In that stretch of I-75 between M-15 and M-59, we counted a half dozen abandoned cars, nearly as many garbage bags, and other assorted litter. This was in addition to countless numbers of drivers exceeding the 55 mph speed limit. Doesn't anyone bother to clean up or patrol the highway anymore? Where are all our law enforcement officers?

What is the world coming to? Now the Independence Township Fire Department can't respond to an emergency situation without bringing extra people along to guard their equipment. Seems some light-fingered person (or persons) helped himself to Captain Bailey's municipal pickup while he was trying to extricate people trapped in the damaged auto.

"Is that what you're designing these days?" a member of the Clarkston Historical Society yelled at Russ Inman, architect and president of the Clarkston Village Players. "Yes," he yelled back, "I hear the historical society will preserve almost anything." The CVP float in the Fourth of July parade featured an outhouse.

All the ballyhoo over "Grease," the 1950's musical starring heartthrob John Travolta and pretty Olivia Newton-John was rather disappointing to your Whys and Wherefores critic. The music was good, the plot was so-so, but the plot was overly simplistic and strung-out. Another first run, but less than first rate flick is The Cheap Detective. With nearly two big name stars in cameo appearances, Neil Simon comedy was too "corny" for this critic.

It's taking a terribly long time for political races to heat up. Only the tax propositions have generated excitement. There's almost as many political signs from two years ago still nailed to trees and utility poles as current signs. Your Whys and Wherefores reporter, in a short drive last week found signs advertising state representative, county executive and county commissioner candidates from the 1976 elections still in place, just as they were put up two years ago. There ought to be a fine for the kind of garbage.

Local Businesses Deserve Your Patronage

Owning and operating a small business is one of the most difficult occupations. Probably, the only thing more difficult, is just beginning in that new business.

Yet those same people, the established small merchants and their newcomer peers are the lifeblood of all small communities.

People always turn to the small businessman for financial support. It's he who donates to every 4-H, scout, and community group that asks for a financial donation.

Yet, many people take the small merchant and his donation for granted.

It is particularly easy to take him for granted in this area, because bigger and prettier (sometimes even cheaper) shops are only a few minutes down the highway.

Merchants, especially those that are new, find it hard to compete with and lure their share of customers from the city chains.

Sometimes the pizzas take a little longer to deliver. Sometimes the prices may seem outrageous. There may be even times when the service is lousy.

But all those are problems that could be encountered anywhere. You can't find shopping utopia in a large city.

But you can find a number of advantages by doing your shopping locally. If you have a problem with a product, you can rest assured you can get immediate attention from your local shopkeeper. Service is much more personal because many of the merchants in a small town are your friends and neighbors. And if you ever need a special order or favor, most local merchants will make every effort to fill your request.

Your local merchants are good, honest, hard working people. They're an asset to this community and deserve your support. If they don't get it, they won't survive and if they don't survive - well, it may not matter to you, but it will cause a lot of grief and headaches for some very fine people.

Use Surplus to Pay Off Sewer Mess

Taxpayers, voters, Board Members:

How is Independence officials to spend that nearly 1/2 of a million dollars which is burning a hole in the township treasury? Pay it all on that mess (sewer costs other officials got us into years ago) that is costing us an additional 2 mill in ad valorem tax spread over the whole township whether the property has sewers or not and won't be getting them either.

Instead of "buying" something else, pay what has already been bought but not paid for yet. Bring down principal on the sewer-mess debt to stop the 2 mill ad valorem tax sooner.

Our five present officials:
Floyd Tower, Supervisor
Chris Rose, Clerk
Betty Hallman, Treasurer

Jerry Powell, Trustee
Fred Ritter, Trustee

should spend our tax money as carefully and as fiscally responsibly as they would their own money.

Pay our debts before new playthings for some groups who are pressing for pet projects.

Think of the chance to prove to all voters and taxpayers, that these Independence officials have learned from the mess other officials caused by being pressured into believing about those sewer costs (that had to be raised to people in the sewer districts and to all the rest of us who have to pay for sewers we don't have).

It is no wonder taxpayers are revolting.

Just One of Those Days

Condominium living has its advantages, but it can cause problems for dog lovers in more ways than one, as a flustered matron claimed recently.

The lady in question has a black Labrador Retriever of which she is very fond, and the dog is so well-trained that her owner doesn't find it necessary to walk her on a leash.

A few weeks ago, she learned her lesson though, when her dog took off after a cat, and disappeared around the back of a unit some distance from her own.

The unhappy owner called and whistled to no avail, and finally went after her disobedient pet.

As she turned the corner of the building, she was amazed to see her dog standing inside the kitchen of a unit, looking at her through the screen door. She called to her to come, but the dog made no move to obey, so she pulled the door open and was taking hold of the dog's collar, when she heard an amazed voice from inside say, "Hey, what do you think you're doing with my dog?"

Our matron said, "Your dog?" in a voice that dripped with sarcasm.

The woman inside suddenly gasped, as an identical Lab, with an identical collar, suddenly appeared in the yard behind the woman.

To make a long story short - the two women discovered that their dogs were of the same litter. The collars had been presents from the kennel owners, who had bought them in quantity.

It was "just one of those days" for the dog owners, but it may turn out fine, since they have so much in common - and, as our dog lover says, "That's one way to meet your neighbors!"

HOW DO I GO ABOUT RETIRING?
Unlike Frank Sinatra, you will probably retire only once. Here are a few tips that may help:
Don't burn your bridges behind you, such as selling your home and running off to sunnier climes the day you retire. You might not like it there and then be sorry you moved so fast. Test it out first on a temporary residence basis.
Easy does it! It's better to retire slowly and gradually. Begin early. Think and plan about where you live, what you'll actually do and when. Gather FACTS about your future - not emotion.
Estimate your income at retirement and how you will supplement it if too low; also how to use it to your best advantage if it is ample.
Remember that at retirement you cannot make too many little mistakes and ANY big ones. Get expert help wherever it's needed. We may be able to direct you to sources of expertise in some retirement matters, such as Social Security benefits, union pensions and veterans' benefits. Stop by and see us. We'll be glad to help if we can.

THOUGHTS 'N THINGS

The key to satisfying relationships with other people, including other family members, is learning how to love. The person who knows how to love cannot help but be considered loveable by other people. The problem in the whole love process lies in faulty perception and inadequate definition of the term.

Love is an emotion, and everyone thinks they know what it means, based on their "feelings." That gives rise to all kinds of misconceptions, and young people are usually thoroughly confused about the fact that there are, supposedly, many different kinds of love. Actually, there is only one - but behind the word "love" lie many motives.

The earliest feelings of love are all involved with the self. Small children learn to copy the expressions of caring from other humans, because they realize very early in life that those expressions get good results. Self-preservation is very important, and learning cause and effect is absolutely necessary when one is small and vulnerable.

When the child expresses love, it is not love for another in the same sense we adults may know it. The child is necessarily completely self-centered, and the expression of love is a thank-you for treating the loved object (the self) in a manner which makes the self more comfortable and secure. When that treatment wavers, as is necessary for disciplining the toddler, and the parent must say "no," the child feels less secure and comfortable, and the self is frustrated, so the child fires back, "You bad," or "I hate you." It seems that you have withdrawn your positive support of the child's every wish and whim, and retaliation is the immediate response.

As the child grows older, it is possible to explain that loving someone does not mean giving into their immediate desires, when greater safety or security in the long haul is at stake. That is the beginning of the child's education about time, and concern for another. Children can understand that "giving in" to immediate desire may be easier and more pleasant for a parent, but that if they really love the child, they have to say "no" when giving in is not good for the child.

Unfortunately, this is the first stage of parent-child

The parent who loves the child for the child's sake, and is unselfish in the attempt to help the child fulfill self-potential, even though it means losing the child eventually, will produce a happy human who is able to give love freely, to the parent as well as others. The parent's "repayment" for the job is increased confidence for having done a job well, and a child to be proud of.

problems, if the parent has never grown out of the self-love stage. The parent who thinks only of loving the self will see the child as a servant who will provide love for the parent, and it then becomes a tug-of-war of two "children." With no adult to referee, or set a good example, the relationship will be off to a bad start.

If the parent will only love the child when the child is showering the parent with positive responses, expressions of love, total worship and agreement, and is being a credit to the parent, the child will "catch on" that love must be bought. When the child exhibits independence, the parent will revert to the "you bad," or "I hate you" behavior that belongs to childhood. Worse than that, however, is the fact that the immature parent will then add insult to injury by making the child feel guilty about his or her own individuality.

Love should never be confused with possessiveness or jealousy. A parent who controls or stifles another life does not "love" but is rather immature, and bent on self-love or personal security. The child is held tight to the parent because the parent needs someone to lean on. Self-love demands that the child be sacrificed for the parent.

When that happens, and the parent has been successful, development of the child is restricted, and the parent and child become as one. Mutual hatred is usually the outcome, and the two are bound tightly in a love-hate-guilt-blame relationship, and everyone suffers.

The parent who loves the child for the child's sake, and is unselfish in the attempt to help the child fulfill self-potential, even though it means losing the child eventually, will produce a happy human who is able to give love freely, to the parent as well as others. The parent's "repayment" for the job is increased confidence for having done a job well, and a child to be proud of.

Parents lose their adult children unless there is friendship and respect, as well as love in the relationship. The adult who is secure and appreciates the individual self does not become a slave to the child, and does not expect the child to be a slave to the parent. The child can then freely love the adult with no fear of the "strings" that might be attached to the relationship.

We all want someone to love us enough, that they want what is right for us, and best for us, regardless of how it affects them. Unless we are capable of loving someone that unselfishly, however, we cannot believe that another person is capable of loving us in that manner. That is one of the great difficulties of love. It is also one of the great difficulties of parenthood! When we try to do the right thing for a loved one, we often must hear the accusation, "You don't love me (or you would let me have it my way)."

That, in fact, is where young people often get confused about love. If they have not learned that true love means doing what you think is best for the loved one, in spite of your own wishes and wants, they often become victims of selfish and self-centered people who claim to love them. It often happens to adults that don't really know what love is either. When it is confused with desire or possessiveness, it is even harder to keep the meaning straight.

A girl who knows what love really means, will not take a chance on "trapping" someone she loves, into marriage or parenthood, when it means the end of educational or career opportunities for that person. That is selfish love directed inward, not outward.

By the same token, a man who talks a girl into "proving" her love, when the result will be regret and/or disillusionment, or other unhappiness, does not "love" the girl, but only the self.

On a more adult level, the woman or man who deliberately sets out too woo away someone else's husband or wife does not love the target of attention, but only the self. That type of person is a poor bet for a "love" affair, or a second spouse, and there are a lot of "sadder but wiser" adults in our society who will attest to the fact.

People do sometimes "fall out of love" as a result of loving unwisely. They do on occasion meet someone worthy of love, who is in the same position. True love is not a matter of possession, however, between parent and child, or two adults. Love can exist without ownership. There is a great deal of satisfaction in finding someone who is truly loveable. It is not absolutely necessary to create destruction because of it. "I love, and therefore, I must have" is strictly selfish and a sign of immature love. It is still the cry of the baby demanding instant, personal satisfaction.

Merchants Beware

According to a Waterford Township merchant, a con artist is operating in the Dixie Highway area. The merchant, who wishes to remain anonymous, informed The Reminder that last week during regular business hours, a well-dressed middle-aged man entered the store and began a friendly conversation.

Before leaving the store, the distinguished stranger asked if the merchant could give him two twenty dollar bills in exchange for $40.00 in loose bills. He explained he wanted to send the money in a card to a relative for a birthday.

The merchant obligingly gave him the two twenties. Upon counting the exchanged money though, the merchant realized there was only $35.00. By this time, the stranger had supposedly put the $40.00 in the card and sealed it.

The merchant informed him of the $5.00 shortage. The man explained that his wife was shopping next door and he would leave the sealed envelope with the merchant while he ran next door to get an extra $5.00 from his wife.

The merchant waited 20 minutes for the man to come back. When he did not show up, the merchant opened the envelope and found only a card. The twenty dollar bills were gone.

The crime has been reported to the police; but the merchant involved and The Reminder would like to warn store owners to be aware of this con artist trick.

Is Vandalism on the Rise in Independence?

by Sharon Springborn

Are the residents of Independence Township facing an increase in the incidents of vandalism?

Both Bob Wark, of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, and Charles Kimbel, acting chief of the Independence Township Police Services, feel that the amount of vandalism is up. Neither man could substantiate their feelings, as neither had their records right in front of them, but Kimbel stated that, "There isn't a day that goes by without some type of vandalism reported."

The malicious type of vandalism, as opposed to that which causes costly property damage, is the type seen most frequently by the police officers in the township. Mailboxes have been a target for vandals most recently, with firecrackers exploded inside of the closed mailbox, or the box being torn from the ground and run over by a car.

The younger kids are the ones mostly involved in destroying or doing damage to property. Usually, the kids are out trying to have a good time, and don't really know how, or where, to properly direct their energies so as not to cause any problems for anyone.

Those doing the damage aren't normally apprehended. Usually, a noise from outside is heard, and possibly a car driving away is seen, but not enough can be seen to give police a description to work from.

Parents are also a problem, according to Wark. If their children are caught damaging someone's property, the parents often don't pay for that damage.

"A lot of parents don't care. They've abdicated their responsibility as parents, and given it to teachers and police officers. They really don't care what damage their kids do, as long as you don't bother them. A phrase we hear a lot is 'I just don't know what to do with him (or her).'"

The one thing that both officers agree causes, or influences, a lot of vandalism is the ability of teenagers to drink, legally, at a younger age. They would both like to see the drinking age raised to 21 again, and can't really see why it was lowered in the first place. Very often, young kids, maybe 13 or 14, will pay an older person to buy beer or wine for them, proceed to drink it, and maliciously destroy someone's property.

Mobility also causes some trouble. Kids now have their own cars very frequently, or at least have access to the family car, so they can do damage in a larger area.

Kimbel feels that the Pine Knob concerts, or more correctly, some of the people attending the concerts, cause a lot of problems. Of the 6 to 12 thousand people at a concert, only a few make trouble, but those are the ones seen by the police. These few have no respect for private property, and after drinking, they go tearing around subdivisions doing a lot of damage.

Fire Department Has Truck Stolen During Emergency

The Fourth of July was not entirely a day of celebration for the Independence Township Fire Department. While responding to a personal injury accident at Waldon and Sashabaw Roads between 11:30 p.m. and midnight, the red pickup truck with a camper top used by Captain Dale Bailey was stolen.

The municipal vehicle, used to store the department's equipment, was numbered but not lettered leading Chief Frank Ronk to speculate that perhaps the thief or thieves did not realize it was an official vehicle at first. It had been parked some 100 feet down Waldon to alert approaching traffic that an accident was ahead.

When the emergency situation was over, Bailey's truck was gone. But, as Ronk explained, who would have thought to watch a truck when people were injured and in need of assistance?

The vehicle was found yesterday in a field in the Rochester area, stuck in the mud and stripped of most of its equipment. It is now in the custody of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, who are checking it out for any possible clues.

Ronk could not give any damage estimate other than to describe it as "extensive." He has not seen the vehicle himself and could not give any idea of when it would be returned.

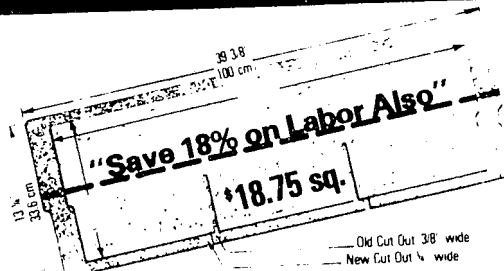

The incident has caused him to consider taking extra personnel along on calls now just to keep an eye on the equipment while the others handle the emergency.

Congressman Broomfield Reports

The government has been giving federally pensioned veterans and their survivors assistance with one hand and taking it away with the other. This practice, however, will finally stop if the recent House-passed veterans bill becomes law, reports Congressman William S. Broomfield (R-19th Dist.).

Presently, veterans who receive both a veterans' pension and social security find themselves penalized when they receive a cost-of-living adjustment in their social security benefits. Because of an income ceiling for veterans pensioners that is very low, the veterans' pensions are reduced to keep them at the legal ceiling when they receive an increase from social security.

"Veterans, like everyone else, are victimized by the ravages of inflation. When the Veterans Administration cuts a veteran's benefit because he received a social security cost-of-living increase, that veteran may still have the same dollar amount of income, but actually loses ground to inflation.

"The injustice in the present procedure is magnified when you consider how many times it is played out around the country. Of the nearly 5,470,000 people receiving veterans' pensions, about 80 percent receive social security as well. Many of these people rely on these two benefits as their sole means of support.

Under present law, the income ceiling for veterans who are single is $2,770 a year, and $5,070 if there is a dependent. To be eligible, besides meeting the income limitations, the vet must be permanently and totally disabled, or 65 years or older.

The House-passed bill, Broomfield explained, raises the income ceiling to $4,000 for single pensioners, and $5,200 if there is a dependent. The income ceiling has also been tied to the Consumer Price Index to provide for inflation-combating cost-of-living increases.

"While the income ceilings are not grandiose by any stretch of the imagination, the new levels do put our veterans above the poverty line, and with the cost-of-living increase provision, they are able to stay there despite inflation," Broomfield said.

The income ceiling adjustment provisions are part of a major revision of the veterans pension laws. This bill, which the House of Representatives passed by an overwhelming vote of 398 to 5, must now be taken up by the Senate, Broomfield explained.

Springfield May Lease Property for Future Fire Hall

by Carol Balzarini

In an abbreviated forty minute session the Springfield Township Board met Wednesday, July 5 at the township hall.

Due to minor procedural changes two items approved last month were re-approved this month, final plat approval for Springfield Acres and the liquor license transfer for The Springfield.

Board members agreed to sign a contract with planning consultant Tod Kilroy of Community Planning for the sum of $400 per month.

In response to a letter, permission was given to put a banner up in downtown Davisburg and to close off Broadway for a short time for a parade during Springfield Summerfest scheduled for July 29.

Under new business, Dr. Herbert Swanson was reappointed to the planning commission and a seventh position created to be filled by Michael Barron, a local contractor. The additional position was created, according to Supervisor Collin Walls, to spread out representation both geographically and professionally and to prevent a possible tie vote. Springfield may have a planning commission of up to nine members.

A petition presented to the board resulted in the setting of a special meeting for July 25 at the township hall for the purpose of discussing the leasing of one acre of property located on Dixie Highway and Rattalee Lake Road to be used as a site for a future fire hall. The property is owned by the Oakland County Road Commission and available for $6,000 on a 40-year lease with a 59-year renewal option for $1. The $6,000 includes a survey and a fence provided by the OCRC.

Walls himself had circulated the petition because an 1857 law requires that property acquisition be voted on at the annual meeting or at a special meeting of the electors. Walls felt such a long-term lease was in the same category as acquisition.

The board passed a resolution stating social security would not be withheld from seasonal or parttime employees. It is not necessary for less than 600 hours of work per year and not required for seasonal or parttime employees. Walls stated the hours of such employees could not be calculated in advance and that such a measure would not only simplify bookkeeping but also save the township money.

Wages of election workers were established at $45 with chairmen receiving $55 per day, a $5 increase. Election workers are now subject to minimum wage requirements.

Approval was given for an adult foster care facility to be located in Shiwassee Creek Farms on Davisburg Road. The request was made by a corporation which will oversee the facility. Under state law, any such facility with six or less residents is not subject to local zoning so board approval was a precedural matter. Residents of the facility will be mentally and/or physically handicapped adults ranging in age from 18 to 26.

Jim Myers asked the board to study speeds on Crosby Lake Road with the possibility of posting 25 mph speed limit signs. The bar board agree to do so.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:40 p.m.

Springfield Summerfest Set for July 29

Plans are underway for the Springfield Township Summerfest to be held Saturday, July 29 as a kick-off for the annual Oakland County 4-H Fair which begins Monday, July 31.

Chairman Diana Walls and her committee have many events planned for that day and evening both in Davisburg and at the fairgrounds on Andersonville Road.

Canoe races will be held at the Mill Pond, Rotary is sponsoring a baseball game, a dunk tank is planned with local politicians as targets, Springfield firefighters will have a water ball contest, and a hot air balloon may be on hand.

A parade will feature 4-H groups, local groups, antique cars and various floats. Events will be held at the arena at the fairgrounds featuring local horse groups. Craft booths will be set up at the Youth Activities Center with a dance held there that evening from 8 p.m.-1 a.m.

Music for the dance will be provided by Mickey Gonzales and the Third Shift Band. Presale ticket prices are $6 per couple, $3 single. Tickets bought at the door will be $8 and $4. Tickets are available from committee members and at some downtown businesses.

The Springfield Historical Society will open the Davis home on Andersonville Road and hold a rummage sale there. The Schultz building in Davisburg will also be open for the day.

Numbered buttons are being sold for prizes that will be given away at drawings to be held throughout the day.

For further information, contact Diana Walls at 634-4869.

Kara and Kim Kurz helping the fishermen, L-R: Tara Thomas, age 12 of Pear St., Clarkston, Gilbert Martinez, age 9, also of Pear St. and Andrew Wood, age 9 of Waldon in Clarkston. Not pictured - Kendra Kurz, another avid fisherperson who said, "The fish are biting pretty good, but they're eating all our bait. We ran out of worms so now we are using bologna."

Kara, age 7, and Kim, age 4, Kurz of Snowapple Drive in Clarkston, spending a hot July afternoon watching the ducks at Mill Pond.

The end result of one of many "after the show" accidents at Pine Knob.

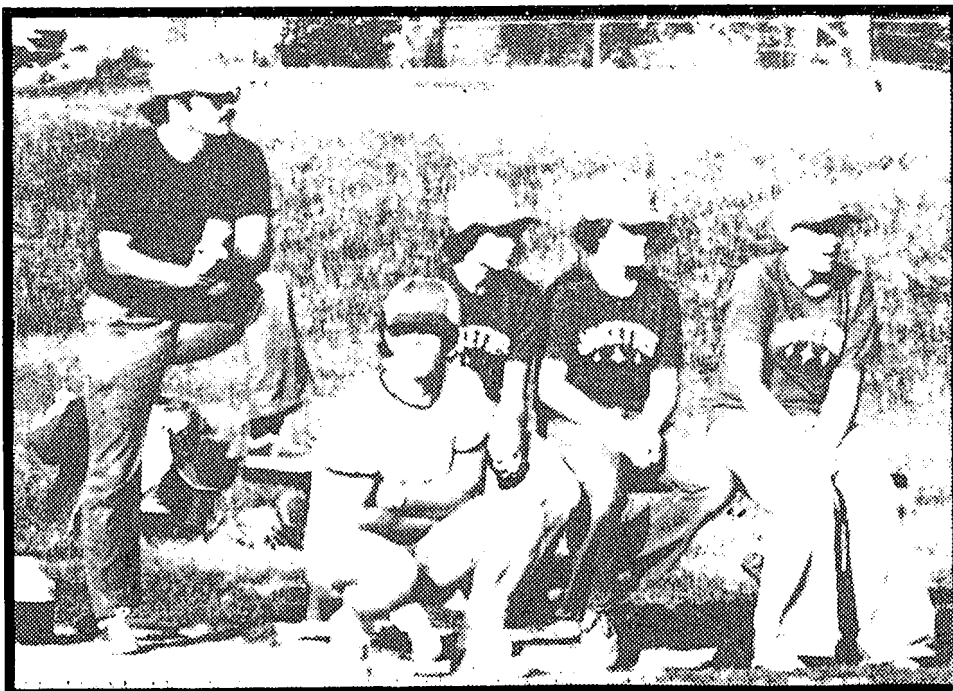

Pitcher Barb Burzyck drills one in.

Bookstore Creates Good Feelings

If you're a book lover, you will appreciate the atmosphere of Waterford's newest book store. Creative Book Store is located on Dixie in the Harvard Plaza.

Owner Helen Soldinski opened Creative Books June 1 of this year. Her love for her merchandise is in evidence by the well-stocked shelves in her new store.

Helen, 23, is married and lives in Warren. According to Helen, as a young girl growing up in Hamtramack, "I've loved to read since I was little. My favorite books are suspense thrillers." She continued by pointing out two new thrillers she carries in her store - "Nightwing" and "Swarm."

Creative Books carries an extensive line of paperbacks, magazines, hard cover best sellers, how-to books and has a very complete children's literature department.

When asked what has been her biggest seller so far, Helen replied, "The Thorn Birds." I've sold 56 copies." Next in line are romances. Helen claims to have the biggest selection of romance novels around.

A micro-fiche machine for ordering allows Helen to locate most any book by author or title for her customers.

Future plans for the Creative Book Store, according to Helen, are to expand her already large book selection and add a children's reading area with small tables and chairs.

The Creative Book Store has an addition not found in most businesses; a beautiful black and white kitten, called Harvey (named after the Harvard Plaza). Harvey fits very well into the cozy atmosphere Helen Soldinski has created with her Creative Book Store.

Clarkston Celebrates 4th of July with Downtown Parade

This year's parade marshal was Jim Stiles, owner of the Clarkston Shoe Service, driven in style by Fire Chief Tink Ronk. Independence Firefighters sponsor the annual parade.

Clarkston has had its share of unusual parade entries, but Lisa Glenn's llama is a first. "Push-Me-Pull-You" was led by Lisa (right) and her friend Laura Cornell (left). He was a first prize winner in the youth division.

The Clarkston Community Historical Society entered two floats and one was a winner.

Clarkston Junior High cheerleaders, who sold lemonade to raise money, weren't shy about being photographed.

And the Winners Were.....

The annual Fourth of July parade, sponsored by the Independence Township Firefighters brought out a lot of participants this year.

Twenty-five dollar cash prizes were awarded to Bob Shagena's float featuring an old-fashioned steam engine, a colorful float called Aquarina entered by Lake Oakland Heights, and one by the Clarkston Community Historical Society calling attention to their upcoming Craft and Cider Festival in September.

Youth winners went to Lisa Glenn of Reese Road who, with her friend, Laura Cornell, led the Glenn family llama along the parade route. Second prize went to the Coop Nursery and third to Mike Wood dressed as a Minuteman. Prize money was $5, $3 and $2.

This little one had the best seat of all the parade viewers.

Know-it-All Grow-it-All

by Bonnie Hale

This common palm is also known as butterfly, golden butterfly, golden feather, cane, areca or Madagascar palm. As one would suspect by the many common names, this is a very popular plant. And the reason it has earned such popularity is by being very durable and relatively easy to grow. The areca grows in clumps and has very graceful feathery fronds that are composed of slender leaflets. The fronds very often grow 3 feet or more on a 5-foot plant.

A 6 to 10 inch rate of growth in a year's time is not unusual. As the plant matures, it becomes ringed with bamboo-like scars where there was once leaves. Because the palm cannot be pruned (if the main leader is damaged growth ceases and the plant dies), and they will eventually outgrow their space, they will have to be given to someone who has a high ceiling or placed outside in a frost-free climate.

The butterfly palm does best in bright indirect or curtain filtered light. If grown in artificial light, 400 foot candles for 12 hours a day is required. The soil must be moist (not soggy) at all times. If allowed to dry out too much or kept too moist, the tips will turn brown.

Spider mites can sometimes be a problem with palms. Webbing or white flecks on the leaves denotes mites and their damage. I have had much success with palms with mites by placing the entire plant in a garbage bag with a no-pest strip and leaving it, out of direct sun, for ten days. The strip will not kill the eggs themselves but it will kill the mites as they hatch.

Palms can be fed on a monthly basis from early spring to late fall with an all-purpose houseplant fertilizer. Any re-potting that needs to be done should wait until spring using a general all purpose packaged potting soil.

Propagation can be done by division of the older plants, although seeds are the most common means. Because the young plants are usually unattractive, most people prefer to purchase plants that are already established.

If everything is in perfect balance - the light, water, fertilizer and the general health of the palm, you may be surprised with tiny yellow flowers.

Someone's in the Kitchen

Cel Yarber

Our guest in the kitchen this week has nothing but praise for Linda Irwin's Warm Dip, which appears in the Clarkston Community Women's Club cookbook. It's easy to fix, and a delight to serve.

WARM DIP

- 1 (8 oz.) cream cheese
- 2 Tbsp. milk
- 1 (3 oz.) pkg. dried corned beef
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 2 Tbsp. onion flakes
- 1/4 tsp. garlic salt
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
- 2 Tbls. butter
- 1/2 tsp. salt

Cream sour cream and cream cheese at room temperature; add other ingredients and spoon into small casserole dish. Top with 1/2 cup chopped pecans or walnuts sauteed in 2 tablespoons butter and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Bake at 350° for 20 minutes. Serve warm.

Planning Begins for Craft and Cider Festival

As far as the Clarkston Community Historical Society is concerned, it's never too early to start planning for the annual Craft and Cider Festival. As a matter of fact, coordinators Fran Hertler and Carol Balzarini have been working on it since February.

During last week's Fourth of July parade, members of the historical society began selling raffle tickets for a drawing to be held Saturday, September 23. Prizes for the drawing feature a leaded glass lamp crafted by Dave Aulschbach of Lake Orion, noted for his windows at The Old Mill among other area restaurants. Clarkston's Bill McClean is making a pine wall cabinet.

Dorothy Slavin, popular with many shoppers at the annual festival, is contributing a set of patchwork place mats while her brother, Rex Taylor is making a puppet, his walking duck that proved so popular in last year's rain. A handcrafted jewelry item is also one of the prizes although its type and description are not known at this time.

Other prizes being offered are the Heritage books produced in honor of the bicentennial and edited by current president of the historical society, Jennifer Radcliff. Still other items will be added to the list as time goes on.

Festival planners hope to have the prizes on display in a local shop window from Labor Day until the time of the drawing.

The fourth annual Craft and Cider Festival will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 22, 23 and 24 in downtown Clarkston.

Tickets are available in Clarkston at The Framerie and Tierra Arts and Design in addition to historical society members.

WIFE SAVERS:

After oiling the sewing machine, run a blotter under the needle several times to absorb the excess and prevent soil to fabric.

Moisten your hands with cold water before molding burgers or meatloaf, for easier wash-up afterward.

Save used cling-free fabric softeners. Cut a square and use to store needles, pins.

Use plastic bag twisters to tie your clothes hangers to outdoor clothesline on windy days.

To clean a narrow neck vase or bottle, drop crushed egg shells and a tablespoon or two of vinegar in. Let stand for a few minutes, then shake loose the residue. Rinse and wash.

Set up your schedule so that one unpleasant chore can be sandwiched in between two more agreeable household tasks. It helps!

How to Refreeze Meat

You can refreeze meat IF...and there are several if's involved. If the meat has been thawed properly...(which means in the refrigerator; rather than on the counter at room temperature)...and if the meat is still fresh and good...and if the meat is still cold and/or still has some ice crystals left in it, then you can safely refreeze meat. You do need to recognize, though, that each time a cut of meat is frozen and thawed, you DO lose some of the goodness you paid for to begin with. There's a drying tendency, due to loss of juices, in the process of thawing and refreezing, and quality may change some...but it is possible to refreeze meat. The better method though, is to keep the thawed meat in the refrigerator and cook it as soon as possible. If you still can't use it quickly, then freeze the cooked meat. Know that it will keep for a shorter time period, though.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

by Marilyn Bridgeman

One of my favorite authors is Irving Wallace. His novels, such as "The Seven Minutes" and "The Prize" and his non-fiction, like "The People's Almanac" and "The Book of Lists" are fascinating. So is his newest work, "The Two," written with his daughter, Amy Wallace.

"The Two" is a biography of the original Siamese Twins, Chang and Eng. It traces their unusual life from birth in Siam (naturally) in 1811 to their almost simultaneous death in 1874.

The subject of these remarkable boys' lives is very interesting. How they lived and operated as one, yet two distinct individuals is well-told by Wallace.

Chang and Eng were born connected by a band of flesh that attached them by their chests. They learned very young to walk, run, swim, and exist in complete compatibility.

Surgeons world-wide claimed they could not be separated. Thus, they became one of the greatest attractions the world had ever seen.

The twins married sisters from America and together sired 21 children. "They built their own house, opened a store, became wealthy gentlemen farmers, skilled horsebreakers, and when necessary, defended themselves with their fists."

Wallace weaves an intriguing tale about Chang and Eng and the most intriguing is that it is true! Wallace's facts are well substantiated by letters and news articles of the period which he includes in his book.

One interesting bit of trivia I picked up while reading "The Two" is that Chang and Eng were born on May 11, in 1811 - the numerals eleven sort of symbolizes their lives - two ones, side by side to make another completely different number 11 - "The Two!"

TRAUMA OF MOVING

Everything was so perfect
You could recognize every face
People were so friendly
Not a thing wrong with that place.

Then came the news
It was true, we had to go.
We kept telling our parents
Please, please no!

Mom said: "We could have horses!"
Dad said: "There were golf courses!"
Mom said, "New friends!"
Dad said: "Life won't end!"

Come July, the perfect place was far behind
Even though it stayed clear in our mind.

We started our new school year,
After all the fright, all the fear.

Now I sit at my new school
Thinking to myself, "I was a fool."

Yes Mom, we did meet new friends,
And no, Dad, life did not end....

Green Slime and Chocolate Pudding

"I don't think it can recover the way it is...It's not going to clean itself up. That slime gets more acidic as it stays on the surface...This is just a touch, just the beginning..."

— Jim Flemming

by Carol Balzarini

Jim and Mary Flemming are just two of the property owners around the upper Mill Pond who are concerned about the long-range effects of a recent dumping of dirty water into the lake.

Two weeks ago, a subcontractor was working on the sewer project on North Holcomb Road which will ultimately serve the Deer Lake Farms development. In an apparent attempt to rid the area of "loose" water interfering with his work, the foreman ran a pipe into the lake and pumped unfiltered water through it.

Although both the township and the county stopped the operation as soon as angry complaints came in from the residents, Flemming believes the damage had already been done. He declines to blame the foreman whom he says was probably just doing his job the quickest, easiest and cheapest way possible.

In spite of the halt to the pumping and the dismantling of the pipe, for days afterward the water looked like "chocolate pudding" in Flemming's words, rather disheartening to someone who had recently paid his share of $60,000 to have the lake cleaned out.

Some of his neighbors have been fishing since then, he said, and report the fish still alive, but Flemming sees sprouting weeds and green slime on the surface of the water. That spells pollution to him, even though the water seems to be clearing.

He says the surface will have to be skimmed and the weeds taken out somehow. His desire is to keep the "chain" clean. Water flows from the upper Mill Pond to the lower under Miller Road, through the Village Park and on into Cemetery, Greens and Maceday Lakes.

"I don't think it (the Mill Pond) can recover the way it is...It's not going to clean itself up," Flemming said. "That slime gets more acidic as it stays on the surface...This is just a touch, just the beginning. Repercussions may take time."

What will ultimately be done about the condition of the Mill Pond's waters is not known at this time. Neither the contractor nor the subcontractor seem to be liable for the damage, but Flemming would like to make sure incidents of this sort do not happen again. He would like to see future contracts with the township contain certain restrictions to prevent recurrence of pollution violations.

HOMES

A Vacation Home? - - Well, It's That Time Again

by Joan Allen - Feature Editor

Sometimes I forget - like one Saturday a couple of weeks ago, when my husband suggested that we go and look at some property an acquaintance had decided to sell. I went with him, in a mood of excited planning, thinking only of the fun connected with a vacation home.

"There's swimming and boating," he said, "And even a 9-hole golf course nearby, and in the winter, we could go cross-country skiing!" It sounded wonderful!

It was on the drive over that I began remembering, and by the time we arrived home, I had said "no" to my husband, "no" to the two daughters who had accompanied us, and more importantly, I had said a loud and clear "no" to myself. There will be no more "summer homes" for this family if I can help it!

On the other hand, I thought, as I drove to work on Monday, we really did have a wonderful time when we had the cottage. In fact, it would have taken very little encouragement on someone else's part, to persuade me to roll right past the M-15 exit, and continue on I-75 all the way to the Cheboygan exit. I guess the woods and water of northern Michigan get into the blood when you're young, and it's impossible to ever get them out!

Our family had a cottage at Mullet Lake in the years of my childhood, and it was there that my thoughts and ideas, and dreams were shaped. It was during the summers, and the spring and fall weekends that I learned that you don't need a lot of money to be happy, content, and at peace with the world. I learned that inside plumbing is not necessary to the quality of life, either. If you haven't been forced to take a walk out back through the woods to the outhouse on a cold, clear, starlit night, or on a beautiful warm, clear, starlit night, you have never experienced the sights and sounds of sudden awareness - of yourself, and the other life that goes on in the darkness of the woods.

Somehow, all the members of the family had time for each other at the cottage, and guests became members of the family in a very short time. The old and the young sat around and sang together, and played cards, or told stories, or just sat together and thought their own thoughts to the tune of the glider, which went whoosh, whoosh, when you pushed it back and forth with one foot.

In fact, I can close my eyes today, and see every inch of that cottage and the world that surrounded it. It was my true home. I could, in fact, write page after page of that world and my longing to return to it. It was the best world that ever existed for a child. We walked, we talked, we sang, we swam, we watched the night train rush through the night, we wrote letters, and sat in the grass waiting for the mailman, and we ate fresh fish caught in the lake, and - and - and.

My mother doesn't think of it in just that way. What she remembers is washing diapers in a pail of hard lake water, and cooking meals for mobs of people on a kerosene stove, and my brother's usual case of poison ivy, and waiting for my dad to arrive from Detroit, and then worrying about him driving back alone, once he had arrived safely, and pulling porcupine quills out of the dog's nose, or trying to get rid of the smell of skunk after the dog chased one under the porch of the cottage. In fact, she reminded me of all those things when my husband and I bought our cottage at Black Lake.

"What she remembers is washing diapers in a pail of hard lake water, and cooking meals for mobs of people on a kerosene stove, and my brother's usual case of poison ivy, and waiting for my dad to arrive from Detroit, and then worrying about him driving back alone, once he had arrived safely, and pulling porcupine quills out of the dog's nose, or trying to get rid of the smell of skunk after the dog chased one under the porch of the cottage."

It was in a beautiful spot, right on the water, and about a mile's drive from a private road. Our kids loved it, our dogs loved it, our cats loved it, our relatives loved it, and our friends loved it.

I loved it too, except when I was cleaning it, and cooking great quantities of food for the guests we always invited for the weekends, and cleaning, and washing loads of sheets and towels after they'd departed, and finding I'd gained more and more weight on all the "goodies" our vacationing guests would bring along with them! The kids and I seemed to spend a great deal of time dashing out to the driveway to greet arriving guests, and waving forlornly as they left us on Sunday night.

I, too, spent a lot of time worrying that the father of the family was on the road - either coming or going - and worrying about the boats breaking loose when the weather was rough, and the dogs running away where they might find skunks and porcupines. Those worries were nothing compared to an overflowing septic tank when six people were expected to arrive any minute; or what to do with the soot when the smoke stack on the oil stove broke loose covering everything in sight with fine black powder with five extra people there - and it being dinnertime and all.

And the driving! It's easy for the kids to be nostalgic - they slept all the way there and back and let the dog and cat climb all over me while I wrestled with bumper to bumper traffic - and the time the two kittens got wedged under the front seat of the car on one of those trips is another memory I'm not fond of -

Leaking roofs, and pipes that broke every winter, and terrible walks through knee-deep snow to "close the cottage" because we planned on one more fall weekend - and burst bottles and jars, and the remnants of visiting mice, and sudden cold spells or rainy weeks were enough to make me "throw in the towel." It was the long drive to work all weekend, because something always needed to be done, that should have told us it was too much - but it never did. It wasn't until two of the "children" were planning to join the ranks of the weekend drivers on I-75, that we decided we had outgrown the cottage, and we sold it.

Now our girls tell us that the cottage was the best place in the world to grow up, and how they loved it. They remember the wonderful times we had with friends that visited, and white fish broiled outside, and sitting by the lake around a campfire at night, and the raccoons that came right up to their bedroom window and weren't afraid of them, and the moon over the lake, and the wonderful world of the north woods, and I forget - and get all excited when someone says, "I hear you're looking for some vacation property, and think I have the very thing you need!" Very few people have enough money on hand to buy a home in cash. So, people buy on credit, or as it is known in the real estate business, they take out a mortgage. This makes your bank one of your best friends. Keep in mind that there are different kinds of banks and different kinds of mortgages. Some banks specialize in home loans; others rarely deal with them. Also, various mortgages are available at varying rates of interest. Eligibility for special rates may depend on the percentage of your downpayment and such things as military service, as well as the area you are purchasing in. Investigate to make sure you get the best deal.

If you're eager to buy a home, see the professionals at BOB WHITE REAL ESTATE, 5856 S. Main St., right next to the new Clarkston Post Office, 625-5821; we can guide you in avoiding the many costly errors inherent in home buying. We are also experts at selling property, and urge you to call us first with your listing for the prompt action you desire. Hours: 9-9 Mon.-Thurs.; 9-6 Fri., Sat.; 11-5 Sun.
