Five Square Off in June 12 Election

by Mike Wilcox

Five candidates square off for a single seat on the Clarkston Board of Education on election day, June 12. The seat presently belongs to school board president David Leak, who has decided to retire from the school political arena.

Michael Barron, 34, of 9935 Dixie Highway, Springfield Township and president of a Troy construction firm said his background and concern make him qualified to become a school decision-maker. A Western Michigan University graduate, he taught school for two years before becoming president of Decender and Barron Structures, Inc.

Barron said the school system's greatest needs are "improvement of facilities and curriculum to meet changes of today's rapidly changing society inside of limited public supported budgets."

Concerned about the quality of education students are receiving, Barron said, "I've asked four or five businessmen of large companies and they say, quote, they (adequacy of students) do not even come close." Barron also said that additional classrooms and possibly new buildings at the elementary level are drastically needed.

Rockwood Bullard II, 33, an attorney with the firm Patterson, Patterson, Whitfield, Manikoff, and White, said, "As an attorney, decision making and the exercise of judgement and discretion are daily requirements...for the promotion of the well-being and future good of others. That, together with willingness and ability to commit time and energy to adequately prepare myself for the job, is what I offer the voters..."

A graduate of Clarkston High School, Bullard has a B.A. in English and a J.D. from a Boston school. He is a member of the Institutional Review Committee of Pontiac General Hospital and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

"The greatest need of the school district," according to Bullard, "is to continue to provide quality education."

He added, "The recently published results of the Michigan Assessment Examination show that Clarkston ranks well ahead of most Oakland County schools."

Bullard agrees there are space problems within the schools but said he must await reports from the citizens' advisory committee before he could make any conclusory comments.

Mary Jane Chaustowich, 41, of Springfield Township is a member of that Citizens Advisory Committee as well as the dialogue committee, Women's Club, PTA, Committee of 50, Clarkston Cooperative Nursery and the Independence Township Library Board. She said her involvement with these organizations have enlightened her a great deal about what people in the district think of their schools and what changes they would like to see.

Ms. Chaustowich, who holds a BA and BS from Wayne State, lists a lack of classroom space as the most pressing need facing Clarkston. "This problem has come about for two reasons," she claimed. "State mandated programs requiring classrooms and the new influx of people into the area are the causes."

She continued, "I feel there is a need to provide proper classroom space and to continue and further the enrichment programs now in effect."

Like Bullard, Ms. Chaustowich said she could not

Who Needs the Indy 500?

by Carol Balzarini

One of the Memorial Day weekend traditions in our country is the running of the Indianapolis 500. People come from all over to watch this one grueling race that tests both man and machine, and they spend a lot of time and money to do it.

For less money, less travel time, plus more than one race, local racing enthusiasts can have the WHRRI 15.

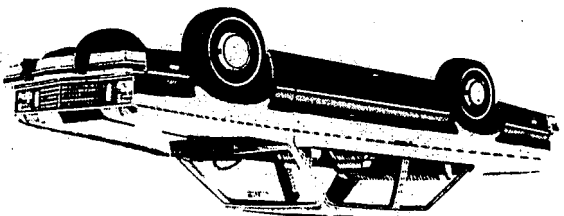

WHRRI stands for Waterford Hills Road Racing Incorporated and the 15 signifies ten laps around the mile-and-a-half track. And Memorial Day weekend is not the only one for racing.

WHRRI races are held the last full weekend of every month from May through September. There are seven races on Saturday, ten on Sunday. In its twenty-year history, only two have been cancelled, a driving school one April, because of snow, and one in August due to monsoon-like rains.

Located on Waterford Road on the grounds of the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club, the track features both hills and curves, thirteen of them, and challenges sports cars, formula cars, and showroom models alike.

A weekend of racing relies on some 100 volunteers for success. Some of them are families of drivers, some are friends, and some just plain like road racing. WHRRI attracts drivers from Ohio, Indiana, and Canada in addition to Michigan drivers. Two flags are flown and the Canadian national anthem is played in addition to our own.

Waterford Hills is one of the few road racing tracks in the state and one of the few in the country not privately owned and operated. In the opinion of the volunteer workers, it is also one of the best.

They'll tell you proudly that drivers get more track time for less money at Waterford Hills than most other tracks. They'll also tell you it's a low-pressure, relaxed atmosphere. Drivers race for trophies, not money. For most it's a hobby, they have no sponsors.

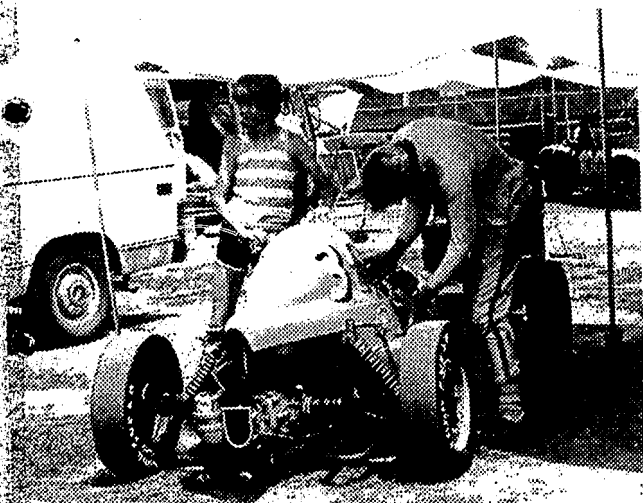

WHRRI is justifiably proud of its safety record, the majority of accidents result in injury to the machine rather than the man. Safety is stressed. Workers at all eight corners are in constant telephone contact with the tower. All are alert to signs of possible problems.

Racing officials were extremely cooperative in answering questions whether those questions may have seemed dumb or not. They also pointed out the best camera angles. Naturally, those were out in the middle of the track where the action was. It was small consolation that the barricades were substantial and ringed with rubber tires when they told me no one under eighteen was allowed out there. That either signifies the age of reason or that of a consenting adult.

During the very first race, one car spun out just after passing our corner on the first lap and another had a blowout soon after. As if that weren't excitement enough, I tried another corner later that had cars coming at you from both sides.

The top of the control tower was the best and the safest place to be from all points of view. The entire course is spread out around it and racing officials know exactly what's happening every minute.

For someone who was not a racing aficionado at the start, they soon had a convert. WHRRI officials even let this reporter and her twelve-year-old son ride in the pace car for one of the races. That was the clincher! We're ready to go back again next month.

There are a number of people who make fun of old
"saws" - those mini-lessons you find tucked in as fillers between "important" writing in papers and magazines.
What every writer knows, however, is that it takes hours of rewriting material and ideas to come up with the few exact words that put an idea across.

One of those little lessons that stayed with me as a child was a sign that my father kept above his desk at home. It said, "Quitters never win; Winners never quit." It made good sense, and I gave a lot of thought to it. What makes it so handy, is that it always pops into mind just at the point that I'm ready to give something up in a mood of agitation and frustration.

Now I know that many people feel that if anything agitates and frustrates you, you should give it up because life is too short to "sweat" it. I didn't learn about that until it was too late to change my habits, though. I'm glad I didn't, because there are too many things that I enjoy doing, and too many projects that I take pride in, as a result of not giving up when the going got rough.

It has always been "darker just before the dawn" when I've been busy working out a solution to some "thought problem" where personal relationships are concerned. When one has been working at any job, the tendency is to speed up the work process as one sees the end coming into sight. That automatically guarantees that you'll be tired and ready to call it quits just short of the finish line. That's when you need a little shot of energy, and "Quitters never win; Winners never quit" always gives me that needed spurt to get me over the finish line!

Another mini-lesson that has made a great difference in my life is "The truth will set you free." That one was a lot harder to figure out than the first one, and it took a number of years for me to fully understand it. It's kind of an advanced thought problem because you have to have a real understanding of what "truth" and "freedom" are, and you have to aspire to the state which they promise. That is, they promise maturity, but maturity demands courage and responsibility, and a certain state of "aliveness."

For the meaning of the "mini-lesson" one must examine the word "truth." In this case, consulting the dictionary will do no good. It requires a lot of soul-searching to know what is the truth of one's life, and what one merely "thinks" is the truth. That is the first difficulty in understanding. It is as if the mind and emotions are a maze, with understanding the reward of anyone who bothers to work their way through it. For those who enjoy mazes, however, I guarantee that understanding is at the other end.

Truth, in this instance has nothing to do with giving honest answers to others. You simply can't be sure you're telling someone else the truth until you can be absolutely truthful with yourself. That may be more difficult than it seems, so it's best to leave others out of the process for awhile!

The first questions you must answer, and it usually takes a great deal of mulling over, is what do you really believe about your existence? To answer that, you must free yourself of everything anyone has ever taught you.
I do not mean that you must disbelieve that which you have been taught. You simply must set it aside while you consider the conclusions you would draw from your own life experience if you had not been taught anything of other's thoughts, ideas, or beliefs.

That is much easier to do if you have a good memory, or if your parents are in the habit of remembering aloud about what sort of child you were. Looking at pictures of yourself as a child is helpful, too. Trying to picture yourself when you were much younger can take you back to what you were before a great many people interfered with your mind and emotions. Children gradually give themselves up to behavior modification, and the true spirit of the individual can get buried deeper and deeper in the memory, as the spirit of the wild becomes buried for a tamed animal.

The layers of modification on the human spirit are like layers of paint on a piece of furniture. You can take a not-too-good piece and do a lot for it with proper finishing, but you can also ruin beautiful lines and wood grains by putting layers of paint on them. The trick about getting at the truth about yourself, is to use sort of "x-ray" vision and discover whether or not you have been "improved" by external influences, or whether interference has prevented you from being what you are meant to be.

Joan
Allen

Feature Editor

If you really want to know yourself, you have to be objective in this study. My parents considered my "stubbornness" a terrible fault, and they tried every way they could to get me to fight it. As a result, I went to the opposite extreme, and avoided "making a fuss" about anything. The resentment I built up in the meantime, whenever I did not "fight for my rights" however,
became a greater problem for me than my stubbornness.

I lived with the resentment only until I had children of my own, and found myself encouraging their stubbornness, and praising them every time they stood up for their rights, even against me. The fact was that I admired and respected their honesty, and their spirit. It was then I realized that I was no longer called upon to please my parents, and I no longer had to play the "girl" role they had set for me. By that time, however, I was mature enough to modify the strength that had worried them, and I had learned control.

We all swing from extreme to extreme in the process of growing up. Each age and stage in our lives demands a different set of tools for adjustment. The problem we must cope with is one of "storage." There is a time and place which is appropriate for using everything we have in the storehouses of our beings. Just because someone made us put something away because it was inappropriate for one time and place, does not mean that we do not need to use it in another.

Unfortunately, however, we may have learned, over the years, that some things about us are "bad" according to someone else, and we have become so ashamed of those "bad" things, that we hide them from ourselves. We are no longer aware of the truth then, and playing hide-and-seek with ourselves becomes a necessity that complicates our lives.

Examining the facts of the situation, however, and being absolutely truthful with ourselves, even when it hurts, allows us to reexamine those things about ourselves which other people have felt were useless. We must keep in mind that they do not have to live our lives, and that they are in no position to make value judgements about our "equipment for adjustment" to our lives. We, in turn, must mind our own business, and allow others to work their way through their own mazes.
That will allow all of us to reach the truth sooner, and will give everyone a chance for freedom.

$100,000 Award For Information About Oakland Child Murders

New Oakland County child murder information is the objective of a money award program being implemented by the Michigan State Police, according to an announcement by Major Lewis Smith, commander of the department's investigative services division at East Lansing.

Smith said that a sum of $50,000 has been authorized by the State Police for use in the fiscal year ending September 30 in payment of any new information which leads to arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the four unsolved murders in the county in the years 1976 and 1977. This is in addition to another $50,000 tip fund established earlier to which the city of Birmingham and the Detroit News each contributed $25,000.

He said citizen tips and information may be given directly to the Oakland County Task Force which has been operating an on-going effort to solve the crimes.
This information may be telephoned to the Task Force by calling (313) 644-0400 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.
daily, Monday through Friday or by contacting any State Police post. Arrangements will be made for protecting the identity of any informant should that be desired.

Question Of The Week

LIMIT TAXING AND SPENDING?

by Sharon Springborn

Outgo rising while income plummets? Taxes, of all types, eating you up alive? Is that what's bothering you, Bunkie?

If so, maybe the proposed amendment to Michigan's

Constitution, putting a ceiling on the State's taxing and spending powers, will help relieve you of your pent-up emotions. And to judge by the responses of 10 Clarkston area residents, the proposed amendment would receive a lot of support. Eight people said that they would favor such an amendment, two were undecided, and not one vote was cast against a tax and spending ceiling.

The two people who were undecided were Mrs. Water LaPlante and Ms. Roseanna Lambert. Both of the women felt that they didn't know enough about the subject to answer the question authoritatively.

The one issue that angered many of the people questioned was the fact that they aren't asked or allowed to vote on an increase in spending and taxes. Ms. Deborah Quick feels quite strongly that if the state is going to need an increase in taxes, the people should at least be able to vote on it first, and Ms. Mary Hughes agrees with her assessment of the problem.

The quote, "The only things that are certain in this life are death and taxes," is totally in agreement with the thinking of Ms. Ella Jones, who thinks that we are being taxed to death. She feels also that taxes have been going up "too high, too quickly."

Ms. Bernice Jozwick agrees that taxes are too high, that the money from the taxes is being spent foolishly, and that we are using money for everything but what it should be used for. Road maintenance should be seen to and tax money should go toward this, she feels.

A stop on spending, and land used for recreation purposes and taken off of the tax rolls are the problems as seen by Ms. R. Kreger. She doesn't feel that all of the land, many thousands of acres, devoted to recreation, are really necessary.

Ms. H. Carlson didn't give any reasons for supporting a ceiling on taxing and spending, but she "just feels that it's right," while Mr. Gunter Edmonds feels that we'll be in bad shape if taxing and spending aren't curbed. Edmonds has always felt this way, but hasn't found a way to do something about it.

Ms. Margaret Byers supports bringing taxing and spending into a direct proportion to what a person makes. She tells a short story to give support to her views: "There is a story about a man who got divorced after 40 years of marriage. When he was asked why, he replied, 'Enough is enough,' and I think we've reached that point here."

HOW DO I MAKE A CONDOLENCE CALL?

To express your sympathies and console the bereaved, here are some logical "do's and don'ts" which may help you and the bereaved.

1. If you're not really sure whether you should make the call or not, then do it. The family is bound to appreciate it.

2. Remember, the purpose of the call is to express sympathy and offer assistance. Don't make it a long "social" event.

3. Make the visit short - unless the bereaved ask you to stay.

4. Dress neatly, tastefully; not necessarily in mourners' black.

5. If the bereaved wishes to talk, fine. Be a good listener!

6. A simple "I'm sorry about (the deceased)" is appropriate along with a firm handclasp or brief embrace.

7. Leave after offering to help or doing what you've been asked to do.

8. Call back in a few days; the family will appreciate your thoughtfulness.

We welcome your questions and comments privately, or publicly through this column.

Do Holly Schools Really Need 2 Mill Increase?

by Steve Dice

Another governmental agency wants to get their fingers in our pocket again. But maybe that statement is a bit too negative.

The Holly Area School system will be requesting a two-mill increase at the June 12 election. The board cites increased costs for services, materials and energy - inflation - as the reason for the request.

A property owner currently paying $1089.00 a year in property tax could expect to pay about $50.00 a year more should the millage be approved.

The school board has apparently been doing a decent job in keeping spending down. The percentage of increase, if passed, would be less than the rate of inflation.

As everybody knows, inflation constantly reduces spending power - a millage increase could conceivably justified to counter the effects of inflation.

But is the two mill increase absolutely necessary? The emphasis here is on absolutely.

Several weeks ago, an article appeared in another local paper listing some of the items for which the millage increase was needed. According to information included in that particular article, around half of the monies generated by the extra two mills would be used for improvements and/or alterations.

Since publication of that article, there has been no published statement directly refuting the information that appeared. When contacted by this writer, Mr. Bruce Mitchell, assistant superintendent, did not refute the previously published information, but pointed out that the published list was not complete and did not reflect the increased maintenance, service, and energy cost requirement. This information was alluded to in the most recent press release.

So the question is raised, is the millage increase absolutely necessary to maintain the current education standards or is it needed to continue improving the education standards in the Holly Area Schools?

This writer will be voting no on the millage increase request. I am not convinced that all the extra money is absolutely necessary for day to day operation of the schools. Governmental agencies must join business and unions in stopping inflation - inflation caused a great deal by higher and higher taxes.

Until our government can find a way to stop taxing the retirees and those on fixed incomes right out of their homes, I find it hard to justify any increase in taxes for any purpose. It's time for governmental agencies to bite the bullet, too.

Congressman Broomfield Reports From Washington

While there has rightly been a great deal of excitement over the recent Supreme Court decision making warrantless searches of workplaces by Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials illegal, business' problems with this government agency are still not over, commented Congressman William S. Broomfield (R-19th Dist.).

The Supreme Court ruled, in a case initiated by Bill Barlow, a small businessman in Pocatello, Idaho, that an employer can bar from the workplace an OSHA inspector who does not have a search warrant.

At the same time, however, the Court upheld the authority of OSHA inspectors to conduct unannounced inspections if they have warrants. Further, in getting a warrant, the inspector does not have to demonstrate probable cause, in the criminal-law sense, to believe violations of the OSHA Act exist.

"The central decision of the Barlow case, prohibiting warrantless searches, is a great victory supporting our Constitutionally guaranteed right of privacy.

"However, the other parts of the decision, permitting unannounced inspections, and not requiring the demonstration of probable cause to obtain a warrant, coupled with existing OSHA regulations and attitudes, means that small businesses, especially, still can feel the burdensome weight of OSHA on their backs," Broomfield said.

Since its inception in 1970, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has come under criticism for its inspection procedures. Small businessmen, particularly, have charged that bureaucratic harassment and picayune standards threatened their survival.

Several months ago, OSHA officials agreed that many of the agency standards were petty, and said they would institute a change in policy by concentrating on major health and safety problems instead of cracking down on small violations.

This decision by top OSHA officials came about two years too late for Bill Barlow, the owner and operator of a small electrical and plumbing installation business in Idaho. In 1975, protesting government intrusion into his life and business, he refused to let a U.S. Labor Department compliance officer, who arrived at his shop unannounced and without a warrant, check for OSHA violations.

The inspector then went to a federal judge, who issued a court order to Barlow to admit the inspector. But Barlow again refused to admit the inspector, and from that refusal, the litigation process resulting in the recent Supreme Court decision started, Broomfield explained.

"There are times when Americans must stand up for their rights, lest we let them slip away. Bill Barlow risked possible jail and costs of well over $100,000 in asserting his and that of all small businessmen's right of privacy.

"However, even with OSHA's change in policy and the Supreme Court's decision upholding the Fourth Amendment rights of businesses, meaningful progress in making the worksite safe without driving small businesses to extinction, will not be made until there is a real change in attitude on the part of the government. Cooperation and consultation, not harassment and threats, is the way to make the ideal of a safe and healthy worksite a reality, Broomfield said.

Mills to be Keynote Speaker

Former Congressman Wilbur D. Mills will be keynote speaker Saturday, August 5, for the 25th Anniversary of Brighton Hospital.

The hospital is one of the nation's first and leading facilities exclusively for the treatment of alcoholism.

Mills, for 37 years a congressman from Arkansas and himself a recovering alcoholic, has accepted an invitation to join in the 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. anniversary festivities at the hospital.

Hugh C. Vail, Brighton's Executive Director, said, "It is fitting that Congressman Mills, whose courageous admission of his own illness has encouraged countless others to accept treatment, should keynote our Silver Anniversary."

Nearly 8,000 former patients, benefactors and friends of Brighton will be invited to the anniversary festivities, with "Sharing the Joy of Sobriety" as the theme.

School Board Candidates

make her feelings known about overcrowded conditions until the Citizens Advisory Committee reported their findings.

Marc Cooper, 28, of Andersonville Road, Springfield Township, is a Clarkston High School and Detroit Bible College graduate. He currently is a sheriff's deputy for the Oakland County Sheriff's Department. An ordained minister, Cooper is associate chaplain for the Michigan Sheriff's Association, Christian Education Director for the Pine Knob Community Church and sexton of Andersonville Cemetery.

Cooper lists two central needs. "It is important to insure that our children are well-grounded in the educational basics...and it is essential that the school board work very hard to include community representation at the policy-making levels."

Cooper continued, "It is my pledge to express a philosophy which strongly supports continued improvements in local education."

Dr. Floyd Smith, 39, said he is particularly qualified because he has been in educational management for over sixteen years as Director of Transportation Services for Oakland Schools. "I am deeply interested in child development, the kinds of experiences we provide for our young people, and the planning and implementing of a continuing education program for the total community." He holds a BA, MA and PHD.

Smith, who resides at 6520 Amy Drive, claimed Clarkston needs are similar to most districts - proper financing and insuring citizen input.

He questions the adequacy of education because Clarkston Junior High is thirteen rooms too short to provide for proper educational experiences; there is not enough space for special education students; basics like art and music are not offered in lower grades; and meeting and activity space in many of the elementaries is not available.

In outlining possible solutions to alleviate overcrowded conditions, Smith said, "I would prefer a plan that offers us options of efficient facility utilization five or ten years from now if our enrollment trend changes." However, he added, it would be premature for him to suggest a solution when the Citizens' Advisory Committee is still assessing the situation.

From Principal to Pine Knob Community Director

George White Works to Solve Theatre's Problems

by Carol Balzarini

With the Pine Knob Music Theatre season off and running so, too, is George White, director of community real relations. White is starting his fourth year of working with the public and smoothing out any problems that might arise.

His position was created following a summer of "unrest in the community," according to White. Angry citizens, particularly those living close to the theatre, were unable to contact anyone in the box office to air their complaints and Music theatre personnel were too busy running the theatre itself.

It was suggested to Joey Nederlander that someone be hired to work with the community on behalf of Pine Knob. White heard about the availability of the position, applied, and was hired. He had previously worked with the theatre in a number of jobs from supervising ushers to helping out in the box office. He could also be sympathetic to the problems encountered by those living near the theatre because he, himself did at the time.

Although the season began only last week, White has been working for the past six weeks after school (White is assistant principal at Sashabaw Junior High) and evenings. He has been assisting in getting season tickets for those who live in the immediate neighborhood by having them order in a block and trying to get good locations for them. Their children also get hiring preferences and they all get special consideration for individual tickets.

Special telephones have been installed in both White's home and in a trailer at the theatre to receive complaints or to give information. The trailer takes calls from noon on while White will answer the phone in his home when he is there. The special number is 394-0122.

White says the types of complaints received deal mainly with noise and traffic, both of which have improved considerably in the past few years.

A limit of 55-decibels has been set although some people still think that is not low enough. White says normal traffic can be measured anywhere from 60-80. Any time he receives a noise complaint, no matter what the hour, he goes out with two decibel meters to check it out. One meter belongs to the township and one to Pine Knob.

White also explains that atmospheric conditions play an important role in the noise level. Different shows on different evenings can register different levels. Sound is affected by wind direction, cloud cover and even humidity. White himself went over one night to see if the rock group Chicago was there because he couldn't hear them at home. Another time residents on Allen Road complained of a noisy party which turned out to be a Pine Knob concert instead.

Traffic problems continue but so do efforts to solve them. White finds traffic control more successful in the hands of the Independence Township police department because "they made it a higher priority" than the sheriff's department. He stresses that the county people are always in the area, however, and can be relied on for traffic assistance when needed.

White also feels that "people problems" have diminished a great deal now that so many season tickets are being sold. Patrons are "more together," according to him, now that they have to plan ahead.

At one time, youth attractions were maybe 3,000 in season tickets and 7,000 at the box office. Now this year, the 5,800 pavilion seats are all sold and 5,000 lawn seats are half gone. Most people buy the season tickets and sell the individual concert tickets they're not interested in, White said.

White also emphasizes that Pine Knob is the biggest youth employer in the area providing well over 300 jobs for local kids. Independence Township kids get preference in hiring.

The situation at Pine Knob can be pretty well summed up in the fact that with a sellout performance close to 11,000 people are at the theatre. That represents about 50 percent of the population of Independence Township moving in and out of the theatre in an evening. Recent successes in dealing with those crowds come from a lot of cooperation from a lot of people from music theatre personnel to the police department to the patrons to the community. And efforts continue to improve the situation.

Tips for Pool Users

Oakland County Division of Health recommends the following tips be followed in order to reduce the chance for accidents and the spread of contagious disease while enjoying your pool this summer:

1. The use of the pool should be restricted to the members of one family. Children should never be left unattended. Children should not be allowed to stay in the pool until they become chilled, it lowers their resistance to infection.

2. The water in the pool should be kept clean. Dirt in the water prevents disinfectant from reaching bacteria to destroy them. Make sure clean apparel is worn by the users of the pool. Be sure the pool filtration system is in good operating condition.

3. Metal and glass objects, soap, food-stuffs, pets, leaves, etc.; tend to create accident hazards or use up the disinfectant, and should be kept out of the pool.

4. Good disinfectants can be found at most hardware and pool supply stores. Use exact amount recommended for your size pool. Too little disinfectant is ineffective and too much could be harmful.

Channel 56 News

Playwrights and authors share the spotlight on two of the continuing daytime series on Channel 56.

At 12:30 p.m. Monday, June 12, Judith Rossner, author of "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" and the current bestseller "Attachments," joins other women writers on "Turnabout." (A captioned version of "Turnabout" for the hearing-impaired is shown Saturdays at 5:30 p.m.).

The next day in the same 12:30 p.m. time slot, playwright, novelist and screenwriter Garson Kanin ("The Diary of Anne Frank," "Funny Girl" and "Adam's Rib") joins host Bob Cronie on "Book Beat."

On "Turnabout," with host Gerri Lange, Ms. Rossner will join writer Ann Rice ("Interview with a Vampire") and chairman of the board of Dell Publishing Company, Helen Mayer, for a discussion of the role of women in contemporary literature.

The program also focuses on the work of Carol Lee Sanchez, a poet whose multi-cultural background - American Indian, Spanish and Lebanese - enables her to create a bridge of understanding between people of all kinds. Sybil Schneller, who published her first book of poetry at age 89, also guests on the program.

On "Book Beat," Garson Kanin talks with Bob Cronie about his latest book, "It Takes a Long Time to be Young." Kanin, who for years has been one of Hollywood's most successful writers, discusses his past and takes a look into the future with a witty argument against forced retirement.

"Welfare," the movie the National Observer called "an overwhelming indictment of a bureaucracy gone mad," will be shown on Channel 56 Saturday, June 17, at 11:00 p.m. on "Film Festival with Paul Winter."

"Welfare" is the first in a series of Fred Wiseman films that will run for three consecutive Saturdays. On June 24, the Wiseman movie will be "Meat" and on July 1 it will be "Canal Zone."

"Welfare" concerns the clients and administrators of a New York City welfare center. The movie shows the confusion and intricacy of a welfare system which by its very size requires both clients and workers to move through a maze of interlocking bureaucracies.

The people in the movie are a mixture of American society - white, black, Hispanic, young and old - and the words and actions recorded in the film reflect their anger and their frustration in the face of massive red tape.

As with all of Wiseman's films, "Welfare" was filmed in black and white and has no commentator or narrator to explain the events filmed.

Lawyer turned filmmaker, Fred Wiseman made his first film in 1967, the controversial "Titticut Follies," filmed at the Massachusetts State Hospital for the Criminally Insane. Wiseman has won several Emmy Awards and has been called "TV's only great documentarian" by Time magazine.

Know-It-All Grow-It-All

by Bonnie Hale

Scheffleras, also known as Australian umbrella tree, Queensland umbrella tree and octopus tree originate from Australia. Although they grow 20 to 25 feet in the wild, the schefflera can easily maintain a height of 10 to 12 feet indoors.

The small schefflera bears leaves only 2 to 3" wide with three to five tiny leaves per stem. As the plant matures, it changes dramatically, eventually developing up to 16 leaves per stem with each leaf being 4 to 5" wide and 12 to 14" long. Most scheffleras, when purchased are 2 to 4' tall. The leathery, glossy, dark green leaves form finger-like "umbrellas" on the main stem. As the plant matures, the slender stem takes on a trunk-like appearance.

Scheffleras are ideal plants for sunny windows where they will receive four or more hours of direct sun a day. They will also grow in bright, indirect light, although the rate of growth will be considerably reduced.

If grown under artificial lighting they require 800 foot candles of light a day for 12 hours a day. Scheffleras prefer a day time temperature of 80 to 85 degrees which one would find in the immediate area of a sunny window.

When the soil is moderately dry, thorough watering is needed. Moderately dry means when the soil is almost but not quite bone dry.

Propagation is from air layering done in the spring and summer months. Over-crowded plants can be divided any time of the year.

Scheffleras are moderately fast growers and should be fed on a monthly basis from April through October unless they are being grown under plant lights. In that case, they should be fed all year round.

I have yet to see a schefflera that at some point in its life didn't have spider mites, my own included. Since I haven't had any problem with mites in over a year, I think I have the problem licked, although I still keep a watchful eye.

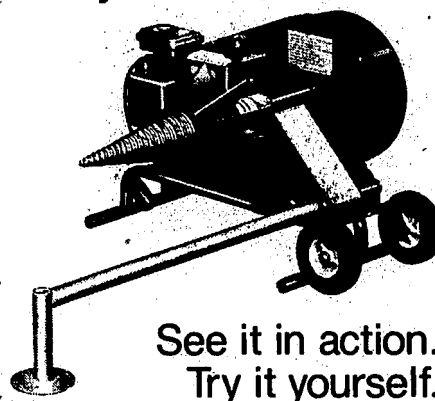

When purchasing a new schefflera, wash every leaf with a soapy cloth, concentrating on the undersides of the leaves where mites nest. If mites persist, place the plant in a plastic bag with a no-pest strip for 10 days. A systematic insecticide (available at most garden centers) will last about three months. Any time another infestation takes place, treatment is required again immediately.
