at least 30 minutes.

Heat oven to 375 F. Remove refrigerated dough and drop rounded tablespoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheets. Bake 7 to 9 minutes or until light golden brown. Remove to a wire rack and cool completely. Store tightly covered at room temperature or wrap airtight and freeze. Makes about 5 dozen cookies.

Note: If using old-fashioned oats, add 2 tablespoons of flour. Nutritional information per cookie: 80 calories (25 from fat), 2.5 g fat (0 sat fat) 0 chol.

Remembering the road where friends meet

Perhaps the initiation begins long before graduation day. In the days leading up to holding their diploma in hand, most high school seniors probably do as much looking back as they do gazing forward.

Ben Falik recalls the time his buddy, Ben Ketai, broke a pool stick in his home when they were ninth graders. "Every time I see that stick I think of Ben," laughed Falik, a warm and delightfully witty senior at Andover High School in Bloomfield Hills.

Associate Producer Ben Falik

Four years pass like a blink of an eye.

Falik is about to learn the first hurdle on the path to wisdom is to accept that yesterday often seems closer than tomorrow.

In the fall, Falik and Ketai will go their separate ways. Falik heads east to Columbia University. Ketai will drive west to Ann Arbor to attend the University of Michigan.

Filmmaker Ben Ketai

During the summer months leading up to their departures, they'll be friends at a crossroad. The shared dream of high school will end. And both will learn how life moves on relentlessly.

But before Falik and Ketai step into their graduation gowns they'll share one last project.

Collaborative act

A year ago April, when most of his friends were on a school trip to Europe, Ketai settled in front of his computer and wrote the first draft of a script for his film Incarnate.

Last year, Ketai made his video-making debut with Transgression, a somewhat gory, less than subtle story.

"I wanted to make something that's real. Incarnate deals with raw human emotions," Ketai said.

Falik prefers a more light-hearted description.

In the press release announcing this Wednesday's premiere, Falik characterized Incarnate as having "enough twists and turns to make The Sixth Sense look like a hair-growth infomercial."

Posters have been placed in nearly every room at Andover High School. The 530-seat school auditorium has been reserved. T-shirts with the film's title have been printed and circulated.

Everyone in the cast of 37 (including Falik's dog) has been given their own T-shirt for their time on the film, which took 22 days to shoot.

"This film is different from my first one, it's more about themes," said Ketai.

Themes dealing with greed, lust and ambition. And adult characters who struggle with tragedy and moral dilemmas.

"Once you get past suspending belief that these are kids playing adults, there's an adult story," Ketai said.

The lesson? "Nothing is really worth the ambition if you're not happy."

Who said today's teenagers were zombies watching TV shows set in Beverly Hills and places like Dawson Creek?

Park West Gallery expansion brings art to the masses

STAFF PHOTOS BY JIM JAGDFELD

Irrepressible: Albert Scaglione, owner of Park West Gallery, has charted every step in developing his art gallery into an international multi million-dollar business. The renovated gallery (pictured below) will feature Corinthian-style columns and limestone floors.

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER
fprovenzano@oe.homecomm.net

The thick scroll of blueprints tucked under Albert Scaglione's arm are as dense and tightly bound as Sunday's rolled-up New York Times. But there's hardly any need to study diagrams to chart the course ahead for Park West Gallery, a business Scaglione established in the late 1960s that has flourished into a $100-million privately-owned company making profits in international auctioneering and catalogue art.

Don't think for a moment that Scaglione hasn't charted every step of the business he started as a one-employee, one-room gallery when Tricky Dick roamed the west wing, and the Internet was sci-fi fantasy.

It's hardly a coincidence that Scaglione, who holds a doctorate in mechanical engineering, has organized Park West Inc. into a proficient, high-yield revenue machine that has been increasing profits at a rate of 30- percent per year since the mid 1990s.

Impeccably groomed in a navy pinned-stripped suit, Scaglione clutches the roll of blueprints more as a prop than a guide.

When the timing is right, he unrolls the bundle of translucent paper that outline the expanded look of Park West, alternately pointing to the diagrams of floor plans and places in the gallery that will be transformed as the Southfield gallery expands to a sprawling 60,000-square feet by the end of the year.

By then, Park West will certainly have the look and feel of a museum.

Lasting showpiece

Only a few other privately owned galleries in the country, according to Scaglione, will be able to claim being larger, in terms of space or revenue. And, Scaglione quickly points out, only the large, tier-one auction houses like Sotheby's and Christie's generate more sales and revenue.

Designed by Ukranian artist/architect Anatole Krasnyansky, who worked on the renovation of the Hermitage Museum, the expanded space will add seven galleries and an ethereal classical aesthetic with Corinthian-style columns and limestone floors.

"The gallery is a showpiece for us," said Scaglione, whose much-publicized palatial home a few minutes drive away in Farmington Hills also could be characterized as a main attraction.

"What we'll have is something that will be around for 100 years. But I wouldn't say the gallery is going to be like a monument. It's more like a tree that's grown, whose roots started growing 20 years ago when we moved to this location."

There are vestiges of the late 1970s in the strip mall where Park West is located. A sign along Northwestern has the bloated letters of the decade of disco, but inside Park West is unmistakably contemporary, at least in terms of looking like a state-of-the-art gallery business.

Ironically, the pieces of art that hang salon style are remarkably nondescript. There isn't the slightest indication of cutting-edge or pushing-the-boundaries type art found, for instance, in the current Whitney Biennial or even innovative art often found in the upscale galleries in Birmingham.

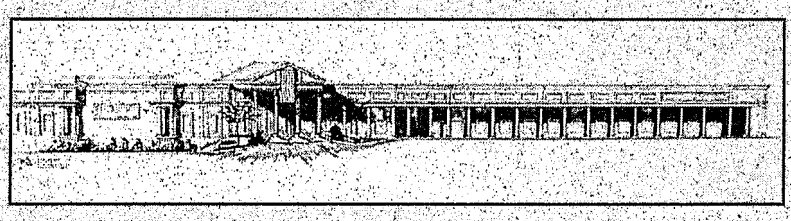

Clearly, the sensibility at Park West is safe and pleasant with plenty of dreamy hues and familiar compositions. Collectively, the work easily fits the designation of "art you can live with," although Scaglione comes close to guaranteeing that a purchased piece of art will appreciate in value.

By land and sea

Perhaps as impressive as the space exhibiting art is the manner in which Scaglione has created ways to bring works of 20th-century and contemporary artists to the masses.

This isn't a place for to celebrate artistic angst or the role of art in the early 21st century. Park West's mantra could be simply put: "Pretty pictures by land, by sea and by mail."

In addition to the Southfield gallery, which includes on-site printing shop, marketing, graphics and sales departments to keep in touch with their catalogue customers, Park West runs at-

Gustav Mahler's symphony evokes deep passions

BY LANA MINI

LMINI@OE.HOMECOMM.NET

Gustav Mahler's wonderfully complex symphony of rage, death and acceptance is a challenge embraced by French horn player David Everson.

"Mahler created very difficult, but very good pieces for horns. They're quite enjoyable to perform," said Everson.

Everson, a Troy resident, will play first horn this weekend for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's three performances of Mahler's symphony, Ninth, conducted by world renowned Music Director Neeme Järvi at Orchestra Hall.

Järvi is one of the world's most recorded conductors with nearly 350 titles in his discography and appears annually with the New York Philharmonic and Philadelphia Orchestra.

Joining the DSO in 1999, Everson was raised around the sounds of music — his parents were both music majors.

What: Music Director Neeme Järvi will conduct the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in Gustav Mahler's Ninth symphony.
Where: Orchestra Hall
When: 8 p.m. Thursday & Friday, May 25-26; 8:30 p.m. Saturday, May 27
Cost: $19-$50 with a limited number of box seats available from $62-$66. Students/seniors can purchase $15 or $10 RUSH tickets at the box office 90 minutes before showtime. Call (313) 576-5111 or at www.detroitsymphony.com
NOTE: Ford ConcertTalks — informal discussions about music and music-making — begin one hour prior to the performance with host Charles Greenwell

Growing up in Livonia, he hoped to learn saxophone, but his parents convinced him to try the French horn — and he fell in love with it. He played principal horn in the Flint Symphony, assistant principal horn for the Toledo Symphony before becoming principal horn with the Kansas City Symphony.

Missing the Michigan landscape and his family, Everson looked to return to his home state. He auditioned three times before making it with the DSO. In fact, he was once beaten out by close friend Mark Abbott, the DSO's current assistant principal horn.

The performance of Ninth will be the DSO's first in nearly 20 years. Everson, however, took part in the 99-

Kitty Dubin, a Birmingham playwright, was still in the hovering stages when I met her during the second week of rehearsals for the Jewish Ensemble Theatre's premiere of The Day We Met. It's billed as an evening of six one-act plays, united by the theme of humor, heart and humanity.

"I think I shouldn't be here, but I'm having a hard time staying home," Dubin readily acknowledges. She's sitting, script on one knee, legal pad on the other, pencil in hand, in the third row of the darkened Aaron DeRoy Theatre at the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield.

The actors, director and stage manager are off stage.

MEET THE ARTIST
An on-going series

All the members of the cast are Equity performers and the theatrical union requires periodic breaks, somewhat apologetically called by the stage manager. The three-week rehearsal period, before the production opens in previews May 24, is from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Once they return, there's no time to talk. She sits coiled, taking notes, occasionally chuckling at the on-stage action. It's the ninth day of rehearsal and she hasn't missed a minute. However, she's planning to take the next day off. "I'm probably getting on people's nerves, but no one would have the nerve to tell me," she laughs.

Award-winning director Geoffrey Sherman, an Auburn Hills resident, fills me in on where they are in the rehearsal schedule. That morning they ran through all six plays for the first time. This afternoon they are working on one of them, Blockbuster, that centers on a young man and woman, with radically different tastes in films who meet at a video store.

"Did you have any script changes based on this morning?" Sherman asks Dubin. "Not in this one," she responds. Later, however, it turns out that she

PCCA AWARDS SCHOLARSHIPS

Paint Creek Center for the Arts have awarded two $1,000 scholarships to graduating seniors.

Laurie Hughet of Wylie E. Groves High School, and Christina Newman of Waterford Mott High School received the awards.

The scholarships are awarded each year to graduating high school students from the tri-county area who plan to major in visual arts at the college or university of their choice.

Hughet plans to pursue art and design at the University of Michigan. Newman will attend the Center for Creative Studies in the jewelry and metalsmithing program.

PCCA is located at 407 Pine Street in downtown Rochester. For information, call (248) 651-4110.

OU STUDENTS WIN AWARDS

Palace Sports & Entertainment, Inc. and Standard Federal will present six local students with Meadow Brook Festival Scholarships.

Each student will receive a $1,250 scholarship to continue working toward a degree in music, theater or dance at Oakland University.

The awards will be presented at this Thursday's Trisha Yearwood concert at Meadow Brook.

The recipients include:

- Jacquline Bess and Jacquelyn Wagner of Bloomfield Hills
- Melanie Hamper of Davisburg
- Tobey Miller of Clinton Township
- Jennifer Price of Rochester Hills
- Heather Yanke of Berkley

sea auctions on cruise ships sailing throughout the world. In the last month, Scaglione closed a deal to acquire Fasi Co., an auction house in Florida, where he plans to headquarter Park West's at-sea business.

The key, according to Scaglione, has been to bring art to the buyers, who feel intimidated by contemporary art and what they perceive as pretentious art galleries. Prospective buyers who have the means to buy, but not necessarily the knowledge about what to buy.

Obviously, any high-falutin notions of art are deflated by conducting auctions in hotel ballrooms and on fun ships.

"We sell only original work," said Scaglione, who could probably offer a dissertation on the many ways to identify an original from a reproduction.

On many levels

For many unknowing buyers, however, it might be unclear that original doesn't necessarily mean an exact painting, but an original lithograph from a limited edition.

While Scaglione has certainly taken advantage of an opportunity, success wouldn't be possible without his legendary frenetic salesmanship and ability to see business opportunities where many gallery owners would simply call it a day – for art's sake.

With Scaglione, there are many levels of the art business. His approach was influenced more by his academic background in mechanical engineering than by any deep allegiance to an art movement.

From the late 1950s to the late 1960s, Scaglione was working on his doctorate at Michigan State University, and then teaching at Wayne State University. His focus on a particular branch of electromagnetic energy caught the attention of several noted engineers of the day. But when NASA decelerated exploration of space, Scaglione rethought his career, and decided to pursue a gallery business, recalling that he enjoyed his stint working in a relative's gallery when he was a teenager.

Yet with the new career, Scaglione didn't leave the theoretician or pragmatic thinker behind. With Scaglione, not only are the wheels always turning, they move at warped speed.

No blueprint could possibly capture the charm, effusiveness and feistiness of the self-described kid from Nutley, New Jersey whose father worked seven days a week, driving a truck and steadily hammering away at a the rewards of a positive attitude.

Through Scaglione's eyes, the world is not only in a constant state of flux, it's dynamically charged awaiting a catalyst to set the course. And make no mistake about it, Scaglione sees himself as that catalyst.

In a span of moments, he traverses several planes, from astrophysics to the pragmatic approach in running what he calls the dog-and-pony show of auctions.

Then just as suddenly, he appears reflective with an existential wandering in his eyes. "No, I don't think on many levels," he said. "Mentally, I live on one level in a race with death."

Toss away the blueprint. When you see Scaglione, you're looking at an original.

The art on the walls at Park West might not be cutting-edge material, but in many ways, Scaglione ability to invent himself and his gallery is truly contemporary stuff.

And, at times, utterly engaging.

"I'm an entertaining guy, you've got to give me that."

Who could doubt that the kid from Jersey has a way about him?

Cue soundtrack

In the days before the premiere, Falik and Ketai talk about the discipline required to complete the $2,000 project. Their bank account balance stands at $8. Falik is the dogged script editor who can turn a phrase, while Ketai is the determined visionary.

With a three-star rating of the film the Metro Times, Falik and Ketai are encouraged that Wednesday might be a sellout.

"Even if we sell out, we won't break even, but it's not about making money," said Falik.

When you're surrounded by people you love, it never is.

"I've gained a deep appreciation for my friends," said Ketai. "I get frustrated with them when we're shooting, but I can't get angry with them. They'll never know how much I appreciate them."

On June 4, Falik, Ketai and a half-dozen of their friends will share the spotlight in a collective graduation party. None of them could think of standing apart, so for one last time as classmates they'll stand together in celebration.

For now, all they want is to be together. And that's some ambition.

Cue the soundtrack.

These memories were meant to last a long, long time.

had discovered a historical error and had gone directly to the actress, Robin Lewis of Farmington Hills.

"I realized there was no way she could have seen The Virgin Spring when it came out," Dubin explains. "So I changed the line from 'I saw it when it first came out' to 'I already rented it.' "

"The script goes through lots of changes," Dubin explains. "It's mostly cutting lines that don't add anything." It happens in a number of ways — through the actors asking if they could say it another way, through the director wondering if it's needed, through Dubin's own revisions. "We've cut at least 15 lines," she tells me.

Dubin and Sherman have never worked together. Sherman, born in England, is celebrating his 28th year as a professional theater and television director. Of particular note is his work as producing artistic director of Off Broadway's Hudson Guild Theatre where he was responsible for the world or national premieres of more than 25 plays by both established and emerging authors. More recently he was artistic director at Meadow Brook Theatre.

For Dubin, it has been a marvelous experience. "He's fabulous. He's been very inclusive. He is in charge, but we chat at the end of each rehearsal."

Sherman laughs when I ask him how it is having the playwright in residence. "It's really interesting," he said. "When I was first taught how to direct back in England, I learned the best playwright is a dead one. The next best playwright lives in the Bahamas and has no phone. The worst is the one who is still alive and comes to rehearsal."

He learned otherwise. "I found it was very useful to have the playwright around. You could ask them instead of having to theorize. It changes the process. There's less chance for the director and actors to complain about the playwright. But I've always enjoyed it."

The production process is not new to Dubin either. She has had a number of plays professionally produced, including The Last Resort and Change of Life at JET and Ties That Bind at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea. Mimi and Me, one of the plays that comprises The Day We Met, won third prize in last year's New York City 15-Minute Playwriting Festival. This year, Tough as Nails, another of these plays, was a semifinalist in the same competition.

"It's a totally different animal this time," Dubin said. That's because rather than seeing the characters and plot develop through a two or three-act play, there are six individual plays.

And that's not the way Dubin originally envisioned it. "I wrote the first two and then I realized I could make an evening of it by tying them all together."

JET, which each spring presents staged readings of several new plays, actively looks for new work. The Day We Met, in a slightly altered form, was one of those staged readings two years ago.

"This is the only premiere we're doing this year," said Evelyn Orbach, artistic director at JET.

The production has been aided by a $30,000 grant from Hudson's through its Project Imagine program. The program, in its second year, supports community arts and cultural institutions.

Three of the one-acts — Strictly Personal, Blockbuster and Tough As Nails — deal with singles and the issues that confront them. Two others — The Joy of Sex and Let Him In — depict people looking for help with family problems. And one — Mimi and Me — involves a perky young woman volunteer at a nursing home who meets her match when she tries to cheer up a 90-year-old woman.

By opening night, Dubin said, she'll be ready to let go of The Day We Met. "By that time, it's sort of not mine. A kind of surreal calm descends." During the month-long run, "I'll go when I feel like it, probably a couple of times a week."

Then, she'll turn her attention to launching her latest offspring, Dance Like No One's Watching. "It more serious than anything I've written but it has definite comic overtones," she said.

"It's a matter of getting someone to read it. I feel really fortunate that just about everything I've written has been produced."

minute symphony in more recent years while working in Kansas.

"But it doesn't get easier to play," he laughed.

Everson has been practicing the Ninth for several months. He can be heard quite distinctively during a solo passage and then in a duet with a flutist during the first movement.

"They're very nice rather unusual solos," he said.

The entire symphony itself, however, could be called more "ironic" than nice.

Beautifully powerful, Ninth was written in 1910 while Mahler was not only mourning the death of his four-year-old daughter Maria, but also struggling with his own deteriorating health.

The Ninth is often characterized as a triumph of peace and acceptance of mortality. Mahler takes the listener from a funeral march in movement one to despair and anger in two and three and finally through a serene hymn in four.

Superstition that no composer after Beethoven would survive past their own Symphony No. 9, Mahler tried to beat destiny by titling it, simply Ninth.

However, fate soon played its role as Mahler died while creating Symphony No. 10 less than one year later.

Ninth was first performed in 1911, after Mahler's death.

Human nature, architecture evolve together in 'June'

June – by Mary Sanders Smith (Lintel Publishing, 2000, $16)

ESTHER LITTMANN

Although born and raised in Illinois Corn Belt country, June Ventler feels like an outsider. Still barren at 38 despite her 20-year marriage to Ed, a hard-working, taciturn third-generation German-American farmer, June longs for a child and the acceptance motherhood would bring. Yet the protagonist of Mary Sanders Smith's first novel, June, also harbors unconventional yearnings.

These she shares only with her free-spirited, 10-year-old niece, not daring to risk rebuke and ridicule from her husband and the strict Lutheran community in which she lives.

While June's hands are busy with domestic activities, her mind is preoccupied with architectural fantasies. In scarce leisure hours, June furtively designs the "perfect house," one with "straight rectangular extensions stretching out in space." Despising the "prissy ostentation" of her current Victorian home, she envisions a structure that harmonizes with the rough and simple beauty of the prairie, a seamless outgrowth of nature.

But all her life June has been boxed in by tradition, community, and her own "obedient compliance." She quietly despairs that her dreams will ever come true: "They just hang on the horizon like summer heat-lightning that never turns into a storm."

Enter Mac McDonald, a Van Heflin look-alike, as her husband's new hired man. A sturdy, red-haired Irishman with a ready grin, he exudes sexuality and rootlessness, risk-taking and change. It is Mac who boosts June's flagging ego and encourages her to enter a competition in house design.

When she wins, June Ventler gains more than the chance to travel and learn about "organic architecture" from the master himself, Frank Lloyd Wright. Her trip becomes a catalyst for change and self discovery.

She comes to understand that she is not alone, that her ideas are shared by others and have merit. But most importantly, June discovers that human nature evolves by the same principles as a work of architecture. "Everything must flow from within and create continuity," says her mentor, "so that the outside will reflect what's within." June had always imagined the opposite — that external forces were in control of what lay inside.

In some ways, the eponymous heroine of June is reminiscent of Elisa's frustrated womanhood in John Steinbeck's The Chrysanthemums and Francesca's smoldering eroticism in Robert James Waller's The Bridges of Madison County. But Smith's characterization suggests that women do not have to choose between despair and deception. Once June stops seeing herself primarily through the eyes of her husband and neighbors, once she harnesses her creative energy to take charge of her life, she makes good things happen.

Set in 1940 on the eve of America's involvement in World War II, Smith's novel brings to life the last days of the old farming traditions.

Those were the times when neighbors and friends came together to help harvest crops, when women gathered at meetings of the Ladies Home League, for gossip and mutual support, and when farm families socialized in the town square on Saturday night. Soon the combine and Roosevelt's farm programs, along with U.S. entry into the war, would forever change this way of life.

A part-time resident of Grosse Pointe, Sanders Smith began writing when she was 50. Now, nearing 70, she has published short stories, TV nature documentaries, and a screenplay for Running Free. Her first novel is a finely crafted mosaic, rich in nature imagery and sensitive characterization, architectural insights and historical reference. While embracing change, it seeks to identify what is timeless and of enduring human value.

BOOK HAPPENINGS

Borders Books, Music, Video & a Cafe, at 1122 S. Rochester in Rochester Hills, has the following events planned: (For more information, call (248) 652-0558.)

■ A poetry workshop by poet and Detroit Women Writers member Linda Sienkiewicz is held the first four Wednesdays in May.

Each session begins at 7:30 p.m. Sienkiewicz will discuss creative techniques to enhance poem making. Based on the feedback from her past workshops, she has created a four-week series. Sign up in advance at the store. All levels of writers are welcomed.

Borders Books and Music at Oakland Mall has the following events planned:

■ The Oakland Mall Borders celebrates its one-year anniversary the weekend of May 19-21.

The anniversary party concludes at 2 p.m. Sunday with music by Keri Noble. If you celebrate a wedding anniversary or a birthday during this weekend, show a copy of your wedding license or birth certificate or driver's license and receive a 15 percent discount on any item not already discounted.

■ The American Girl Book Group, which is accepting new members, meets 3 p.m. Sunday, May 21.

■ Storyteller Barbara Schutzgraber shares String Stories at 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 24.

■ The Peanut Butter Mosquitoes, a rock 'n' roll band, will play at 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 26.

■ Here, There & Everywhere features Miss Amy, who will discuss summer time activities for children, at 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 31.

BOOK SIGNING

■ Author Patricia Polacco will sign copies of her book, The Butterfly, at three locations next month: 2:30 p.m. Saturday, June 3, at Borders Books & Music, 3527 Washtenaw, Ann Arbor, (734) 677-6948; 12:30 p.m. Sunday, June 4 at Half Way Down the Stairs, 114 E. Fourth Street, Rochester, (248) 652-6066; 4:15 p.m. Sunday, June 4, at Oak Park Library (hosted by Book Beat), 14200 Oak Park Blvd., Oak Park, (248) 691-7480.

The Butterfly is a true story of friendship, loyalty and courage. Polacco reaches into her family tree to tell the story of her aunt Monique and Monique's mother, Macel, a member of the French Resistance in Nazi-occupied France.

■ Devin Scillian, television anchor for Channel 4, signs his children's book, Fibblestax, at 10 a.m. Monday, May 22 at Barnes & Noble, 6575 Telegraph, Bloomfield Hills. Fibblestax is a fable of the one who names everything and the battles he had with those individuals who would give terrible names to wonderful things.

■ Richard A. Ferri of Troy, author of Serious Money: Straight Talk about Investing for Retirement, will discuss current economic and financial market conditions, answer questions, and sign copies of his newly published book at the Barnes & Noble bookstore in Troy, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 24.

Northern woodlands have eye for art

BY ALICE RHEIN
STAFF WRITER
arhein@oe.homecomm.net

Sure, it's got some of the best golf Michigan has to offer. And top-notch snow skiing, too.

But what sets Crystal Mountain Resort in Thompsonville apart from other northern Michigan all-season vacation destinations is that it's also got art.

Specifically, it's got Legacy Art Park, a 30-acre woodland gallery dotted with sculptures from Michigan artists accustomed to using nature as their palette.

True, a vacation to view outdoor art may not be for everyone, but consider the two miles of hiking and cross-country ski trails that meander along hilly slopes dense with maple and beech trees.

Nature is beauty and so, too, is the artwork that enhances the walk.

Conceived by Novi sculptor David Barr, Legacy Art Park is home to 23 sculptures, including Barr's Saw Blade, a wood sculpture paying homage to Michigan's long tradition of logging.

It also houses Ann Arbor artist Will Cares' sapling tunnel entitled Crossroads, two 20-feet long, 8-feet tall arches which intersect to form an "X."

The piece can be interpreted on many levels: as a historical tribute to places where early villages sprung up; as a reference to the cultures intersecting, or as a nod to nature, where elements such as branches of a river link together.

Children will interpret it as simply a fun place to run through and explore.

Gary Kulak's Barn Chair, which is twice the height of its creator, is perched atop a ridge for a panoramic view of Betsie Valley.

And Hamtramck artist Mike McGillis offers Five Needles, a tribute — and a stark message — to the logging industry that devastated huge areas of Michigan's white pines for many uses, including masts on sailing ships.

The telephone poles with their broad sails combine the sense of loss from lumbering with the romance of wood.

Resting comfortably: The Legacy Art Park sculpture Observer uses an old chamber organ pipe to project sound.

If you're going

- Thompsonville is 30 minutes southwest of Traverse City. From the Detroit area take I-75 north to US-10 west to M-115 west.
- For information and reservations call 1-800-YOUR-MTN or visit www.crystalmtn.com.
- Crystal Mountain Resort offers 222 luxury suites, hotelrooms, condos and resort homes, many with in-room whirlpools. The indoor pool and fitness center is open year-round; outdoor pool available in the summer.
- There's something for every kid, ages 3 and up. Adventure Cubs (ages 3-5) features picnics, art projects, frogging, nature hikes and interactive and orienteering games. Adventure Camp (ages 6-12) includes hiking, biking, local field trips and various outdoor experimental education programs. Adventure Teens (ages 13 and up) provides teens with backcountry excursions including biking and kayaking. Kids 6 and up can also enjoy a float down the river in the Adventure Tubing program. Private sitters are also available with advance notice.
- Summer Sounds Series schedule at Legacy Art Park includes:

June 30 – Richard Sutton Ensemble (jazz fusion featuring acoustic guitar and Australian didgeridoo)

July 7 — New Five Cent Band (up-tempo string-band music ranging from reels, hoedowns, waltzes, polkas and Irish jigs)

July 14 — Marvin Kahn & Keith Vreeland Duo (traditional and original jazz)

July 21 — Tom & Chris Kastle (songs of the Great Lakes)

July 28 — Sweetwater (folk, country, soft rock and blues)

July 29 — Sally Rogers (traditional, contemporary and original folk ballads and songs)

Aug. 4 — Mosaic Youth Theatre (Detroit youth musicians present Seasons of Love, featuring gospel, a cappella, pop, R&B and Broadway tunes)

Aug. 11 — Grand Traverse Highlanders (dressed in kilts of ancient Sutherland tartan, this bagpipe group performs the haunting music of the Scottish Highlands)

July concerts start at 7 p.m., August concerts at 6 p.m. Shuttle service is provided for those who cannot negotiate the trail.

Hidden view: Sapling tunnels make for fun adventure in Crossroads, an outdoor sculpture by Ann Arbor artist Will Cares.

Last year, Barr, whose sculptures can be found on the grounds of Oakland University in Rochester and at the Daimler-Chrysler Headquarters in Auburn Hills, completed Labyrinth, a 30-foot, fort-like maze of obstacles and dead ends that speaks to the changes Native Americans endured at the hands of the early settlers.

Keeping the harmony between art, nature and history is the park's theme. And though you feel entrenched in nature while you stroll through the park, a glance down the hill and you're looking at the deep greens of one of Crystal Mountain's award-winning golf courses.

It is, after all, why most people come to Crystal.

But in the summer months, an outdoor amphitheater nestled in a natural hollow of Legacy Art Park features live family entertainment.

Among this year's offerings are Detroit's Mosaic Youth Theatre and the Grand Traverse Highlanders, a group that performs the haunting music of the Scottish Highlands.

Designed by Traverse City architect Bob Holdeman, the hexagonal theater amplifies sound using only natural phenomena and an underground echo chamber.

Several evenings throughout the summer months, chairlift rides take you to the top of the mountain, where concerts take place on Friday nights.

Crystal Mountain Resort also offers a full range of family activities, including junior golf clinics, an adventure camp and complete indoor pool and play space.

And while Legacy Art Park continues to evolve with new installations planned each year, its founder is satisfied in knowing that he's helped create a blank canvas on which many artists will write.

Clarkston diamond gems get the best of Ortonville-Brandon

Winning a game is always sweet. But for Clarkston's softball players, beating league and regional rival Ortonville-Brandon is a win that's just a little sweeter than most.

It was a downright sugary day for the Wolves Wednesday, as sophomore Stacie Giroux belted a seventh-inning single that brought home junior Nicole Thrift to lift host Clarkston to a 5-4 Oakland Activities Association Division I win over the Blackhawks. The Wolves improved to 22-9 overall and 10-4 in the league.

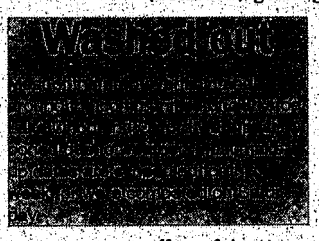

On Saturday, the team participated in the Madonna Tournament before taking on Lake Orion Wednesday. The Wolves' single game against Rochester Adams Friday was rained out, and no makeup date has been set.

Clarkston, which went winless against the Blackhawks in 1997 and 1998, notched its third win over Brandon in the past two seasons thanks to an early lead and Giroux's heroics.

The Wolves jumped out to a 4-1 lead after six innings, and were playing their usual excellent defense. Then, the Blackhawks put three runs across in the top of the seventh to tie the game at 4-4.

The top of Clarkston's lineup, featuring speed demons Melanie Arnold and Lisa Ferguson, does much of the team's damage, or sets it up. But with Ferguson unavailable because of injury, the bottom of the lineup stepped up and delivered.

"Brandon's had our number the past few years, so it's always nice to get a win over them," said coach Al Land. "It seems like no matter how well we play, we get caught up with (Brandon) getting people on base and forcing us into mistakes."

Senior Candace Morgan went the distance on the mound for the Wolves, and tossed one of her better games this season. She allowed just one run through five innings, and Brandon scored its three seventh-inning runs thanks to three Clarkston errors.

"Candace threw an excellent game and really kept them in check," Land said.

Senior Jennie Winn and Simko added RBI hits for Clarkston, while freshman Missy Parsons slammed a double and Arnold went 2-for-3 with a run scored.

Clarkston's Sage to race at U-M

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

Over the past four years, Clarkston senior David Sage has emerged as one of Michigan's top prep distance runners. Next season, he will represent the Great Lake State again, but at another level.

Sage recently came into an agreement with the University of Michigan to run both cross-country and track for the Wolverines next school year, becoming the latest in the line of many Clarkston senior athletes that will continue their athletic careers at the collegiate level.

"It's a great feeling knowing that I'll be running for a Big Ten School such as Michigan," said Sage. "This is something I've been shooting for. I'm looking forward to it."

For Clarkston head boys track & field coach Walt Wyniemko, seeing Sage advance to a premier college program is rewarding for all of Sage's coaches at Clarkston.

"I think it's great to see him get a chance to go to a great school known for great athletic teams and academics," said Wyniemko. "David has put in a lot of work over the past few years and it's nice to see that his work has paid off for him.

"I think we're all going to be looking forward to see him race at the college level."

Sage, who is generally considered one of the all-time great distance runners to come out of Clarkston, along with alumnus Gordie Sanders, is enjoying a fine senior campaign in track & field this spring.

Already this season, Sage has set a school record in the 1600 meters (4:19.1) and has teamed up with classmates Kevin Breen, Matt Haver and Brett Quantz for a school-record 7:56.7 clocking in the 3200-meter relay. Sage has also run 9:37.0 in the 3200 meters this spring — he was at the Lower Peninsula Class A State Meet in that event last June — and has gone 2:00.0 in the open 800 this year.

Sage, who is a two-time state-qualifier in both the 1600 and 3200, is also a four-time state qualifier in cross-country, where he has eclipsed the 16-minute mark on several occasions. Last fall he placed 13th at the state finals in 16:04.8, helping the Wolves to a fourth-place state meet finish.

He was also expected to qualify in the three events — the 1600, 3200 and 3200 relay — this past Saturday at the Port Huron Northern track regional.

Sage said he is not shocked by his successful career — to a certain extent.

"Not to sound cocky, but after my freshman year, I knew I was going to be pretty decent," said Sage, who sports a 3.60 grade-point-average and has scored a 1200 on his SAT and 27 on his ACT. "But to look back and see how far I've come, and to see my times now compared to what they were four years ago, and it's amazing.

"I've put in a lot of work over the years and if anything, its rewarding to see how well I've done, and how well my teams have done."

Springfield posts twinbill sweep

BY DANIEL STICKRADT

Rainouts have dampened Clarkston Springfield Christian's baseball season, but not enough to dip the soaring Eagles' wings

After a near-two-week lay-off to due to a multiple postponements, Springfield Christian returned to the diamond Friday and came a way with a Fundamental Baptist Athletic Conference double-header sweep of visiting Clinton Township Faith Christian, 5-2 and 4-2.

"It's been a weird season because of all the rain," said Springfield Christian coach Pat Wagner. "It seems that every time we have a game, it pours out. We haven't played in about two weeks."

Despite the long lay-off, the Eagles (10-3, 7-1) received a pair of strong pitching performances Friday from senior Adam Armstrong and sophomore Ben Munce.

The right-handed Armstrong (4-3) fired a four-hitter in the opener with five strikeouts, while the right-handed Munce (5-0) pitched a no-hitter in the nightcap, although two walks, a wild pitch and two fielding errors cost the Eagles two runs and the shutout.

"Our pitching has been our strength again this year," said Wagner, whose squad drew the No. 1 seed in this year's Michigan Association of Christian Schools state tournament. "I haven't had to worry about the pitching staff. We've lost to (Ortonville) Brandon, Lapeer East and one league game to (Troy) Bethany Christian, and in those games we were missing some people. In our league loss to Bethany, Armstrong pitched, but he didn't have four starters behind him."

Around the final curve: Lake Orion seniors (from l-r) Andi Thomas, Melissa Ehrecke, Kelly Gleeson, Somer George and Nikki Brown have reached the summit of their track careers.

Lake Orion senior quintet ready to close final stages of grand track & field careers in style

BY DANIEL STICKRADT

dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

A couple of years ago, Andi Thomas used to look at opposing track & field teams around Oakland County, such as Southfield, Rochester Adams and rival Clarkston, and wonder why they were so good. Her friends, and teammates, Melissa Ehrecke, Kelly Gleeson, Nikki Brown and Somer George used to ponder about the exact same thing.

"We used to wonder why they were always so good, so tough to beat" said Thomas, now a senior sprinter. "We never could do what those teams did."

But how times have changed for this Lake Orion senior quintet, which has helped the Dragons move from a mediocre contingent into one of Oakland County's best over the past four school years.

Entering Saturday's Division I state regional at Port Huron Northern, the Dragons have been enjoying, perhaps, their finest season in school history.

Besides a perfect 6-0 dual meet record inside the Oakland Activities Association Division II, where the Dragons won each dual meet this season by at least 40 points, Lake Orion has finished in the top three at both the Romeo Invitational and Oxford Invitational. They were also scheduled to be among the top teams at the regional along with Romeo and Clarkston, and enter Tuesday's OAA II league

Rain delays aside, there are still exciting moments and questions to be answered

Maybe for this week, I should rename this column Wet and Wild. It's been a Sea Worldesque week here in the sports department, and our coverage has been at Mother Nature's mercy, always a pet peeve of mine.

Friday's rainouts may have been the cruelest of all. In Clarkston, we had a steady drizzle all morning, but not a slice of sunshine. As of 10:30 that morning, Lake Orion's softball twinbill at Troy was on, but the continuous rain washed that game out, as it did to all other non-soccer events.

Of course, by the time these games were actually scheduled to start (3:30-4 p.m.) the rain had stopped. Ma Nature is one who didn't deserve anything for Mother's Day.

OK, now that I'm done venting, let's take a look back at the parts of the week not waterlogged.

■ Diamond gems

Wednesday, I saw the best baseball game I've seen this year (yes, that includes the Tigers) when Rochester Adams edged Lake Orion 5-3 in eight thrilling innings.

The game wasn't necessarily the best-played game of the season, witness nine fielding errors by Adams, but for drama, big plays, good pitching and good hitting, few compared to this one. Both teams were fired up, intense and played every pitch like it was their last. Everyone knew the game was for first place in the OAA Division I, and the winner would end up to be the likely champion. Lake Orion boys basketball coach Jim Manzo and football coach Chris Bell both came out, in addition to a high number of fans, to watch two of the best teams in the county square off.

Both teams had players deserving of extra portions of praise for the way they played under pressure situations. After a rough first inning on the mound, Orion senior pitcher Mike Crawford was perfect in the second inning, striking out the side on nine strikes. That was the first time I've seen that done at the high school level in many years. Not many took Wednesday's loss harder than Crawford, who is just as tough a competitor as he is a top-notch pitcher.

And how about the clutch hitting of junior catcher Jim McMahon? Sean Letsinger was intentionally walked to load the bases with McMahon coming up to bat. All Jim did was send a rope into right-center field that tied the game 2-2, proving again he's one of the best crunch-time players in the county.

But give equal credit to Adams, who overcame nine errors on defense to win the game. The mistakes the Highlanders made never seemed to really hurt them, while any slip-up by the Dragons was cashed in full by Adams. It was a treat to watch these two ultra-competitive teams go at it, and I can't help but wonder if we'll see a rematch in the regionals June 10.

■ Rank rankings

Once again, the OAA I gets the shaft. And I'm not talking about the Samuel L. Jackson shaft.

A glance at Friday's Division I state rankings shows one — I say ONE — team from the OAA I ranked in the top 10, and that's Adams, who barely slipped in at nine. This came a week after the baseball voters, possibly with some resentment, ranked Lake Orion ninth.

What is so tough about putting these teams in the top 10? Won-loss record? Adams improved to 20-4 with its win, while Lake Orion stands at 18-5. Considering the schedule these teams have played, both should be at least in the top seven. Rankings can be funny though. Lake Orion has wins over Saginaw Heritage and Grosse Pointe North, both of whom were ranked as high as fourth and sixth respectively earlier this season.

Please See MONASTIERE, C2

championships, which will be contested on the Dragons' home venue, as the predominate favorites.

Lake Orion, the defending league champions, should also finish among the top 10 at the Oakland County Championships this Friday at Clarkston — thanks in part to the above-mentioned seniors, who are all in their fourth season as key contributors in the Dragons' line-up.

Not bad for a team that scored just one point at the Class A Holly Regional two years ago.

"It's amazing how far we've come," said hurdler/sprinter Melissa Ehrecke, who scored that lone point at the 1998 regional, taking a sixth in the 100-meter intermediate hurdles. "It feels so good. There's no other way to explain it."

So what has driven this group of athletes in a not-so-glamorous sport such as track & field, especially in an era where more and more seniors are electing not to participate in spring prep sports?

"I guess for me, it's a little bit of both sides," said Ehrecke. "I mean, from a personal aspect, running is in my blood. But as a group, we are all like one big family. Everyone is so close."

George, a middle distance runner, agrees.

"It really is like a family here," she said a matter-of-factly. "As a group, we're all working hard and we all cheer each other on. We push each other."

Coincidentally, four members of this group have already had their names engraved into the school's records book. As sophomores, Thomas, Gleeson and Brown each ran a leg on the school's all-time best 400-meter relay unit, which clocked in at 51.6 seconds. Ehrecke also joined that list just this past Tuesday, as she teamed up three underclassmen that shattered the 1600 relay record, posting a time of 4:09.0 in a dual meet at Waterford Mott.

But beyond records, this group has excelled in numerous events across the board, and all entered Saturday's regional not only with a chance to score points, but with a legitimate chance of qualifying for the Lower Peninsula Division I state meet, set for June 3 at Rockford High School.

Both Thomas and Brown were seeded among the top 10 in both the 100 and 200 meters, Gleeson is a 16-foot long jumper, George has broken 1:04 in the 400 and runs a leg on a 3200 relay that has clocked 10:20 and was seeded in the top five, and Ehrecke ranked in the top six in both the 100 and 300 hurdles. And that's not to mention the three sprint relays, which were all ranked in the top six, including the top-seeded 1600 relay unit aided by Ehrecke.

Sharon Kline, which took over the Dragons' girls track & field program in 1997 after serving as an assistant for several years, has witnessed this group grow up vastly over the past four years. And she admits that saying good-bye will be difficult.

"This is a very special group, I just can't say enough about them," said Kline. "I mean, they've done just about everything that's been asked of them.

"Right now, Nikki Brown has some (leg) problems, but she refuses to sit out a meet," Kline continued. "And Somer George? She gave up her spot in the 1600 relay for the betterment of the team. This is only a little bit about what this group is like. They are so special, and it's going to hard not to cry and our team banquet — really hard. I don't want to have to say good-bye.

Brown says that Kline is one of the reasons why this group has remained on board for the ride, which has taken the Dragons from the middle of the pack to the top of the leaders board.

"She's like a second mom to us," said Brown. "I don't really know of anyone on this team that doesn't enjoy (competing) for her, or doesn't really like her."

Much can be said about this fab five, which has helped the program grow in numbers.

"They set some good examples for the younger kids, and I'm starting to see more and more kids stick with it," said Kline. "There is something to be said about senior leadership, and this group has provided it. I'm going to miss them."

Gleeson added that the group would like to set a few more marks on the track before the final weeks of the season come to close, among them the school's 800-meter relay record. But above all, they just want to go out on top.

"We want to win the league again," she said. "We're so close to winning it again. That's been one of our goals all season."

This group would also like to finish high at the county meet, where the likes of Southfield, Adams, Novi, Milford, Rochester, Pontiac Northern, and — yes — Clarkston, will be among the leaders of the pack at the meet, which includes athletes from close to 50 high schools.

"Remember when we wanted to be as good as Clarkston?" recalled Thomas.

Just think. Perhaps somebody out there in Oakland County is now wondering the same thing about Lake Orion.

As the weeks have come and gone, Heritage and North have dropped out of the rankings. Now is it because those teams lost to the bunch of stiffs from Lake Orion? Or maybe, gee, could it be that Lake Orion has a quality team that is deep and talented?

But that's all good. I'm sure once tournament time rolls around, the OAA I will have more teams win districts than any other league in the state. Mark it down.

■ Oxford plays.....where?

In another set of rankings I spotted a couple weeks ago, someone decided to rank Oxford's baseball team third in the state — in Division II. Well that's funny, because the Wildcats now play in the state's Division I, where they will compete in a district with Clarkston, Lake Orion, Grand Blanc, Lapeer East and Lapeer West.

With Oxford's rapidly growing population, I hope we'll see more matchups between the Wildcats and teams like Clarkston and Lake Orion in other sports. Oxford and Lake Orion should play each other in every sport. I would love to see those two teams hook it up in football. Both programs are well-coached, fundamentally sound, and hey, a little bad blood in a rivalry never hurt anybody, did it?

■ Well coach, tell us how you really feel

Quote of the week has to go to Troy Athens baseball coach Frank Clouser. When asked about how his first-place OAA II team is doing, his first comment (to the Detroit News) was, "We walk everybody." I just thought that was pretty funny.

■ Feel good win

Before the rains came, Clarkston's softball team notched a huge league win, defeating Brandon 5-4 Wednesday afternoon.

This is turning into one of the best seasons in Clarkston's softball history. The team is already 22-9 as of Friday, and with a tournament, a few league games and the postseason still to go. Two years ago, the Wolves won 26 games on their way to the regional semifinals, but this year's version appears equal in talent.

Clarkston is just so solid defensively. The Wolves don't

Please See MONASTIERE, C3

In the opener against Faith Christian, Armstrong helped his own cause with an RBI single. Senior Matt Christie went 2-for-3 and drove in two runs, while senior catcher Matt Lonteen also had an RBI single.

Christie was the offensive catalyst in the nightcap, as he drilled a three-run double. Armstrong added an RBI single for Springfield's other run.

Although Springfield Christian is a senior-laden team, Wagner is also pleased with the progress of his freshmen, most notable Josh Schuermann, who has been the Eagles' starting shortstop as of late.

"We're going to be young team next year, so I'm giving some of these younger guys a chance to see some action this year," said Wagner. "Schuermann has been starting at shortstop and is doing a fine job for us. He's going to be a good player, and so are the others."

The Eagles are idle until Tuesday, when they travel to league rival Rochester Hills Christian for a make-up FBAC twinbill, which should decide the league championship. Last season, Springfield split with Rochester Hills, although they went on to capture the league title.

The Eagles also open up regional play in the MACS tourney on Thursday, when they play host to Saginaw Shields Community Baptist.

Land said Giroux struggled defensively in the first matchup with Brandon, a team that lives off the bunt and the stolen base. But her progress since that April tilt was evident with her game-winning hit.

"Plays like that can sometimes be a springboard for a player," Land said. "Stacie is actually one of our better hitters, and that hit she had to win the game, she hit the ball as hard as you can hit it."

With the win, Clarkston is all alone in third place in the OAA I, a game behind Brandon and two behind Waterford Kettering.

Kettering plays at fourth-place Lake Orion Monday in a game that could solidify the Captains' top spot, or muddle the league picture even more.

beat themselves with bad throwing errors, something that plagues a lot of teams. With the quick gloves and strong arms of shortstop Lindsay Simko and third baseman Stacie Giroux, Clarkston's left side of the infield is virtually airtight. Lisa Ferguson's emergence as a starting pitcher has been a revelation, as she has become one of the team's biggest assets. Her hitting has also improved light years since 1999. With her speed and all-stater Melanie Arnold at the top of the order, Clarkston is rarely faced with a two-out, bases-empty situation in the first inning. In softball, as much as any sport, it's all about playing to situations and getting your people into areas where they can use their strengths. Clarkston does this as well as anyone, and would be a big reason why the team would advance in the state tournament.

Giroux is a nice story as well. She is the third of four Giroux sisters to play in the Clarkston softball program in the past eight years. Her older sisters Stephanie and Aimee were All-State players, and with her improved play this year, Stacie could make a bid to make it three for three in a couple of years. The fourth sister, Susie, is in eighth grade and has considerable Compuware experience behind her already. I'm sure coach Al Land is thankful to parents Al and Sue Giroux for having the girls, and staying in Clarkston.

■ Bad break

Sincere sympathy goes out to Lake Orion junior softball player Kelly Coe, who is out for the season with a broken knuckle on her hand. She suffered the injury in the team's doubleheader win over Royal Oak Kimball Monday afternoon.

For some reason, Kelly's name didn't come up in my stories about the team as often as it should have. She was an essential part of that lineup, hitting between Melissa Wilson and Katie Lewis. Her batting average was above .500 for much of the season, and she had a nice knack for finding a way to get on base. She also played a mean right field, robbing a lot of hitters of potential doubles with her quick first step and sure glove.

The Dragons will find a way to cope with her absence. Sophomore Rachel Clouse was moved to the leadoff spot, where her speed and improved bunting ability gives the team a new element at the top of the order. Few teams hit and pitch as well as the Dragons do, and this is still a team to be feared. Get well soon, Kelly.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Oakland Dragons debut season

The Oakland Dragons 12-and-under girls softball team had its season debut in an NSA tournament in Hartland, Mich., last weekend and came a way with a 2-3 victory, which included a victory in the consolation bracket title match.

After dropping their first three games, the Dragons rebounded with two mercy-shortened wins. Robin Roe and Bristel Brunnitt each picked up a win on the mound, while Nichole Woityra batted at a .417 clip over the weekend, which included five RBI and six runs scored.

Lisa McDonald also batted .375 at the two-day tournament, held at Tags Sports Complex, while teammate Kristen Larsen scored five times.

Car shopping online, grows in popularity

By Eileen McCarville
Staff Writer

Christmas presents, clothing — so why not cars? Shopping for a new vehicle these days is as close as your fingertips, via the Internet.

Car companies now have their own specialists who search for information over web sites, a convenience which means folks don't need to spend a whole day shopping at the dealership.

Mark Copland, a sales consultant/Internet specialist for Hines Park Lincoln Mercury in Plymouth, says he has been averaging sales of two to four vehicles per month. The most popular autos have been the Cougar, the Lincoln LS and the Navigator, a sport utility vehicle.

"I get a little bit of everything," he said. Potential customers can visit the dealership's web site at www.hines-park.com, or he can hook them up with a larger company web site. Copland started up the service over three years ago, but doesn't think shopping on-line will ever replace the feel of a new car.

So far it hasn't. While customers can pick it out, they still have to visit the dealership to sign contracts. "They've gotta show up here eventually," Copland said. "To come in and see the car, feel the car. We can't just drop the car off at their house."

Although it's somewhat successful, he gets more requests than actual sales, averaging about 20 "calls" per month. "Most of the people, I never hear from again," he said. "It is a lot of extra work because we get a lot of requests."

Online seller: Mark Copland sits at his desk at Hines Park Lincoln Mercury next to his computer with the dealership's homepage on the monitor.

Here's how it happens. Copland gets a phone call or an e-mail from a prospective client and connects them to a web site. He then conducts research to get the information they need, such as type of auto, color and, of course, a cost estimate. If it's been awhile in hearing back from them, "I send a reminder. The customer leads the sale from that point."

The last step, after he's heard back from them, is to sign papers before they walk out with the vehicle or a delivery is made. The good thing about shopping on-line is it's "non-confrontational," Copland said. "They don't have to do it with the dealer." Whether it's "truth or stigma," people don't have to face a pushy car salesman. Plus, they can shop at their leisure.

"It's like picking up the phone. But they don't use the phone. They don't even talk to you. Everything can be done by not stepping into the dealership."

On the downside is not getting the tactile experience of seeing the car in person and all those other things, like a test drive. However, "a lot of younger people are more comfortable with the whole Internet process. And there are people of any age who are searching on the Internet because they're just too busy to go somewhere," he said.

"You're talking about taking a whole day off — and you've spent your whole day visiting four or six dealerships."

Instead, you can shop till you drop from the armchair. "You can go on the Internet and visit four or six dealerships and get the e-mails back with the specifics," Copland said.

That's just what Pastor Tom Beagan of Northville did. He ordered a black Mercury Sable with all the trimmings a month ago. Beagan didn't have to leave the pulpit at First United Methodist Church where he preaches Sundays and works weekly. Nor did he have to leave home. "It was very convenient. I did it at night while the kids were in bed."

He started his search at Ford.com. "It asks if you want information, sends it to the dealer of your choice and they get back to you." The web site gave him a list of possible dealerships in his area, among them Hines Park. Online, Began communicated what he was looking for, including that he wanted to trade in his old Ford Taurus. In 24 hours he received an e-mail answer from Copland, the only dealer who "put together a price and a package. He found the exact car I was looking for. It was arriving from Atlanta."

Copland included all the add-on options. "I wanted a sun roof, chrome wheels and I wanted a CD player," Beagan said. The web site led him through all the choices, including whether he wanted to buy or lease, and for how long. He settled on a 36-month lease.

After that, Beagan just dropped by to sign papers. "I spent 45 minutes in the dealership and came back to pick it up ... I enjoyed (the experience)," Beagan said. "One, I knew what I'd be paying for it. And two, I knew who I was dealing with. The nicest thing for me was, the day I walked into the dealership I knew what it would be. It was just a matter of him (Copland) getting the car."

Over in Garden City, sales consultant Kurt Bair is also helping folks search for autos at Crestwood Dodge. The most popular vehicle he's researched has been the Dodge Dakota, a compact pickup. Bair has been helping people shop on-line for about three months.

"I retrieve and take the quotes, faxes and prices through various web sites," Bair explained. "They send me the customer and I respond." Bair is more negative than Copland when he sizes up car shopping on the Internet.

"Basically, so far, it's a flop. The point is, they still can't really buy a car over it. There's way too much inaccurate information," Bair said. For example, one customer searched for a new Dodge Dakota. The quotes weren't right and turned out to be higher than his price range. "He ended up coming here and he bought one a couple years old," Bair said, with a chuckle.

However, both consultants expect on-line car shopping to increase with time.

"It will happen as people become more comfortable and see how easy it works," Copland said. But, will there ever be a day when people can buy a car from start to finish — without visiting your friendly car lot?

"Well, I guess it depends," Copland said. "There's a lot of legal issues with signing contracts and social security numbers." Plus, clients worry about fraud. "People are still not comfortable about putting their credit card numbers on line." He also feels, currently, customers are burdened with too much "confusing" information.

"But, will we ever get there? I think there's a good chance. Maybe down the road."

Bair agrees that in today's busy society, people will continue to opt for the easy and the convenient — especially if they're familiar with the vehicle's track record. However, if you try to compare the impersonalization of the computer with a good, old-fashioned car salesman, well, that's another story.

"It will get better, but they're never going to be able to replace the human being," Bair said.

Hello! My name is...

Unique careers can be found in the restaurant industry

Personality is the key to landing a waitperson job in an upscale metro-Detroit restaurant," said Jerry McVety of McVety & Associates, Farmington Hills. His company has aided many in getting that "right" job in the restaurant industry.

Added to personality, McVety cites being friendly and articulate with an ability to read people's body language. "Being sensitive to customers leads to a waitperson's success, which can be measured in tips," McVety added.

"Prior experience is not necessary to become a server if a person has the attributes I've mentioned. A good server exceeds a diner's expectations. Servers have to love to serve.

"Theater and acting classes often help in developing a service personality which is attentive, but never obnoxious."

Tim Ward, senior managing partner at Morels in Bingham Farms and Duet in Detroit said "While it depends on the restaurant, top servers working 35 to 40 hours per week can earn $40,000 to $65,000 annually if their people skills are good." Both of Ward's restaurants are in the Unique Restaurant Corp. (URC).

After time, a good URC server can move to a management position. The company has an on-going Management in Training (MIT) program. "Those server's with patience, a strong grasp of people, pleasant temperament and no power tripping make good MIT candidates," Ward said.

Some fine dining restaurants consider it necessary to have a wine steward, or using the French term, sommelier, and even a Maitre d'. Master Sommelier and beverage Director for URC Madeline Triffon spots wine-interested servers and encourages them to become more knowledgeable under her tutelage. Landing that server position is where to begin this career.

Maitre d's are the exception at fine-dining establishments or private clubs. Years of service experience and being able to deal with people tactfully in stressful situations are the keys to this position. No amount of education will land you such employment, but a few psychology classes along the way may help.

In seeking upscale dining employment, don't stop at restaurants, consider private clubs. They run dining rooms for both service and culinary demanding members.

GEORGE HAYES

Q. I worked at one company for 17 years and, to be honest, I complained about my job almost every single day. Recently, however, I got a new position and it has turned out to be horrible. How many people make the mistake of changing jobs because they think the grass is greener somewhere else?

A. Why else would you change jobs? The only reason for leaving a known for an unknown is an improvement in dollars, culture, growth or personal gratification. I think the real question has more to do with why employees sometimes fail to recognize a good deal when they have one.

According to the cliche, familiarity breeds contempt. Most people start a new job full of enthusiasm. During the honeymoon, bosses tend to forgive minor mistakes. Associates are quick to give technical and emotional support. You aren't yet a member of any political faction and you haven't been given the scoop on the president's eccentricities.

Most importantly, you must focus on mastering new tasks and demonstrating your worth. You don't have the time or knowledge to be negative.

But things change. Once you've got a job down pat, you are free to look around and evaluate. It becomes easy to concentrate on perceived insults and inequities. The mind turns to what's wrong, and being mad often seems justified. The complaints of co-workers can make however, has employment positions if you like to cook.

"Love of food and its preparation are the keys to advancing as a cook," McVety said. "Without experience, an entry-level kitchen position pays about $20,000 to $25,000 annually for a 50 to 60-hour work week.

Jim Barnett, Corporate Executive Chef of URC said that with some kitchen experience, the annual salary is $25,000 to $30,000. But you can't bluff experience with the likes of Barnett because he gives the onion test.

To an aspiring prep cook, Barnett demonstrates how to chop an onion. He then asks that the potential hiree do it. If you've not used a chef's knife before, he knows in an instant.

While a culinary degree is not necessary, McVety advises clients to earn at least a two-year degree in a culinary program, such as those offered at Oakland Community College, Schoolcraft and Henry Ford. With such education, advancement from a prep to line cook and on to sous chef is possible. Such a position pays $35,000 to $50,000 yearly for a 60 to 70-hour work week.

Many top Executive Chefs in this area hold a degree from the Culinary Institute of America or Johnson & Wales and command salaries from $50,000 to $80,000 plus.

These execs and their upscale restaurant owners consider it a challenge and charge to train prep and line cooks for higher positions. With a two-year culinary degree and training under a talented executive chef, advancement without further education is very possible.

the situation even more emotional.

I don't want to discourage unhappy people from peering into the unknown and even changing jobs to improve their emotional or financial well being. However, many of us have made the mistake of leaving good jobs because we have blown some little problem out of proportion. Some people have left good marriages for the same reason. It's only later, after we've jumped out of the frying pan, that we realize we had it pretty good. People rarely recognize the good ole days when they are in them.

Be forewarned. If you change jobs, you will not completely escape politics, unusual people, distasteful and boring tasks, unrealistic expectations, miscommunications, unappreciative bosses and feelings of insecurity. These are givens. Now, you might adjust the degree to which these issues affect your life, but you will never eliminate them.

Have you ever noticed how little regard many people have for your time?

You become extremely aware of this when working on straight commission or for yourself. Complete strangers ask for favors, gratis, as if you had nothing else to do. Usually, they have no concept of the time involved or the disruption it would cause to meet their requests. Some are even offended when you tell them that you just can't do it right now or, worse, that you would have to charge them.

Family members, neighbors and community organizations are bad about it, too. While I'm usually happy to shovel snow for the guy next door, pick something up at the store for my dad or whack weeds at the local ball diamond, I resent any assumption that I will do such things. Why? Because the assumption discounts the value of the thing given.

This is what turns me off about many volunteer organizations. Once you put in a little time, it is assumed that you will be willing to put in more. My time is my property, not yours. I may decide to give it, but you have no right to it.

Better, cooler, cheaper

JERRY GOETZ

I have a few tips to make you more comfortable this summer and the operation of your air conditioner more efficient and cost effective.

Air conditioners have two primary jobs. The first is to remove the humidity from the air. The second is to lower the temperature.

Many people will feel most comfortable 70°-72° with 35-percent relative humidity. As the humidity increases, we begin to feel sticky, clammy and sweaty.

Sometimes people run their air conditioners during the day and turn them off at night and open windows. So humid outdoor air enters the home. In the morning as the temperature begins to rise, the air conditioner is turned on. Before it can begin to cool, however, the air conditioner must remove the humidity from the air. This is an inefficient use of the system.

I suggest the following: Watch the weather report. When the next day's forecast is for hot weather, turn on your air conditioner after the sun sets. During the night, the air conditioner will reduce the humidity and lower the temperature. The next day, as the temperature begins to rise, your unit will be able to efficiently maintain the temperature.

Or sign up for interruptible air conditioning service. The interruptions in electrical power are short and only the outdoor unit is affected. The indoor fan continues to run. This plan can save you 20 percent annually. Contact your heating and cooling dealer for details.

If you have a question or comment regarding this column or would like us to discuss a particular energy subject, give me a call at my toll-free number: (877) 349-4130.

Jerry Goetz of Detroit Edison's Residential & Small Business Marketing group has been with the utility for more than 40 years and is an expert adviser in home energy efficiency.

Apartments turn condo to save big bucks

Renovated: All the apartment-to-condo units at the Orchards of Canton have had major work done inside and out.

Lautrec brings the price of a home in Canton to under $100,000 with an apartment-to-condominium conversion.

More than half of the 82 units off Palmer between Hannan and I-275 have sold or been reserved since the former Brookview Village Apartments, built in the middle 1970s, were refurbished and renamed the Orchards of Canton last fall.

Prices start at $67,990 for the Fairfax, a one-bedroom, one bathroom lower-level unit of 650 square feet.

Other options include:

- The Carlton, a two-bedroom, one bath upper-level unit of 796 square feet for $86,990.
- The Barrington, a two-story townhouse of 920 square feet with two bedrooms, and 1-1/2 baths for $99,990.
- The Arlington, a two-story townhouse of 959 square feet with two bedrooms, 1-1/2 baths and garage for $119,990.

A limited number of Fairfax, Carlton and Arlington models are still available.

"We've really geared ourselves to first-time buyers," said Stephen J. Carson, director of development for Lautrec. "It's almost a turnkey situation. All appliances are included, all maintenance taken care of by the association.

"The mortgage on these homes and the maintenance fee in most cases is equal to the rent of apartment communities," he said. "It's really value that this particular project has."

Affordability is the biggest issue with prospective buyers, added Cathy Battle, sales representative. "They can see they're getting out from under rent payments and they have tax write-offs," she said.

"This is a very quiet, almost country setting," Battle said.

"Along with the golf course (Fellows Creek) across the street, quick freeway access (I-275 at Ford Road and Michigan Avenue) to get anywhere you need and the school system (Plymouth-Canton) push sales in this area," she said.

Canton's public library and Summit on the Park recreation center are a few miles away, Battle said.

Each unit at the Orchards of Canton, clustered four-to-six to a building, has a private entrance. Each unit has two assigned parking places out front.

The renovations of all units include new carpeting; new vinyl flooring, cabinets and countertops in the kitchen and bath; a complete interior painting; and new light and plumbing fixtures.

Townhouses will get a new range, refrigerator, microwave oven and dishwasher, the single-level units a new dishwasher and microwave oven.

Existing washer/ dryer, furnace, water heater and air conditioning in individual units won't be replaced. There are no basements.

All the roofs have been replaced, the aluminum siding painted and landscaping improved since Lautrec acquired the property last fall.

The Barrington, the two-story townhouse, is the most readily available unit.

The model features a living room, dining area, kitchen and half bath on the first floor. Two bedrooms, one with a pair of walk-in closets, the other with one walk-in, and a bath with a combination tub/ shower are upstairs.

The laundry is upstairs, and a patio is off the dining area.

The Orchards of Canton has sidewalks and playground equipment.

The property tax rate is $31.93 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price. That means the owners of a $100,000 unit would pay about $1,600 the first year.

The monthly maintenance/ association fee is $127 for a two-bedroom unit, $110 for a one-bedroom. That fee includes water, rubbish removal, lawn cutting, snow plowing, insurance and maintenance reserves.

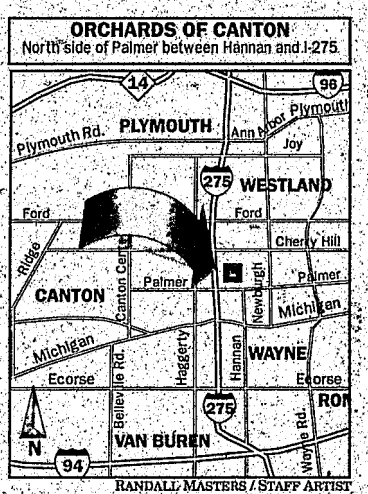

One dog or cat is allowed in two-bedroom units.

Bob Tupiak bought a one-bedroom upper, now all sold out, when he found that he could own for as much as it would cost to rent.

"The price was right. It's a good area to live in," he said. "The one I took over was in really good shape. I knew they took care of things.

"It helps me, as a first-time buyer, to be able to afford something," Tupiak said of the condo conversion. "For people starting out, singles, it's a great chance."

The sales office/ model at the Orchards of Canton, (734) 729-1100, is open 1-6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

Surrey Lake

Farwell, Michigan
All Sports Lakefront Ranch

OPEN SUNDAY
12:00 – 5:00
2908 Birch Isle, Farwell
$234,500

A serene lakefront setting surrounds this spacious 3,800 sq. ft., 3 bedroom, 3½ bath ranch style home that could easily become your weekend get-a-way retreat, your "dream" retirement property or your permanent residence. Located just 2½ hours north of Detroit, this fabulous lakefront haven is situated on 1½ professionally landscaped lots that slope to the lake. It is 15 minutes from Snow Snake Golf Course and Ski Resort and 12 miles from the casino in Mt. Pleasant.

The home offers the finest amenities thruout. You can enjoy panoramic views of the lake from a huge "Michigan" great room with skylites and ceiling fan. Get cozy on chilly nights around a circular fireplace in the family room. Cuddle up with a good book in the quaint living room. Or, cook your "favorites" in the fabulous island kitchen that adjoins a lovely dining area.

The 1,700 sq. ft. finished lakeside walk-out lower level has a recreation room, exercise room and a hot tub/spa area for your relaxation.

For your outdoor pleasure, there is a surround deck with gazebo, boat dock with seawall and the best Pike fishing around!

Other features include cedar closets, security system, generator power, central air, additional solar heating, a two car attached garage and much more.

For information, private showing or directions to the property, contact Julia Washburn.

Multi-level house showcases separate fronts

Originally designed for construction on a canal, the Covington is a multi-level home with two fronts: a street front and a canal front.

Fortunately, a canal-side lot isn't required. The plan's focus on exterior vistas will heighten appreciation of any attractive environment.

The main floor is a half-flight up from the three-car garage. Another set of steps climbs to a master suite, the only bedroom.

Up higher still, the unique Captain's Quarters sits like a crown above it all. Two cozy dormers there offer views to the rear, while a bayed observatory looks out over the street and to the right.

On the main floor, the great room cuts a wide diagonal swath extending from the bay-windowed front to window-bright kitchen, with plenty of space for a large dining table in between.

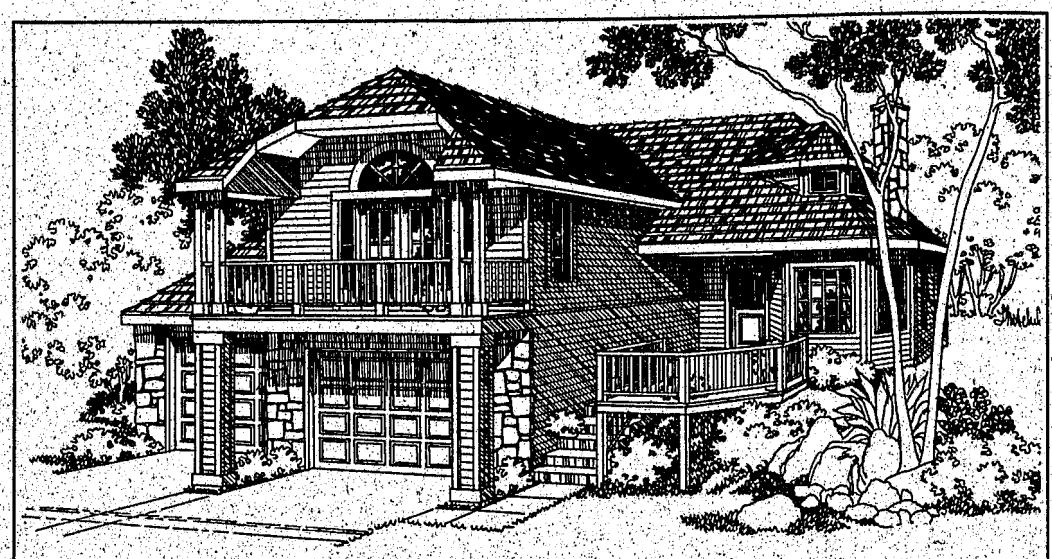

Off to the right is another naturally bright space, called the Chart Room. If you don't happen to need a whole room for maps, it can be furnished in countless other ways.

But those who use it had better like plenty of light because sunlight spills in through windows on two sides, as well as a set of skylights. Wide sliders provide direct access to the Fore Deck.

Notable features in the kitchen include a step-in pantry, work island with veggie sink and a built-in desk with shelves above. Utilities, a small bathroom and a sauna are nearby. Standing at the main sink, you face into a solarium, glassed top and sides.

The Covington's vaulted master suite is rich in amenities. It boasts two walk-in closets plus a skylit bathroom with two basins, spa tub and oversized shower. Double doors open onto a private deck.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $20 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Covington 30-131 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring 300 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Mowing techniques matter

(NAPS) – By following proper mower techniques, you can have the lush, green lawns you desire.

■ Maintain a regular mowing schedule to keep grass at desired height.

■ Mow when grass is dry for a cleaner cut.

■ Alternate mowing patterns to avoid uneven wear on the lawn.

■ Keep mower blades sharp.

■ Leave the grass clippings, which are 85 to 90 percent water, on the ground to return water to the soil and serve as mulch to keep the ground cooler.

Mortgage rates make sizable leap

Mortgage rates rose in the Detroit area last week, according to a survey of local lenders by www.HomeLoanUpdate.com:

■ 30-year fixed mortgages averaged 8.56 percent with 0.8 fees and points last week, up from 8.31 percent with 0.8 fees and points the previous week.

■ 15-year fixed mortgages averaged 8.21 percent with 0.9 fees and points last week, up from 7.97 percent with 0.9 fees and points the previous week.

■ One-year adjustable-rate mortgages averaged 6.94 percent with 0.9 fees and points last week, up from 6.92 percent with 0.9 fees and points the previous week.

One Year Ago the average 30-year mortgage loan was at 7.10 and 1.0 points and fees, 15-year mortgage loan 6.71 and 1.0 points and fees and one-year ARM loan 6.71 and 1.1 points and fees.

Results of future Producer Price Index and next week's Consumer Price Index will give us a better idea of the depth of inflation, which will have a direct effect on future mortgage rates.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"FACTORS THAT AFFECT VALUE"

If you plan to purchase a home in the future, keep in mind the factors that will most affect the value of your real estate when you decide to resell it to someone else. Listed below, in order of importance, is my opinion of the vital facts that buyers consider:

LOCATION

Nothing impacts value more than location. What is the reputation of the local municipality? How about the local school system? Another aspect of location is the type and condition of surrounding properties. Their value and quality of maintenance will have a direct bearing on the value of the property being considered. If you are looking at a single family detached dwelling, it is most desirable to purchase a home that is completely surrounded by similar properties of equal or greater value.

FLOOR PLAN

Some designs sell better than others. The most common and popular floor plan is the ranch style or one floor model that may or may not have a basement. The second variety is the two story that usually features the living areas on the main floor and bedrooms upstairs. Split level floor plans usually come in third place with the 1½ floor design taking fourth place.

FEATURES

After location and floor plan comes the specific features such as number and size of bedrooms, number and size of bathrooms. The master bedroom and bath can often be the deciding factor in the desirability of one property over another. The kitchen is also a key factor. If the existing kitchen is not up to date and equipped with modern appliances, the expense necessary to bring it up to today's standards could discourage a potential buyer.

CLEANLINESS AND CONDITION

Most buyers don't want to clean up or fix up a home after they buy it. Properties that are clean and well maintained ALWAYS sell quicker and for more money than others.

ADVICE: Use the advice and experience of a Realtor® when buying your next home.

Builder targets energy savings in spec houses

Shadia Martini, 34, is an inexperienced builder with an adventuresome spirit.

The Franklin resident, who earned an architectural engineering degree in Syria and a master of business administration degree from the University of Michigan, has three houses in various stages of completion at Palmyra Subdivision off M-15 in Independence Township.

The houses, two with a first-floor master, the other a colonial, range in size from 3,750 to 3,990 square feet and in price from $569,900 to $649,900. All sit on 3-1/2 acres.

"One is completely different from the other," said Martini, owner of Martini Construction. "I don't want them all to look the same. They all have a different floor plan, different brick, different roof.

"Custom homes need a lot of work," she said. "You try to satisfy a client. They want as much as they can get. Dreams are always bigger than reality.

"It's easy to do spec homes," she said. "You make decisions and the whole process goes smoother."

But it's risky, she conceded, to build in advance exactly what a buyer will want for half a million dollars. She buys existing plans and sometimes tweaks them herself or takes them to an architect for modification.

■ 'One home is completely different from the other. I don't want them all to look the same. They all have a different floor plan, different brick, different roof.'

Shadia Martini
builder

"When you build specs, you have to have some special things that will attract people, something not out there," Martini said.

She hopes to carve a niche at Palmyra by using an upgraded Energy Star package monitored by the Environmental Protection Agency.

That includes such things as insulated concrete form basements, energy-efficient furnaces and water heaters and extra insulation.

"It's just good for the house," she said. "It's an edge for marketing."

Martini, who also holds a real estate license, named her subdivision Palmyra after an ancient city in Mesopotamia ruled by a queen.

Martini's financing evolves from a business relationship with a bank, a well-to-do family in Syria and her husband, a doctor.

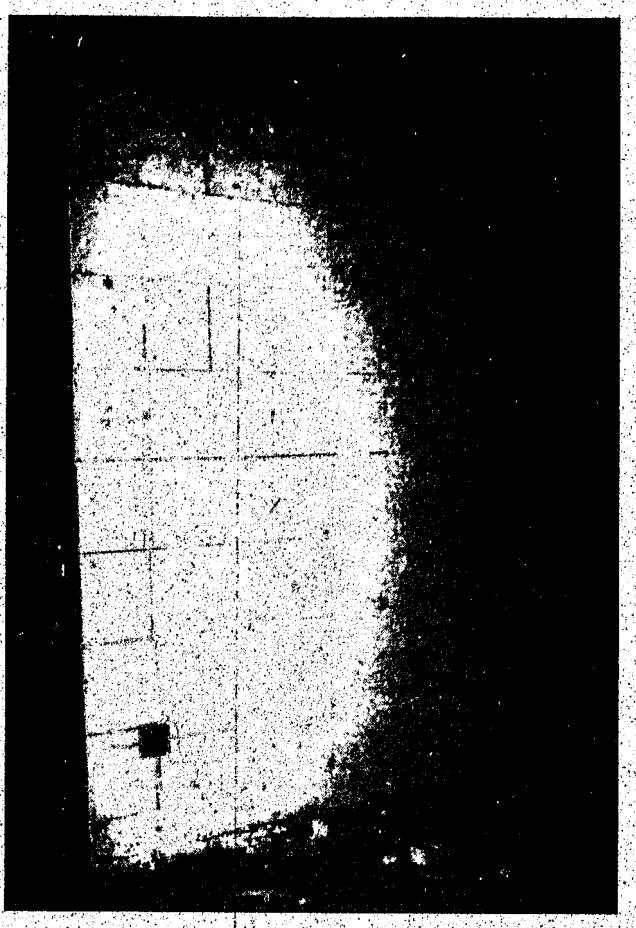

"The entire creation of a house is amazing to me," Martini said. "You see results in front of you very concrete."

She has built and sold just one other house, a story-and-a-half to Joe and MaryJo Oppedisano in Independence.

"We really liked the layout," Joe said. "She's been a pleasure to work with. She's taken care of any issues we might have. She really cares for what's going on."

There was a little concern initially buying a house from a brand-new builder, Oppedisano said.

"When I looked at the home, I could tell the overall quality was pretty good," he said. "I also had an inspection. He kind of verified what I thought – the quality was pretty good."

Tree trimmers may visit your yard

Detroit Edison's year-round line clearance efforts continue in more than 40 communities with the arrival of spring storm season, when lightning and strong winds can blow branches and entire trees upon power lines.

Detroit Edison will spend $46 million this year to trim tree branches away from power lines in Southeastern Michigan.

The utility trims an average of 800,000 trees each year to reduce the potential for power outages and help ensure safe, reliable electric service for customers. Line-clearance crews maintain a 10-foot clearance between tree branches and power lines.

"Up to 80 percent of power outages are caused by tree interference," said Ron May, Detroit Edison vice president, Energy Delivery and Service. "We can't impress upon our customers enough the importance of line clearance work, but also the importance of planting trees away from power lines."

Downed power lines, which also can result from contact with tree branches, pose safety hazards.

Adults should remind children to stay away from fallen power lines and anything they're in contact with because they are potentially life threatening.

In addition, pet owners should check their yards and the neighborhood for potential hazards before letting their dogs or cats outside after summer storms.

May said that line-clearance work also helps avoid low-voltage or outages caused by trees in contact with power lines during normal weather.

Detroit Edison's tree-trimming crews follow International Society of Arboriculture standards, which are designed to maintain the health of trees. Detroit Edison, for the fifth consecutive year, received the national Tree Line USA award from the National Arbor Day Foundation.

The award recognizes utilities that have a program of quality tree care, train workers annually in quality tree-care practices and have a tree planting and public education program.

Detroit Edison removes from customer property the branches and debris that result from its line-clearance program. In addition, the utility's crews cut larger tree limbs for use as firewood.

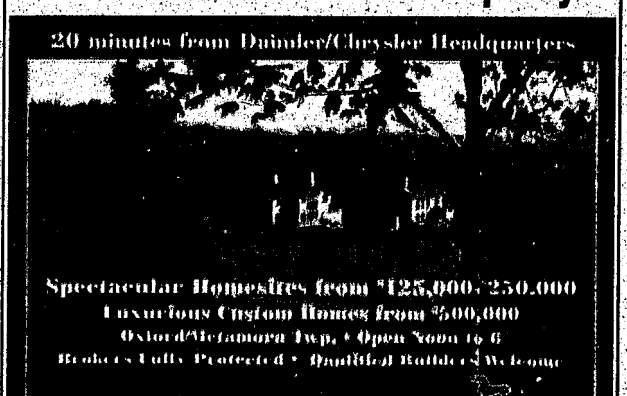

During a storm restoration process, however, unscheduled emergency tree trimming sometimes is required to facilitate the safe restoration of electrical service. When trees have been uprooted or large limbs have fallen and interrupted electric service, customers have the responsibility to remove tree debris resulting from emergency restoration activity.

Customers also have the responsibility of keeping tree branches away from the power lines that run from utility poles to their homes.

In May and June, line-clearance crews will continue or begin work in the following communities:

Birmingham, Clawson, Farmington Hills, Franklin, Groveland Township, Hazel Park, Pontiac, Royal Oak, Troy, Waterford Township, West Bloomfield Township.

2 new courses to debut in area

By Michael P. Shiels
Special writer

National Golf Foundation statistics in recent years have indicated that the growth of golf in Michigan is virtually unparalleled. New golf courses are being built all over "the mitten," and demand for tee times at new and at existing golf courses is consistently high.

The good news for Oakland County golfers is that two much-anticipated new golf options are slated to debut this summer, and when the curtain lifts, there should be plenty of "oohs and ahhs" along with the increase of available tee times.

"Shepherd's Hollow Golf Club, in Clarkston, will be a 27-hole, daily fee golf course that golfers will receive about," suggests Dave Richards, President and CEO of Birmingham's Golf Marketing Services. "The terrain in that part of Oakland County is like northern Michigan. The course will not have a weak hole on it."

Shepherd's Hollow received its' name because the rolling and wooded piece of land it is built on near I-75 was leased from an order of Jesuit priests.

Toledo architect Arthur Hills, who designed the course for Rochester developer Mike Bylen, reportedly characterized the landscape as a perfect piece of unspoiled inland property. Bylen currently operates the popular Pine Trace Golf Club in Rochester.

The work of Arthur Hills is well known in the golf industry. Some of his better-known work in Michigan includes Bay Harbor Golf Club, the dramatic 27-hole stretch overlooking Little Traverse Bay in Petoskey. Bay Harbor, opened in 1998, features five holes that play through a rock quarry, but Oakland County residents who want to experience quarry golf needn't travel all the way to Petoskey because a quarry golf experience will open right here in Oxford this summer.

Jim Dewling, current President of the Michigan PGA and developer of the Michigan Grand Golf Trail, plans to open Boulder Pointe Golf Club, a 27-hole public facility.

"Boulder Pointe is being built in a huge, old mining quarry," Richards reveals. "It'll be very rugged and dramatic, with unique and unforgettable quarry holes."

Boulder Pointe will be located on M-24 just one-half of a mile north of Oxford. Dewling, a strong advocate of daily-fee public golf, is probably best known for his 27-hole Mystic Creek development in Milford. The Boulder Pointe Golf Club, which he designed with Pat Conroy, will feature the same management philosophies that golfers have come to enjoy at the other Total Golf operated properties, Winding Brook GC, Timber Trace GC, Highland Hills GC, Thornapple Pointe GC, Beacon Hill GC, Brentwood GC, and Metamora G&CC, and Mystic Creek make up the rest of the Michigan Grand Golf Trail.

"We probably best exemplify my philosophy at Mystic Creek," says Dewling of the 27-hole golf operation he and Conroy developed and designed from the ground up at Camp Dearborn in Milford.

"Players drop their golf bags right next to the practice tee and are moved very quickly and comfortably out to the golf course," Dewling explains. "Because we were able to design every aspect of Mystic Creek, we were able to incorporate features that make it easy for the employees to make the operation work, and for golfers to get the most from their experience."

Dewling suspects that Boulder Pointe will be popular, not only because of the high level of service, but because of its' special location and features.

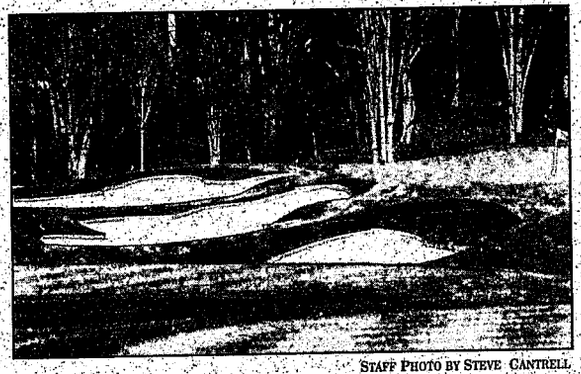

"Elevation changes, an abundance of hardwoods, and natural water are the things that will drive a magnificent golf course," says Dewling. "Boulder Pointe has each of those qualities."

Shepherd's Hollow and Boulder Pointe are two brand new quality golf experiences awaiting Oakland County golf enthusiasts eager to be among the first to peek behind the curtain.

Golf products continue to develop

BY MICHAEL P. SHIELS
SPECIAL WRITER

As winter's gray gives way to the sunshine of spring, it's time to equip yourself for action. The color of spring is green, as in grass, and the best use of grass yet invented is hitting golf balls off of it.

The golf industry continues to develop new products and equipment to help you enjoy the game and make your scorecard a little bit easier to total. The new high-tech toys, bells and whistles included are on display at your nearest golf shop.

Herb Vader, 51, of Troy has owned the Pro Golf Shop on Woodward Avenue just north of 11 Mile Rd. in Royal Oak for the last four years. The Pro Golf chain of golf shops, headquartered in Farmington Hills, now boasts 170 stores worldwide. With 4,600 square-feet of retail space, Vader has plenty to talk about, including the latest and hottest new equipment.

There is no feeling quite like gripping a new club in one's hands and Vader says there are some very attractive options.

"Taylor Made is offering a product called 'Super Steel' irons and woods. They're made from a stronger and lighter steel," says Vader.

"The outer wall of the club is thinner, giving the manufacturer an opportunity to make the inner portion of the club thicker, which is supposed to create a 'spring effect,'" he says.

The heads of the Super Steel woods are a deeper, richer copper color than previous Taylor Made woods, and the ultra light bubble shafts are black cherry in color.

Vader says that Ping has released new I-3 irons, and Spalding has taken a more traditional approach to its new Hogan Apex blades. You cannot talk about modern golf equipment without making mention of Callaway, which is offering new Steelhead X-14 irons, which feature a redesigned weight distribution to help ball flight.

"Callaway's Steelhead Plus driver and fairway woods have a very different look than previous stainless steel Callaway woods," says Vader. "The new Steelhead Plus driver has a very attractive and striking dark blue head."

Vader also beams about the new dark green Tour Edge Beta/Ti driver, which he says is a very moderately priced, user-friendly option for entry level golfers. The new Tour Edge Liftoff Driving Iron is also new to Vader's shelves, and all of the clubs in the shop may be tested out in Pro Golf's hitting nets. A computerized swing analyzer can also help sales associates fit golfers with the right type of equipment.

Whatever equipment you choose, you've got to get the ball in the hole, and using the right ball can help you do that.

"Callaway has formed a golf ball division and now offers two types of product," Vader explains. "They wanted to keep it simple so they've named the ball 'Rule 36,' and it comes simply in a soft of firm variety. There are 35 official rules in golf, you see, and according to Callaway, 'Rule 35' should be to have fun! If you want the softer ball, you buy the blue version. If you like a firmer ball, you buy the red version. It's that simple."

The Callaway balls, which will be difficult to get for some time due to demand and production, are sold in sleeves of five and paired in 10-packs instead of the traditional dozen.

Vader says that while Titleist is still Pro Golf's best-selling ball, Taylor Made's "Inner-Gel" balls are selling quite well.

"It's a good ball with great spin," he insists, explaining the Taylor Made is also now offering a golf glove with flexible material in the knuckle area that allows for comfort and stretch. Advances have also been made in ladies' gloves, which feature cut out finger holes to allow fingernails to pass through and cut out ring slots for women who wear jewelry while they play.

"Datrek is really an up and coming company," Vader says of the high-tech golf manufacturer. "They're producing some very high-quality, attractive bags including something called a 'cart bag,' which has all of the pockets in the back so that they are easily accessible when the bag sits on a cart."

Vader says that Datrek bags are his biggest sellers, and moderately priced.

FootJoy has developed the new "Dry Ice" golf shoes, which is designed to better disperse the heat coming from a player's foot and therefore reduces sweating. The latest in soft spike technology, according to Vader, is a quick-lock system that locks spikes in place with one simple turn instead of the previously cumbersome threading system.

Gadgets are always aplenty in golf shops, and some of them really do work.

"SKB, a maker of hard travel bags, is offering a collapsible locker that fits in the truck of a car," says Vader. "It has neat little pockets for shoes, hats, and balls, so that everything doesn't scatter all over in the trunk."

Vader says that new spring-action ball retrievers are available, and that the head cover business is booming.

"Head covers shaped like dogs, cats, tigers, whatever you want," he grins. "There are hundreds and hundreds of individualized head covers available, including one's that bear the logos of colleges and sports teams."

Nice options: Pro Golf owner Herb Vader of Troy says there are some nice equipment options on the market.

Along with your fashionable swing should come a current wardrobe, and Vader says this year's "in" golf fashion look is very different from the understated taupe and beige colors that have been popular for the last few years.

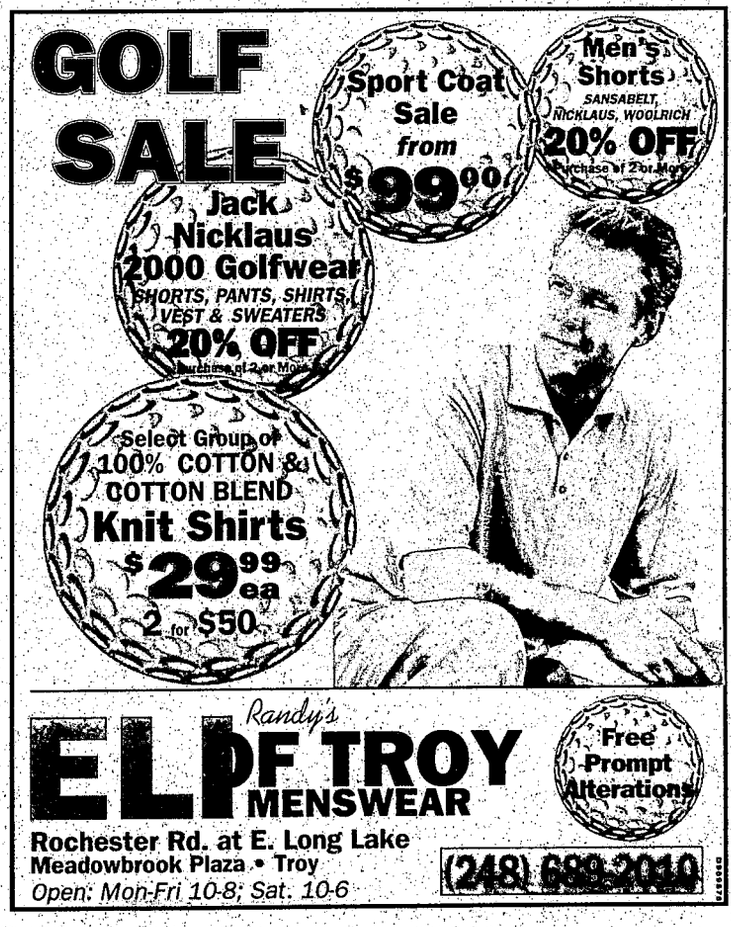

"Bright colored, flowered, Hawaiian-style shirts are now the rage," he insists, saying that the Tabasco sauce company is making some of the most sight after styles. You be the judge.

Summer hours at Pro Golf are 10 a.m. until 8:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. on Saturdays, with Sunday hours from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. Call Vader at (248)-542-3416 for more information on what is hot!

On stock: Whether you're a weekend golfer or a more serious golfer, bags of all styles and models are available.

Jim Dewling's job as a golf course architect is to take what Mother Nature gives him and refine it.

The end result is a product that is challenging yet playable for most golfers, environmentally friendly, aesthetically pleasing and, as often as the landscape will allow, unique.

Dewling is president of and a partner in the Milford firm of Conroy-Dewling Associates Inc., which specializes in the design and development of golf courses.

His company has three signature courses in southeast Michigan: Mystic Creek in Milford, Timber Trace in Pinckney and Boulder Pointe Golf Club in Oxford. The last is under construction and is part of a 1,400-acre residential development.

"The challenge is really the vision and the opportunity to create," Dewling said. "Of all the aspects of golf that I've been involved in, whether as a competitor or a manager of property, I think the most exciting and rewarding part is the opportunity to create and build something from nature's creation."

Dewling's approach to designing a course is to take advantage of all the natural characteristics of the land and make the best possible use of it.

"We work with the topography, as well as the vegetation, to come up with a routing and design that is enhanced by the features of land," he said.

"At the same time, we're delivering a product that is playable for all levels of ability without taking the hazards or that aspect of it out of the playability of the golf course."

Environmental concerns are a major factor in the design of a course and the No. 1 issue an architect has to deal with in building a course.

"Whether it be wetlands or woodlands, we work hard to protect all aspects of that," Dewling said, adding such work is done under the watchful eye of the Department of Environmental Quality.

The fast pace of urban sprawl makes the environment a concern in all matters where land is in demand, he added.

"Certainly, a lot of it is being driven by the fact we're using up a lot of sites in the metro area," Dewling said. "There aren't too many left. You have to go out farther and farther.

"Having been in the golf business a long time, there are areas I never envisioned that type of sprawl (would occur). But most people never envisioned Chrysler World Headquarters would be in Auburn Hills, either."

At the same time, there are natural characteristics of the land a course designer can use to his advantage.

"You're always looking for a specimen tree and situations that really enhance a particular golf hole," Dewling said. "In some situations, we've literally re-routed sections of a golf course.

"After you've laid it out on paper and get out in the field, you find something very unusual about a site or the vegetation or trees, and you work to take advantage of those situations."

An example of that is what Conroy-Dewling has done in building its 27-hole course at Boulder Pointe, which sits on

'Wood shafts might be better than buying 401(k)s'

South Carolina resident Gene Boldon, owner of Golf Trends by Gene, buys antique golf clubs at estate sales, flea markets and garage sales. He sells them at golf shows such as the one last March in the Novi Expo Center.

The former coach of golf, basketball and baseball at Oakland University 1968-76 is a walking golf club historian. And if you're interested in the subject, he'll talk about it at length.

"High tech is not all that it's made up to be," he said. "There's very little that's new in golf equipment. They just rehash it."

Looking for a good investment? Boldon said you could do worse than to buy one of his classic clubs.

"Wood shafts might be better than buying 401(k)s," he said.

To do business with him, call (864) 895-3421.

Orlick is a master of golf rules

BY MICHAEL P. SHIELS
SPECIAL WRITER

Birmingham resident Warren Orlick, 87, once again served as a Rules Official for the 2000 Masters Tournament held last month in Georgia. Orlick has been an invitee to the Masters Tournament for 46 years now, and was the first Golf Professional ever to be included on the Masters Rules Committee when he went to the Augusta National Golf Club in 1954.

"The Masters is the best organized tournament in the world," says Orlick, who says that the attention to detail paid by organizers or the Masters has been emulated by the other Major Championships.

"Even the sandwich wrappers at the Masters are green. If your should happen to drop it on the ground, someone appears behind you to pick it up immediately" Orlick smiles. Orlick donates his time as a rules official at the exclusive event, but is careful to note that he is not a volunteer.

"There are no 'volunteers' because there is no one to volunteer to," he explains. "You are either invited or you are not. Each year I begin looking forward to going to Augusta when I get my invitation at Christmas time! I make no plans until I find out whether I am invited or not."

Though he will not speak specifically of rulings he has made (Augusta National officials are sensitive about that) Orlick speaks glowingly about the golf course.

"The Augusta National Golf Club is the most beautiful place I have ever seen. The timing of the Masters Tournament is perfect because the flowers and trees in that part of Georgia are in full bloom," says Orlick, who says he developed a relationship with Clifford Roberts, the man who invented the Masters and sternly managed the club for Bobby Jones.

"As a member of the rules committee, one year I tried to convince Mr. Roberts that the golf course water hazards should be properly marked with colored stakes and red lines. Roberts was hesitant to allow it though because he was concerned that red and yellow stakes would disturb the beauty of the golf course for patrons and television viewers," Orlick reveals. "He finally saw the importance of having the hazards marked and allowed me to do so, but he insisted the stakes only rise two or three inches above the ground!"

On any other golf course, hazard stakes are knee-high, but Roberts fiercely guarded the pristine appearance of the Augusta National Golf Club. Roberts is said to have run the Augusta National Golf Club "with an iron fist in an iron glove," and nothing escaped his purveyance.

"I was in the Bahamas on vacation when a waiter brought a telephone to my table," Orlick recounts. "It was Roberts on the other end of the line, commanding that I have lunch with him."

"Mr. Roberts, how did you know I was here?" Orlick asked him.

"It's my business to know where everybody is," Roberts replied in his deliberate and slow drawl.

It turned out that Roberts owned a condominium in the islands and happened to be on the property.

Roberts' resistance to colored hazard stakes was indicative of his resistance to change, but change did occur at Augusta National.

It was fitting and proper that Orlick personally witness one of the tournament's most significant changes - 25 years ago when Lee Elder became the first black player to qualify to compete in a Masters Tournament. As a PGA Official, Orlick co-authored the removal of the word "Caucasian" from the Constitution as a requirement of membership in the PGA of America.

Orlick, former Head Golf Professional at Tam O'Shanter Golf Club in West Bloomfield, has been a Masters invitee since the days of Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and Byron Nelson. This year, his rulings were made upon the likes of Tiger Woods, David Duval, Jose Maria Olazabal, and Greg Norman, and he is as much a fixture at the Masters Tournament as pimento sandwiches and green jackets.

GOLF MOVIE REVIEWS

Sports Editor C.J. Risak and Special Projects Editor Ralph R. Echtinaw, a.k.a. Riscal & Echbert, review three golf movies:

"Tin Cup" (1996)

Echbert: As a lightweight, romantic comedy, this Kevin Costner flick is inoffensive (if you don't mind profanity and premarital sex) but not particularly memorable. Cheech Marin in a supporting role is more interesting that Costner's protagonist. Renée Russo and Don Johnson give uninspired performances. But the movie is worth watching if you're familiar with the CBS Sports golf crew. They're all here, and Gary McCord steals every scene he's in.

Riscal: The most cerebral of the five movies reviewed here, this film has an element familiar to all golfers – frustration. It features a golfing loser (played by Kevin Costner) who gambles everything to become a winner, even if it means losing to become one. That make sense?

Costner is at his best doing something he doesn't do much of – comedy. The movie is best described by one of Renée Russo's final lines: "Five years from now, no one will remember who won this thing, but everyone will remember what you did." It's kind of an awkward look at how sports heroes are built, and it's worth seeing.

"The Caddy" (1953)

Echbert: The humor of Jerry Lewis is not for everybody, and it's definitely not for me. But if you like Lewis' brand of slapstick you'll love this movie. It's easy to see why no one expected Dean Martin to amount to anything after he split with Lewis because he's not much of a factor here. As for the golf, don't expect to see a lot of it, but you might enjoy watching pro golfers Ben Hogan, Sam Snead, Byron Nelson, Julius Boros, Jimmy Thomson and "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper play themselves. And keep your eyes open for Nancy Culp, better known as Miss Jane of "The Beverly Hillbillies," in an uncredited cameo role.

Riscal: Of the five golf movies reviewed here, this one has the least to do with the game. I mean, comedy and golf may be strange bedfellows, but a musical comedy about golf? Whoa.

There are some special cameo appearances, like Hogan and Snead. And who was that doing the play-by-play for radio? That's right – Tom Harmon, the Heisman Trophy winner from Michigan.

To a minor extent, the movie examines tour pressures, this one Lewis' fear of playing in front of crowds. It also has that workingman/prodigy-turns-to-golf-to-help-save-the-farm theme.

If you're a Martin and Lewis fan, you'll like this movie. Otherwise, skip it.

"Caddyshack" (1980)

Echbert: I watched this movie again recently after seeing it for the first (and only other) time 20 years ago. It's funnier than I remember it being, maybe because I had the closed captions to help understand Bill Murray. If Harold Ramis, who wrote the script, didn't have Chevy Chase, Rodney Dangerfield and Murray in mind for the roles they played, it would be a huge coincidence. There's not much in the way of plot here, or golf either for that matter, but the movie is irreverent and funny. However, if you like your humor subtle and refined, don't bother.

Riscal: Wow. Now this is a real golf movie. Not tour golf, like the others. Country club golf. It has heroes, played by Chevy Chase, Rodney Dangerfield and Bill Murray. And it has not one, but two villains: Ted Knight and the gopher. What plot development! The pressure of the game, the snobbery of country clubs, the common guy (Dangerfield) challenging the establishment (Knight) – this movie has it all. Low-brow humor on a golf course make this a true film classic, especially if you appreciate the Three Stooges.

the site of an old gravel quarry and mining operation.

"The site has been reclaimed," Dewling said, "but there are certainly areas of the property left in a rugged state. So we have the opportunity to lay some golf holes where we've taken advantage of the mining operation, the gouges and disturbances of the earth that took place during the mining.

"At the same time, we've piled large mounds of clay and unuseable top soil in areas to create a mountain-like appearance in southeastern Michigan. As a result, one of the nines is called The Peaks. It has very steep grades and hills about 100 feet in height."

That is in keeping with the firm's desire to create situations in which the golfer can hit from an elevated tee position.

Another nine is called The Dunes because of the sandy nature of the terrain; the third is called The Bluffs, because it rises into a hillside and overlooks the other 18 holes.

The Bluffs is connected by a tunnel, which runs under M24 and is also left over from the mining days.

"The tunnel was in place for conveyor belts during the mining operation," Dewling said. "We gutted the tunnel and it will carry carts from one side of M24 to the other.

"With other courses we had the opportunity to work with forested areas and try to protect them. The Boulder Creek site had an abundance of boulders, so we used them.

"Mother Nature left us a lot of great things to work with. At the same time, the mining operation left us a lot to work with. We're taking advantage of both. The result is a golf course in southeast Michigan that is very unusual to what has been built (elsewhere). I think the public will accept it as being very unique."

The golf cart has also had an impact on course design. That was the case when Dewling's company built Timber Trace.

Following the 12th hole, golfers take a one-mile cart ride past a 100-acre lake to play holes 13-16 and make the return trip for the final two.

"It's an interesting challenge, but I'd say the public golfer absolutely loves it," Dewling said. "When they call for tee times, the No. 1 question they ask is, 'Is this the course with the neat ride through the environmental area.'

"Years ago what wouldn't have worked now works because of the golf cart. We've put the golfer on wheels, and the cart experience is all part of it."

Almost golf heaven: Traverse City

Vacationing this summer in Traverse City area? Don't forget to bring your golf clubs.

Finding a course is as easy as surfing — the Web that is.

Traverse City Area Golf features eight courses and two resorts.

Here is a sample of what you can find on http://tcwebguid.com/golf/

RESORTS

Crystal Mountain: Offers 36 holes of northwoods golf that take full advantage of the towering hardwoods and rolling terrain. The Mountain Ridge's signature hole is No. 5.

Shanty Creek: Home of Golf Digest's No. 1 Midwest Resort Course, The Legend, boasts 54 beautiful and challenging holes of the best golf in Northern Michigan. The Legend's signature hole is No. 7.

COURSES

A-Ga-Ming: Located in Antrim County and just minutes away from Traverse City, Charlevoix and Petoskey. The par-72 layout is spectacularly situated on high bluffs overlooking Torch Lake, considered to be one of the most beautiful inland lakes in the world.

Briar Downs: Located in Mesick, just 16 miles northwest of Cadillac. This course features rolling hills, creeks, ponds and trees. It's a golfer friendly course that is easy on the wallet.

Dunes: Located in Empire. A casual friendly course featuring 5,730 yards of relaxing play. Located in the scenic Glen Lake — Sleeping Bear Dunes Area.

Emerald Vale: This course in Manton, designed by Bruce Matthews, is a par-72, 5,100- to 6,800-yard layout with 120 fee of elevation change, broad fairways and spacious greens with numerous bunkers. Described as one of the best pure golf courses in the state.

High Pointe: Opened in 1989, this Traverse City course has been ranked among the nation's best in Golf Digest, Golf Magazine and GolfWeek. High Pointe was included in Golf Magazine's 1993 roster of 100 greatest course in the U.S.

Interlochen: Music to one's ears. One of the most scenic and lush courses in the Traverse City area. Interlochen is a favorite among local and resort golfers.

Matheson Greens: Located near the tip of the Leelanau Peninsula (in Northport), Matheson offers 18 championship holes of golf with a spectacular view of the Grand Traverse Bay. Check out hole No. 11.

Pincroft Golf Plantation: This Benzie County course overlooks one of the state's most pristine bodies of water, Crystal Lake, offering 18 lush and divergent challenges.

HARBOR SPRINGS CENTRAL BUSINESS DISTRICT - It doesn't happen often that a property with these features becomes available in Harbor Springs. Currently set up as two individual residential units with separate entrances, the lower level, where much of the original Arts and Crafts woodwork remains, would make an exceptional retail space. The upstairs, where the view of the bay is possible, would be perfect as personal living quarters or could generate income as office space or apartment. $299,000.
