Halloween Safety Tips

A few suggestions for Halloween Trick or Treaters offered by Independence Township Police Services: The recommended hour for begging on Tuesday, October 31, is 6:00 - 7:00 p.m.

Preschoolers should be accompanied by an adult or a responsible teenager, to the door.

If at all possible, choose flame resistant costumes.

Reflective tape added to the front and back of costumes, will provide additional safety for the children.

Masks should be adjusted so they do not slip and slide on their faces, causing children to have trouble seeing and breathing.

Give children a double bag or container with a handle so they don't drop their treats in the highway and stop to collect them

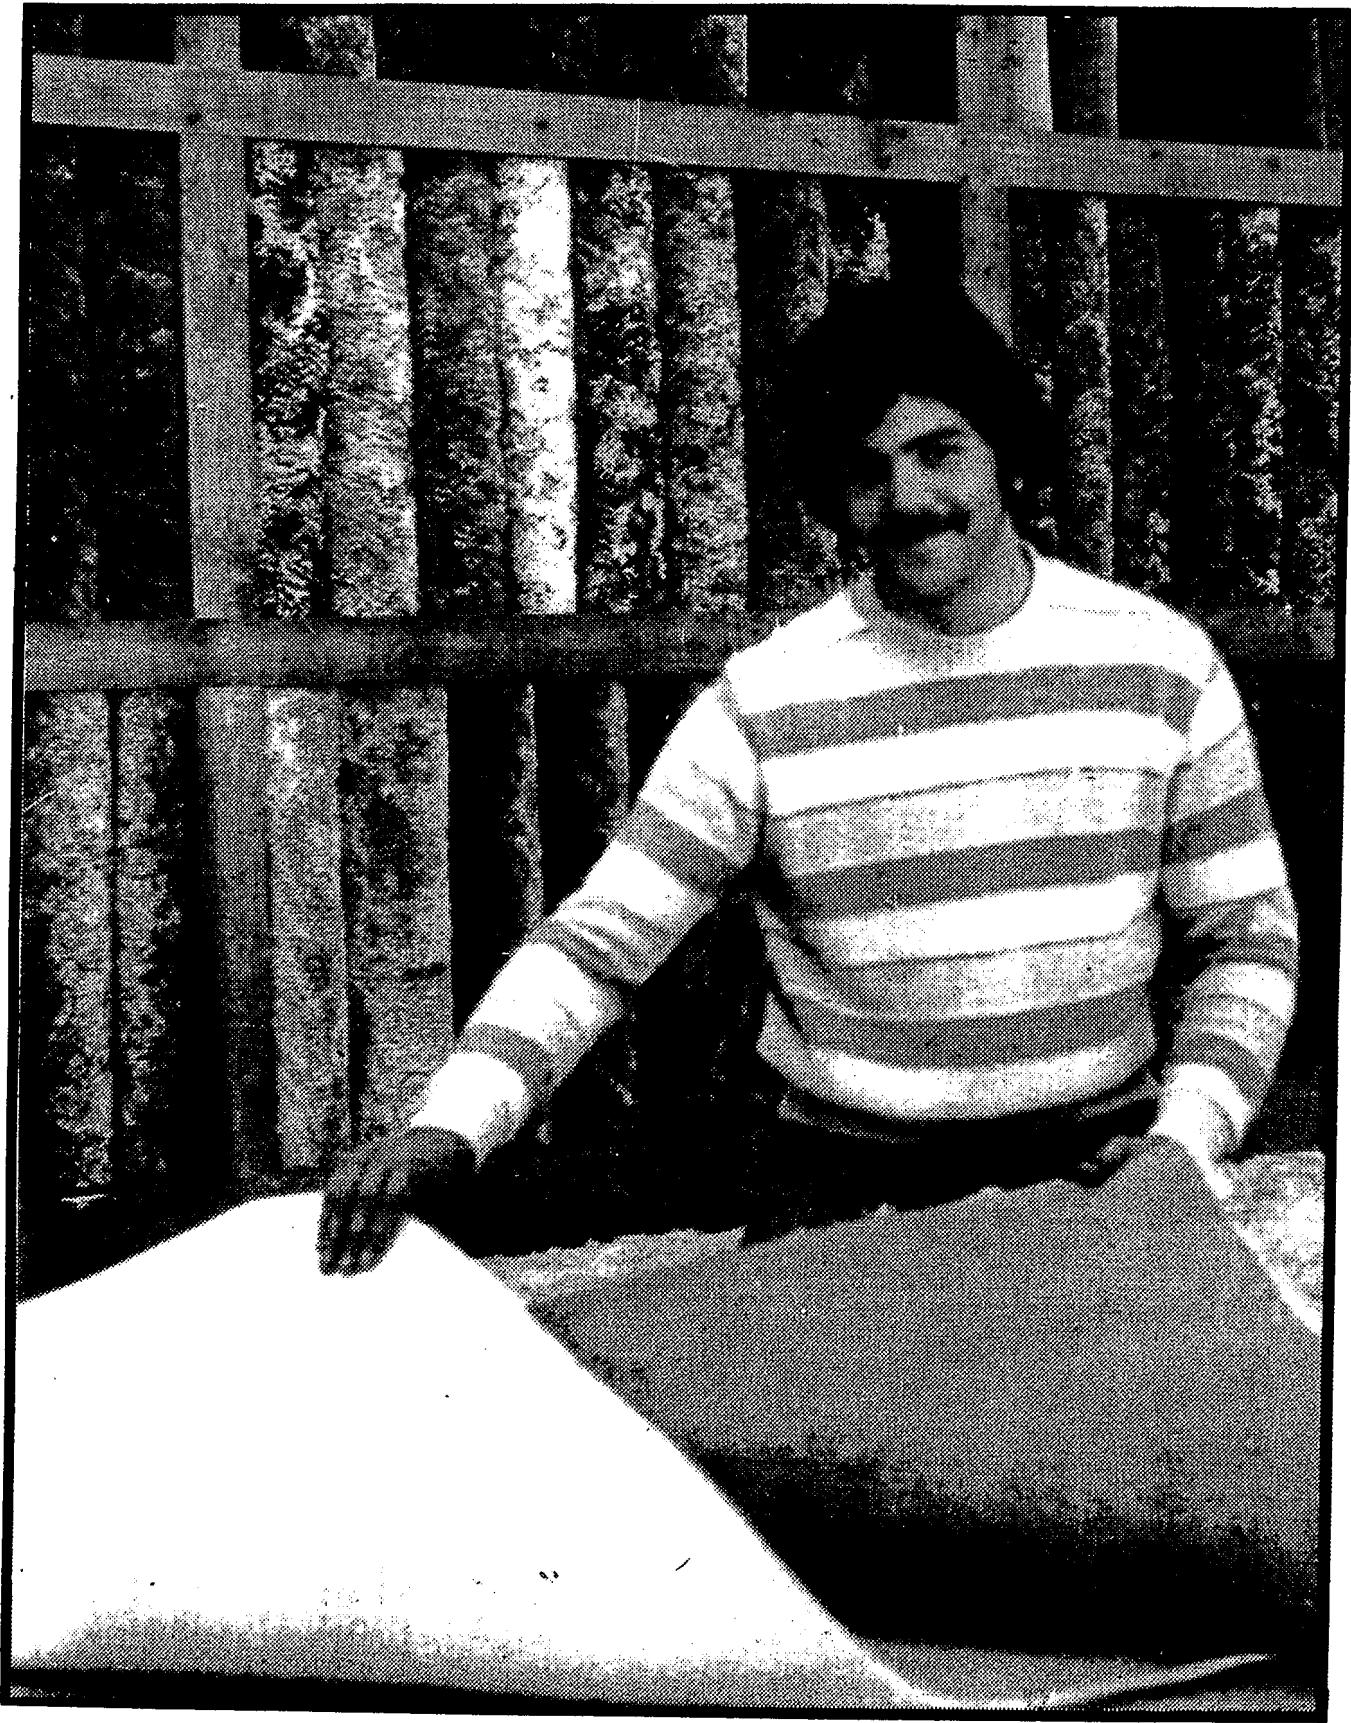

Last but not least, inspect loose candy and check all apples before youngsters start nibbling. Report any suspicious items immediately to Police.

Caution by parents and children will help make Halloween "78" safe for everyone.

Parapsychology-Natural or Supernatural

Halloween is the time of "scary" things. What has been called "strange" and "supernatural," along with thoughts that are kept hidden the rest of the year, are suddenly stressed. Just as perfectly ordinary people get dressed up in scary costumes, to provide others of us with extraordinary chills and frights, so are some subjects of interest costumed for the same affect. For that reason, this seems to be a good opportunity to unmask some terms and abilities that have been weirdly costumed in the past.

The main subject of study in Parapsychology, though it can be broken down into many areas of mental and emotional ability. No more strange than musical, mathematical, or artistic genius, or any other achievement which we call talent, psychic ability alone, has been singled out as false, mystical, somehow "crooked" or imaginary.

Those who possess it try to hide it. Those who come into contact with one who has developed it, deny it, and claim it is trickery, and a great percentage of the members of society who tend to believe in it, wage an ongoing war against receptiveness.

Why is it more frightening than television? Isn't it strange that we can turn a little plastic knob in our living-room, and see and hear people that are thousands of miles away? How can we honestly believe in the telephone? How many of us can explain how an airplane, full of people, can lift off the ground and fly through the air? This is strange phenomena indeed, but we never question it, because it is so commonly experienced. We can prove it externally, and we have been taught to believe in what we can prove externally. That hardly proves that other energy forces do not exist, but we are content to remain ignorant of that which we cannot see, hear, or feel. So content, in fact, that society fought the concept of germs so small that they could not be seen by the human eye. It was only when the microscope was invented, and we had proof that could be seen, that most people accepted bacteria.

The humans that studied the affects of bacteria, and accepted the fact that there was something at work that could not be seen or heard or felt, were dealing with the "supernatural." The problem they faced was one of education and persuasion, but they were finally able to convince enough people of the logic of their investigation, and the benefits of their findings, that "germs" were accepted. Improved health for all people was the outcome. Improved mental and emotional health should be the outcome of the study of parapsychology. The affects of psychic energy have been under study for some time now. It only remains to determine the how, why, when, where, and who, and varying degrees of ability, before all shreds of weird "costuming" are torn away for good.

To the Editor:

And citizens of Independence Township; In reply to candidate Carolyn Place on her recent letter to you.

I, too, enjoy the beauty of our autumn colors, as I believe we all do! However, in reply to her comments about the political signs, to me they are also beautiful. For many are colored RED & WHITE & BLUE which reminds us all of the fact that this is still the United States of America where each and every one of us can still enjoy some of the freedoms that we have left, that so many in Congress and all levels of government are attempting to take away from us.

In fact Carolyn Place, Abraham Lincoln, one of the founders of your party and a great man was one of the first in our nation to display political banners and posters during his campaign; for President of the United States of America.

I assume that you do consider that President Lincoln was an intelligent man, do you not?

THOUGHTS 'N THINGS

Now, there may be those doubters among you readers, who will say that she had simply read my columns, and so "knew all about me" but she touched on things that have never appeared in print. Even so, education, sensitivity, intuitiveness, and coincidence could explain many of her answers, as well as probability. There was one name that I gave her that just came to me on the spur of the moment. My sister's married name.

Joan Allen

Feature Editor

In this week's paper is included an interview that I had with a psychic who lives in Clarkston, and also some additional material on the subject of para-psychology. Much of it is a summary of material I have studied over the last few years. I feel that I should explain in this column, some of the reasons I have had, for my growing interest in the subject. I have no intention of annoying those who reject the concept of "extra-senses," nor do I feel called upon to defend my acknowledgement of the subject as a legitimate one for study and for discussion. I simply intend to state the facts -- the reader can choose to read or ignore at will.

On my desk I keep a book called "The Mind In The Making." It was written in 1921, and it belonged to my father when he was a student at the University of Michigan, in 1923. I have read it, and laughed, because the world has made so much progress since then, and the book is not a classic. It is probably on a par with a medical book written at the same time. However, it's author was searching for answers, and organizing what was known at the time, and my father built on his knowledge, and applied it to his life and encouraged his children to have "open minds."

There was only one direction that my father appeared to be closed-minded. That was about a single radio program that we children loved -- but which we were forbidden to listen to, because it was even too far-fetched for father's open mind. That program was Buck Rogers, and it was about rockets that could go to the moon. It was absolutely ridiculous. Needless to say, I thought of his refusal to even try to imagine such foolishness, and marveled many years later, when we watched a man walking on the moon on our television set. It taught me to keep an open mind on every subject!

During my childhood, I had a girlfriend whose parents had come to this country from Holland. They were "different" from us, and though I felt sorry for my friend because her family was more formal than ours, I grew to like her parents very much. As a result, I was invited to take a trip with them, and I went.

While my friend was gone on a short trip with her father, I stayed with her mother, and she told me that she could tell I was a "sensitive." She said that I would understand some day, and related several psychic experiences that she had had.

A couple of years later, I was in the audience when a man whose reputation was of the highest, related an experience that he and some friends had had. He was not trying to "sell" anyone anything, as my friend's mother had not had any reason to force me to believe "stories." These people simply related experiences they had had. I was fascinated at the possibility of such wonders, but simply filed them away for future study.

It was many years later that I realized that I had had a psychic experience. I have a sister who is sixteen years younger than I am. I, of course, missed her when I went away to college, and so was extremely upset when I had a "nightmare" that concerned her. I had fallen asleep in my dorm room in the middle of the afternoon, and woke up crying from a dream (though I had never had the experience before, nor have I had a similar one since.) In the dream, my four year old sister was drowning in a pool of muddy water, and I was unable to get to her. I called home, terribly distressed, and made my mother promise to watch her carefully. There never was an incident when she was in such a situation after that, and yet the dream would come back and bother me.

I simply could not forget it - until many years later, when my own first-born was four, and almost drowned in a muddy sewer in which she had fallen. The dream that had "haunted me" ceased to bother me after that. The thing I had feared had happened, and it had passed, though the circumstances by which she was saved were complicated, and involved a number of coincidences.

I was willing to accept the fact that there could be other energy forces besides electricity in the atmosphere, that could conduct pictures and voices. After all, I remember the first television sets and what miracles they seemed to be! On the other hand, I became busy with my family and other subjects, and forgot about psychic phenomena for years at a time. Recently, however, I was interested in all the new books that were appearing, and a number of magazine articles, and began reading a great deal more on the subject. As the same time, I had learned a lot about a number of other things, and didn't regard ESP, etc. as anything especially unusual. Naturally, I was pleased to think that I would have an opportunity to interview a real person with psychic ability, instead of depending completely on what I could read in books.

I thought of my appointment with Shirley Lynch as a usual interview, and either was too busy to think about asking personal questions about my life, or just disinterested in asking. I fully planned to simply ask her about her experiences with psychic phenomenon, etc.

Halfway through the interview, however, I realized the golden opportunity that was being offered to me, and began to question her about my "aura" etc., and my daughter who had accompanied me joined in with her own questions. Shirley took us both on, and came through with flying colors.

Now, there may be those doubters among you readers, who will say that she had simply read my columns, and so "knew all about me" but she touched on things that have never appeared in print. Even so, education, sensitivity, intuitiveness, and coincidence could explain many of her answers, as well as probability. There was one name that I gave her that just came to me on the spur of the moment. My sister's married name.

Now, my sister lives in another state, and she and her husband are busily raising three children; she is attending college full-time; he is going full-speed ahead on his career, and they have just purchased a new home. I am not in touch with them, nor are they with us, except through my mother, who relays all the latest news of each others families back and forth. We're just too busy to write to each other, and over the years we have ceased to be close, though remained interested in each other's well-being. I suppose I mentioned Ann's name because I really wondered how she was.

What she told me gave me concern, and I asked what I could do to help, and then I took the advice I received, and acted on it as soon as I returned home. My sister needed me, and thanks to Shirley, I was in contact with her. The peculiar thing about it was that she was not in the least bit surprised that a psychic had picked up on her need, nor was I surprised at the "coincidence." There was nothing strange or scary about the experience -- and I think one of us would have reacted with that emotion if there were. What seems strange to me, is the fact that we humans recognize the extra-sensory abilities of other animals, but deny our own.

Question Of The Week

DRIVE SLOWER AND DON'T BREAK THE LAW
by Sharon Springborn

When you're driving to, say, a dentist's appointment, does it seem to you like your car's creeping along, and everyone else is just flying? Does it also seem that no one who's in a position of authority is ever around to catch the offenders when they're breaking the law?

We at The Reminder wanted to know if people felt that the 55 m.p.h. speed limit is being enforced vigorously enough.

Eight of the ten persons who stated an opinion said that the law needs to be enforced more vigorously, while 1 person gave a 'no' answer and another one gave an answer in between a yes and no.

The yes/no answer came from June Topolinski, who knows that the lower speed limit has reduced the number of accidents, but thinks the speed limit should be 60-65, especially on the expressways. And why should the speed be raised, then? Because Mrs. Topolinski thinks that if you own one of the newer cars, it's very difficult to keep the speed down. But she does feel that the "speed should be kept reduced because it lowers the number of accidents."

"I think that they do a pretty good job most of the time--at least they (the police) seem to when I'm on the expressway," says Mrs. W. Sommers. She doesn't feel that the people out here are driving any faster, but there are more people in autos out here, using the roads that were once considered 'lightly travelled'.

Both Florence Tripp and Mrs. Dorothy Trim object to many people's seeming impatience to get around everyone else, only to be pulled up short at a traffic signal or sign. They'd like to see police go out and hand out tickets for going above the speed limit.

Shirley Mulligan doesn't think that driving over 50 m.p.h. is safe, and that by cutting down on speed, the severity of any accidents would be reduced. "It would stand to reason that you'd get hurt less severely if you were in an accident at a lower speed."

Feeling almost as Mrs. Mulligan does is Dorothy Sprung who would like to keep the lower speed limit in order to reduce the number and seriousness of the accidents which occur.

Since a 55 m.p.h. speed limit is the law, Grace Myers, Dorothy Haase and Noreen Steele feel that the law should be enforced. They also feel that the lower speed limit is a good idea which should be enforced, because many people do go above the speed which they are supposed to go.

But, though Joseph Stadler would like to see the law more vigorously enforced, he also sees exceptions. For instance he "doesn't mean that you should slap somebody in jail for going over the speed limit, but the limit should be enforced more than it is now. The way I look at it, the faster you're going when you hit something, the more damage you'll do."

Where Can Senior Citizens Get Helpful Information?

We have been asked often for information and literature about services available to our community's senior citizens. We've had to seek out material about Social Security, old age and survivor's benefits, VA claims, insurance-processing, wills, retirement-planning, etc.

We've become a kind of Information Center from which senior citizens (Or anyone else for that matter) may receive pamphlets, reading lists, and even free advice on "where to find it" for all manner of important data.

We sometimes speak before Adult and School Groups on these subjects and others pertaining to funerals. We'd be glad to speak to your group.

If you have questions on some of these topics, we'll try to help you get the answers. There's a wide range of source material, some of which we have and others we can help you locate.

Mr. Eugene K. Pool, J.D. of Holly, and Ms. Roberta L. McIntosh of Orion Township, announce the engagement of their daughter Suzanne Marie Pool, of Clarkston, to Douglas Charles Rogers, also of Clarkston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Rogers, Jr. of Union Lake.

They are planning to be wed on October 28, 1978 in Orchard Lake, and a reception immediately following in Waterford.

They will be honeymooning in Niagara Falls following the service.

Suzanne attends Oakland Community College, and works at the Oakland County Health Division.

Douglas attended Kirtland Community College in Roscommon, and works with R.E. Dailey Construction Co. in Southfield.

The Holly Branch

by Brenda J. Kociemba

On October 18, Holly commemorated a Christmas stamp in the High School. The stamp has on it a hobby horse and was designed by Ellen Stallcup, a Holly artist.

For the special commemoration the Northwest Oakland Historical Society provided a special envelope which reads, "Season Greetings" from Holly Michigan.

If you would still like to order some envelopes the address is Chairman Gladys MacArthur, 411 East Maple Street, Holly, Michigan.

Homecoming at Holly Senior High was great and eventful as usual. Even the great delay in dates, because of teacher's striking was not thought of during that week. The fun started by the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, Jill Stack and her court, on Friday. On Monday the Powder Puff game took place with junior girls playing the senior girls. Then on Friday the Homecoming parade at 1:15 ran through the middle of town. At 8:00 that same day the game between Holly and Lapeer East began. Then after the game the Homecoming dance, which was semi-formal, occurred.

Clarkston Choral to Present "Sound Off to Music"

The Choral Department at Clarkston High School will present its first concert tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theatre. Entitled "Sound Off to Music," the performance features the Mixed, Varsity and Madrigal choirs, as well as the Choralaires and the Fortissimos. The music to be performed is varied and includes songs from "Wayfaring Stranger", "Thy Will be Done", to "Top of the World" and "Grease". The Madrigals will be wearing this year's costumes for the first time.

The entire concert will be under the direction of Grayce Warren. This is the earliest choral performance the department has ever presented. Upcoming activities include the annual Christmas concert, a Jazz/Rock concert, and a Spring concert.

Clarkston Weaver Interprets Nature Through Tapestry

by Carol Balzarini

Beginning November 2 for ten days, Barbara Kiger of Clarkston will participate in a show and sale called Five Weavers at the Somerset Mall. The other four are from Rochester, Birmingham, Oak Park and Southfield.

Kiger has been a year in preparing for this show consisting mainly of pillows, wall hangings, throws and toys—a wide range of items. Each weaver in the show she says has a different style while Kiger herself specializes in tapestry weaving using fine threads and silk. She uses the traditional methods but adds her own contemporary interpretation.

She calls the results of her weaving "entrapments" because they are either framed under glass or encased in two pieces of lucite making the back visible also.

Most of the ideas Kiger interprets in her tapestries are taken from nature. One spectacular piece had autumn leaves as its inspiration. From a distance one would never know it was hand woven so intricate and graphic is its design.

Still another piece, this one framed, was inspired by sea coral, one of three in varying color combinations Kiger has done. In it some of the warp threads have been woven into the back of the work while others fan out around it in an undulating fashion suggesting the movement of underwater current.

Kiger has been weaving for the past ten years but only recently made the commitment to be a full-time weaver with a focus on tapestry and double woven sculpted forms and toys. She said its much easier now that she has limited her scope somewhat.

Once she has selected a photograph she likes, whether it be of autumn leaves, desert sands or rock formations, Kiger draws a design or "cartoon" of her interpretation of that photograph. That small cartoon then becomes one the size of the piece she will weave. The large cartoon also includes bits of yarn glued where they will occur in the weaving. That gives her an idea of the finished effect.

Kiger has three looms, a full-size Cranbrook and a 20 inch Dorsett, both floor looms, and another small portable loom. Her yarns come from a number of sources with a stock having been built up over the years. She is acutely aware of the rising prices of yarn saying weaving is not a "cheap hobby."

Practicality drives her to weave an occasional wall hanging and plant hangers to sell. She says they're quick work because they use coarser yarn than what is used for her tapestries.

A former interior designer, Kiger says she had some useful contacts when she started and has been commissioned to do work for a number of companies including Fruehauf for whom she did a triptych, a three-part landscape in shades of cream and gold.

Interspersed with the time-consuming and intricate tapestries, Kiger's imagination takes flights of fancy as she uses a double-woven technique to create animals and dolls. Double-weaving creates a tube and eliminates some seams in the toys. She has created purple horses, wooly magenta sheep, golden giraffes, and other fanciful creatures in addition to unique little pillows.

Kiger says her production isn't great because weaving has not become number one in her life. Her husband Bill, a lawyer, and their three children, twins Kris and Ken, and Amy, all in elementary school, come first.

The family moved to Clarkston a couple of years ago buying a house well-suited for displaying her weaving projects. A two-story foyer and an upstairs loft, shared with her children, give Kiger an ideal workspace and showcase.

Clarkston B-ballers Drop

Two, Record Now 4-8

The Girls Varsity Basketball team at Clarkston High School has to get moving and win some ball games--in a hurry. Already, half of this season's basketball games have been played, with only one round left to play and so far, the girls' score is 4 wins, 8 losses.

Last week's games didn't make the girls' overall record any more impressive, because the Clarkston team lost both games--one to Waterford Kettering and the other to Bloomfield Hills Andover.

On Tuesday, October 17, Clarkston played at Waterford Kettering, where they lost 69-50. Clarkston's high scorer and high rebounder was Pam Blower, who scored 22 points and and 18 rebounds. Also scoring in double figures was Kay Pearson, with 12 points, 8 rebounds and 3 blocked shots. Other scorers were Kelli Ketzler-6 points, Jeannie Odell-4 points, Lisa Steele-4 points and Rae Anderson-2 points.

Thursday's game was played at Clarkston against Bloomfield Hills Andover. The score of the game was Andover 53, Clarkston 31.

The leading scorer and rebounder for Clarkston was Kay Pearson, who had 15 points, 7 rebounds and 3 blocked shots. Other scorers in the game for Clarkston were Pam Blower-7 points, Lisa Forsythe, who was brought up from the J.V. due to illness-4 points, 5 rebounds, Linda Foster-3 points and Kelli Ketzler-2 points, 5 rebounds.

Clarkston's next game will be on Tuesday, October 24 at Rochester High School. The following Thursday, October 26, Clarkston will play at home against West Bloomfield.

Interview with a Psychic

by Joan Allen, Feature Editor

The opportunity to interview a psychic was definitely something I had looked forward to. I had done enough background reading on the subject of "extra" senses that I didn't expect the experience to be strange, but still wasn't prepared for the absolute normality of my visit with Shirley Lynch. It was as if she was an old friend who knew my family and me, and was only commenting on what had gone on during our lifetimes, and the probability of what would happen to all of us in the future.

Anyone looking for a "scary" or "mystical" experience, would have been disappointed in the lack of fortune-teller "trappings" and paraphernalia in the Lynch household. The intelligence of the hostess, and her calm acceptance of her extra-sensory abilities, however, are notable.

Shirley Lynch has been married for twenty-seven years, and is the mother of three daughters and two sons. She has lived in Clarkston for twenty-two years, and some people have been acquainted with her ability through her predictions that appeared in a column entitled, "The Third Eye," or have been fortunate enough to watch her demonstrate some of her ability at one time or another. Still others have been so impressed with her, that they have returned to ask for help in developing their own psychic ability, or simply to get advice.

It was a cold day when my daughter and I arrived at her house, and she had a fire going, which added to the coziness of the room. It was a family-type house, and my usual curiosity took over as I observed the living room. It was not an assortment of ordinary furniture that I saw, but a collection of interesting pieces that I wanted to ask about-but didn't-because I was supposed to be concentrating on an interview. I soon realized, however, that the interesting house was the result of the personal freedom of choice of the occupants. I felt at home, and that the house and furnishings had life to them. It was the same feeling I had when I was a child, and read books where dolls could talk, and anything else was possible. I wondered if a scene had been deliberately "set", or an atmosphere deliberately created.

I don't generally begin an interview with any sort of suspicion or concern that things might be different than they seem, but I knew that this might be a difficult interview to deal with in writing. My hostess was well aware of the difficulties. As a matter of fact, she raised the question of disbelief almost immediately.

"I don't care whether anyone accepts psychic ability or not," she said. "I don't think anyone should just accept it, but I don't think anyone should reject it either." Mothers, she feels, get away with a lot of psychic ability in regard to their children, in the name of "intuition." They have a "feeling" that the child is into something. "But, the minute you put a label 'oh, she's psychic' and all of a sudden, it's not acceptable. It's always a question of debate. Now, I don't feel that you can debate it, but I don't want everybody to accept everything you hear, but they shouldn't totally reject it either. They should just hold it in abeyance, and if it feels good, and it works out, and holds water, then they can accept it, but don't keep beating it to death!-Chewing it up!-Spitting it out!-Trying to find ● proof not to believe it."

Mrs. Lynch continued, "You have to have an open mind. I believe that everyone has psychic ability to some degree or another. You're born with it. I firmly believe in a past life and a future life, so it makes sense that you're going to come into this world with an ability that you're going to need to live this life to the fullest, to have your opportunity. I firmly believe that in a life you have two roads. Positive--and if you choose not to go on a positive road, then there's the alternative. You never go on one straight road--you go back and forth. I don't feel that it's a now or never kind of thing, (and I'm not upset about one certain thing--it's the total value,) because these are learning experiences.

I do believe that you are born, and that you see a blueprint of your life, and you say, 'this is the vehicle that I need.'

You come back with the group that you have associated with before. Not every life with the same group, but there's always an association in some form.

You see your blueprint, and your opportunities. You have this thing laid out, and these are the things you are going to do, but you have the free will of how you are

THEY MAY BE BASIC, BUT THEY'RE NOT ORDINARY.

Shenandoah's L Series wood heaters have most everything our fancier models have. There's the popular automatic bi-metal thermostat, the specially designed primary and secondary air intake system, and the high, large door for easy access.

There's airtight construction for longer burning, fire-brick lining for longer heat retention, and cast-iron grate for longer life. It's all there, and it all adds up to wood heaters that are basically a lot better.

going to do them. Either you make it very good, or you make it rough on yourself. It is as if you have the home, but you can choose to decorate it yourself. I think this is about the amount of free will you have. The more I meditate, though, the more I'm getting into it, the more I find that the free will is narrowing down.

So, you come in, and everybody dreams. Some people deny it, they blank it out. This is a kind of psychic ability. You can say it comes from God, or it is from your inner self, but it is not from your conscious mind. It is something that is beyond, and not exclusive with one person.

Everything you think and do radiates into a different type of vibrational energy and that can be picked up by anybody that is intuitive to that particular type of vibrational energy. That's why we get so many people that can pick up and see an airplane crash all over the world. They can pick up that particular vibration.

Now, the other psychics will not pick that up, because they are not tuned to that particular vibration. It's not that they aren't that good!"

She went on to explain that she has never known anyone who never had a psychic adventure, but doesn't think that it is strange that many people prefer to blank such experiences out, or reject them.

"If people dwell on such experiences, they would have to deal with them, and reevaluate right down the line, and it's a little scary. They would have to question everything that they have learned from their parents, their teachers, their ministers, and even the government."

As to her own psychic intelligence, she says, "I've always had it. I've never known a time when I didn't have it. When I was younger, I would have times when I was really sick, and then find out later that those times coincided with my mother's gall-bladder attacks (though nothing was wrong with her own gall-bladder. This is not an uncommon phenomena between twins, mother and child, and even pregnant wives and their husbands.)

I haven't found a limit to my abilities. I see, hear, smell. I am clairvoyant, and telepathic--things seems to flow. I can't lift objects, though I can make them light so I can lift the. I can't always so everything on demand.

When I do a reading one someone, it's like reading a book of their life, and I can't tell whether it's past, present, or future, that I'm reading. I just tell them that I see, to establish where they are, I read like turning pages, and establish a time that they know about, and then go forward. I only tell someone what they are supposed to know. If you aren't supposed to know more, I don't receive it, but I'll pick up things before someone comes, or after they are gone.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

by Marilyn Bridgeman

Clarkston Cinema is premiering a new owner. His name is Dan Daniel. Daniel, his wife Kathy and son Jeff have been residents of Clarkston for 7 years. Jeff Daniel's, age 7, and his response about Daddy being a theatre owner was one of ecstasy. "He is going nuts!" said his father.

Daniel, who is employed by the county, is very enthusiastic about improving the Clarkston Cinema. "We are getting a new screen. We are fixing the parking lot so all the traffic will go one way, and we are cleaning up the theatre to make it more comfortable for our patrons."

Daniel continued explaining his plans by saying, "I want to make it a clean wholesome place to come. I want parents to be able to bring their kids here and leave them and know they will be in good hands."

Getting better and newer movies is also a goal of Clarkston Cinema's new owner. Currently showing at the cinema is "The Billion Dollar Hobo" starring Tim Conway. On October 28 and 29 Clarkston Cinema will be having a Halloween matinee of "Old Dracula", with a personal appearance by Dracula himself supplied by Brandon STAGE who is presenting Count Dracula these same evenings at 8:00 p.m. at Brandon Middle School.

Starting in November Clarkston Cinema will offer Senior Citizens Night on Tuesdays when all tickets will be $1.25. Monday night is Ladies Night at the same price. Daniel has also changed the overall admissions at the cinema. They are now adults-$2.50 and children 11 and under-$1.25

"My goal is to be a community oriented business; to show good entertainment for the entire family, not just one age bracket," said Daniel. "If people will just bear with us until Spring, everything will be in tip top shape at the Clarkston Cinema."

I am glad that Dan Daniel and his family have taken over the Clarkston Cinema. It is a much needed attraction in the community for children and adults alike. I am also glad that the Cinema will continue to show family movies.

Now to continue a bit about "Count Dracula". Brandon STAGE will be presenting this adaptation of Bram Stoker's classic horror story on October 28, 29, 31, and November 4. All performances will be at 8:00 p.m. at the Brandon Middle School on Varsity Drive in Ortonville. Tickets are available at M&D Auto Parts, the Reminder, and at the door. Come for some thrills and chills as you see Dracula attack lovely ladies, do magic tricks, and ultimately disappear right before your eyes.

Police to Sponsor Christmas Parade

Clarkston's fifth annual Christmas Parade will be Saturday, December 16, 1978 at 10:00 a.m. The parade will be sponsored by the Independence Police Services. Anyone interested in having an entry, floats, marching bands, etc. in the parade contact Police Services between 8:30 a.m. and 11:30 p.m. Call 625-8600.

"Mind-Reach" for the "Non-Believer"

by Joan Allen

For those who are interested in learning more about parapsychology, a book called "Mind-Reach" should be available at bookstores and the library, along with a number of other good books on the subject. "Mind-Reach" is a good one for the "non-believer" as it has been written by two physicists who have been studying parapsychology through controlled experiments. The results of their tests and experiments have made them believers, though they admit that keeping an open mind is the most difficult problem they run into in their studies.

Psychic phenomena is not scary or something to ignore out of fear of the unknown. It is not a matter of looking into darkness, but looking toward the light of reason, and expanded awareness of man's potential for understanding himself, and the life experience. Refusing to think about something does not make it "go away." Truth is truth, and understanding truth is no more "scary" than clinging to untruths. Knowing the truth, in fact, allows us to deal with it intelligently, and in a practical manner. Trying to deal with untruths only leaves us wandering in circles, and completely frustrated by our limitations. Nothing will "prove out" or make sense if it is not based on truth, so we should not fear to test it.

"Mind-Reach" deals with that which is commonly referred to as ESP. Most of the tests cited by the authors have been done under well controlled circumstances. One subject sits quietly, concentrating on another person or group of persons, and draws pictures of a scene that comes to mind. In test after test, the drawing coincides with the same scene as that which is observed by the person or persons that the subject has concentrated on.

I experimented with two of our daughters, by having them study a picture chosen at random, in a magazine which I had not read. In both cases, the lines and shapes I drew were very similar to the pictures that they studied, and in one case, I was able to name the colors of the background. I simply closed my eyes and thought of a blackboard in each instance. There was no "magic" involved. I simply believed I could do it, which seems to be one of the prerequisites of success.

I think that my reasons for believing that I could do it make sense, though I was once known as a "doubter", that refused to believe anything I couldn't see or feel, taste, smell, or hear. Though I haven't always believed that I could "read" anyone's mind, I had certainly been aware that my children, when small, could read mine, and that the family pets shared their ability. It seemed to me that if a dog, cat, or child could do it, that I could do it too!

Now, there is a reason that animals and children do display a greater ability at ESP than most adults do.

That is due to the fact that they have not been taught that they CAN'T do it! Neither have they been taught that they SHOULDN'T do it!

Denying people the use of their own psychic abilities is like tying their hands behind their backs, or blindfolding them, and yet, every time a parent tells a child not to be imaginative, but to read the printed word, watch television, or go out and play, a little more psychic ability is squelched.

The findings of the two physicists in "Mind-Reach", that everyone has the ability to communicate mentally, and the ability to "receive" messages, could explain the power of prayer, and positive thinking, not to mention the most powerful emotion of them all--love. What's more, though we are perhaps standing on the bottom rung of the ladder of understanding, these first experiments in "mind-reading" should motivate all of us to think nice thoughts, for our own sakes, as well as others. It may help to better mankind--and it certainly can't do any harm!

Just One of Those Days

Did you hear about the wife who took a part-time job, but kept it a secret from her husband? She wanted to buy him a very special watch for his birthday, and with her very own money, because he would never "waste" money on himself.

She planned his favorite dinner, sent the kids to Grandma's, and lit candles on the table as he arrived home. Then she got the present from where it was hidden, and gave it to him.

She waited with excited anticipation while he unwrapped the package, which she had had wrapped by the store, and then gasped in dismay -- the wrapping clerk had mixed packages up, and the box contained a lovely necklace, instead of the watch.

Wife told husband the mistake, but he liked the necklace so much, he insisted she buy it instead of the watch, because it would be more pleasing to him to see her in the necklace. So, now she has the necklace, and has to go on working until Christmas, because she's so determined to get him that darn watch! It just so happened that the necklace was more expensive than the watch, but the store was so sorry about the mistake and disappointment, they told her to keep it at the price she had paid for the watch. She refuses to wear it until the watch is her husband's though, and they can show off their possessions together. That means another special dinner, but it's not often that "just one of those days" has such a nice ending!

Know-It-All Grow-It-All

DIEFFENBACHIA

by Bonnie Hale

The dieffenbachia, or as it is more commonly known, dumbcane, is a South American plant that is noted for its large green leaves that are either speckled or striped in green, white and yellow.

Dieffenbachia was nicknamed dumbcane because the leaves and stems are poisonous; they contain calcium oxalate, which produces swelling and irritation of the mouth and tongue. Death can result if the swelling at the base of the tongue is sufficient to block the throat air passage.

Plants eventually become 4 to 5 feet tall, but they usually need to be cut back before they reach this height because as the plant grows larger, the lower leaves gradually wither and fall off leaving quite a bit of bare stem.

Dieffenbachias do best in bright indirect or curtain-filtered light. An east or west window is ideal. The soil should become moderately dry between thorough soakings. All purpose fertilizer can be applied every two to three months.

The dieffenbachia, which has been around for more than 150 years, has become a very popular plant because of the adverse conditions it can withstand.

To stimulate new growth on the bare stem, cut the plant back to within 4 to 6 inches of the rim of the pot. This will cause the plant to branch out and new leaves to form. If necessary this cutting back can be done every spring. The dieffenbachia is also a very easy plant to air layer as it roots readily. Pieces of the main stem can also be placed horizontally in moist vermiculite, perlite or sand to produce more plants.

Some recommended varieties to try are: The Bause which is a hybrid that has 6 to 18 inch greenish yellow leaves with green edges and green and white spots. The exotic dieffenbachia has 8 to 10 inch firm dull green leaves with white blotches. One of the best is Rudolph Roehrs, whose 10 to 12 inch gold-green leaves have white blotches and dark green edges and central ribs.

Manhattan String Quartet To Perform at OU

The Manhattan String Quartet, one of the newest and most highly regarded of American ensembles, will present works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Ginastera in a November 3 concert in Varner Hall, Oakland University.

The artists appear under auspices of the Department of Music's International Music Series. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Since its debut in 1970 the Manhattan String Quartet has made its mark through its recordings, appearances at major festivals, and in concerts before university audiences.

A New York Times reviewer said "...A young group that plays with ensemble sense and makes up programs with flair," the Boston Globe writer called the performers "One of the outstanding new American string quartets."

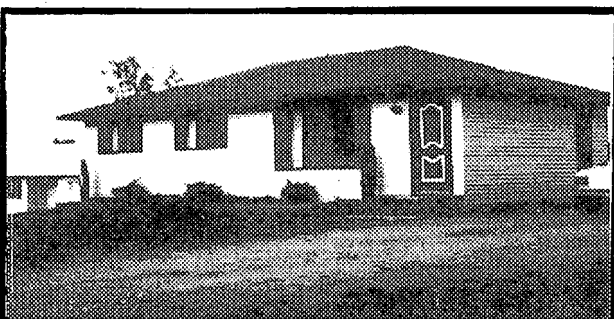

The members are violinists and brothers Eric and Roy Lewis and sisters Rosemary and Judith Glyde. Rosemary is a violinist and Judith a cellist.

Rosemary Glyde studied at the Juilliard School under Lillian Fuchs while the other three members of the quartet studied at the Manhattan School of music with Michael Weinstock, former first violinist with the original Manhattan Quartet. It was he who gave the current quartet the honor of using the name of the earlier performing group. The current artists, in addition to their concert schedule throughout the country, hold the title of quartet in residence at the Manhattan School of Music.

For their Oakland performance the quartet will play Mendelssohn's "Quartet in A, Op. 13," Ginastera's "Quartet No. 1, Op. 20," and the "Quartet Op. 59, No. 1," by Beethoven.

Tickets are available in advance or at the door. For information call 377-2000.

By Carol Balzarini

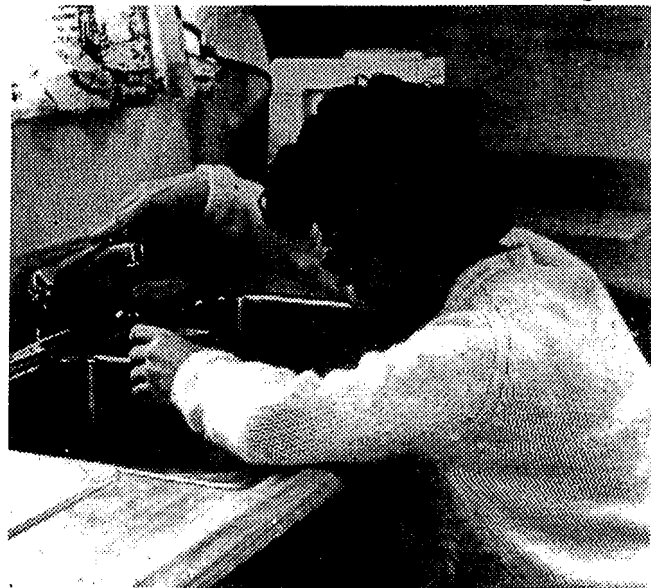

When Springfield Township builder Chuck Underwood first began work on a new house on Davisburg Road last March, he had no idea he would become involved in any legal hassles. He and his wife Carol recently have been sued for $200,000 in damages by the owners of Shiawassee Creek Farms who claim property values will decline by as much as forty percent if the house is occupied by a half a dozen handicapped adults.

Underwood had heard of a program designed to get handicapped people out of institutions whenever possible and place them in a home situation with as much independence as they were capable of handling. A friend introduced him to the staff of the Macomb-Oakland Regional Center, a division of the State Mental Health Department.

"My house was attractive and in a good setting."

Mary is thrilled not only with her new-found mobility but also with the special kitchen sink arrangement.

DID YOU KNOW that in Michigan a married woman has DOWER rights in her husband's land? She has this right even though her name does not appear on the deed.

To extinguish her DOWER rights, the woman must join in the conveyance with her husband, or execute and deliver a Quit Claim Deed to the buyer.

If you have bought property from a married man and his wife did not join in the conveyance, you may wish to check with a competent attorney.

Underwood said. "I knew they were looking for nice homes in nice areas like this one."

But when construction began in March, Underwood said, there was no agreement the house would be for use by handicapped people. The cost of the architectural requirements was just too high. After it was built, however, the group came back still interested in the house and the location if Underwood would make certain modifications such as wider doors, special bathroom fixtures, and ramps.

A lease was signed the end of August after appearing before the Springfield Township Board on July 5 to inform them of their plans and to get their approval. There were no objections from anyone at that time, not even the landowners, according to Underwood. He stressed that appearance was merely a formality because there is nothing in township zoning regulating foster care facilities. Underwood's brother Glenn, a township trustee, abstained from any vote or comment at that time.

During an interview with the two brothers, Glen and Chuck, last week, one important fact was brought out that had never been touched upon before. They have a twenty-four year old Mongoloid brother who lives with their mother and attends the North Oakland Rehabilitation Center.

Dave Mansell (right) and Gary discuss washing the car before it gets too cold and they need a fire in the fireplace.

The brothers told of earlier years when there were no schools for him, how their parents hired a teacher both for their brother and for a dozen other handicapped children, how active they were in forcing the school district to open up classes for special education after the law requiring it was passed. The Rehabilitation Center opened sometime after that providing a year-round program called "one of the best in the state" by Glenn.

Although nothing has been said up until now about their brother, Chuck and Glenn agreed he would certainly make them more sensitive than most to the needs of the handicapped. And as a builder, Chuck would be more aware of their needs in terms of housing.

Programs of this type, Underwood explained, are usually begun in subdivisions that are vacant rather than completely developed. "We were also sensitive to other people's feelings and investments."

Glenn replied, "These people are not affecting property values at all...those are beautiful sites with beautiful views in a fine community. These people are an asset to the community." He spoke as an area realtor who should have some concept of real estate values.

Chuck and Carol Underwood have adopted a "wait and see" attitude now that Judge Robert Templin has lifted the restraining order. The possibility of further court action still exists.

In the meantime, the handicapped adults have moved into their home on Davisburg Road with a great sense of relief following the fanfare and excitement over the whole affair. Tears were shed over the delays but they were all smiles last Thursday as they proudly showed off their new home, complete with kitchen sink a wheelchair will fit under, single lever faucets for easy use, and a patio for enjoying the autumn sun. Gary can hardly wait to wash David Mansell's dirty car or the next visit to the grocery store. Mary is still quivering with excitement as she relates her experiences with all of the reporters and cameras. David Mansell and the rest of the twenty-four hour staff are just as pleased and very optimistic about the future.
