editor's note... The Titanic, Overeaters & Olympics

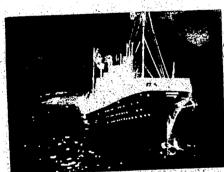

This week's Reminder features the research of the area's most ambitious Titanic buff Dallas Keffer. Beginning on Page 7, young Dallas retells the story of the great ship's sinking with precise detail.

What's special about this report are the pictures Dallas has obtained through years of correspondence as a member of the Titanic Historical Society. In researching the story, Keffer actually conducted phone interviews with Titanic survivors. That, he says, was quite a thrill!

Our cover story deals with a much heavier eublect-that of overeating. We all at one time or another have complained of eating too much. But, feature reporter Kathy Rush found a group that does much more than overeat once in awhile.

The compulsive eaters have grouped together under the name of Overeaters Anonymous (O.A.) to cut down their food consumption and lose weight. You'll be surprised at their success. Reporter Rush was so impressed she almost joined and she's the fittest and trimmest person on our staff.

By the way, Reporter Rush's story on hypnotism last week drew more phone calls than

The magnificent Titanic

I can ever recall a story getting. Our phone literally rang off the wall the first two days the newspaper was out.

The Reminder also received tremendous response a couple of weeks ago when we asked readers to respond to a question asking whether Oakland County should or should not purchase Pine Knob.

Because of the good response we plan to continue the question format.

Kathy Rush reports on overeating

This week we ask:

Do you agree with President Carter's vehement position to keep America's athletes out of the 1980 summer Olympics? To vote just fill out the box above. No name is necessary and we encourage you to write in your comments.

I personally feel that position is a mistake. I outlined my opinion on this same page over a month ago. At that time I felt alone. Very few people spoke out against the proposed boycott. Locally, everyone I talked to said I was dead wrong. I haven't changed that opinion. Boycotting the Olympics will be more embarassing to us than Moscow. There must be a more effective way to apply political pressure than to use our hard-working amateur athletes as pawns in the cold war arena. It will be particularly embarassing if we can't persuade our European allies to boycott with us.

Disagree? Let me know. Just fill in the ballot above.

HOW TO HELP THE WIDOWS?

Widows, widowers and divorced people hate to be grouped or "lumped" together at social events. All too often, a hostess will invite a newly widowed person and then bring in three or four more widows to "keep her company."

This is just what they don't want! Widows find themselves considered a separate clan" and they feel isolated in spite of themselves. Most widows and widowers struggle to get back in the mainstream and they want to enjoy the company of married couples and of other single persons not necessarily in their same widowed situation.

As a host or hostess, you should try to find social activities which are not always couple-oriented. Try to arrange group action and group socializing. Widows (and widowers) become all too self-conscious and afraid of being "fifth wheels". It becomes easy for them to retreat into shells of loneliness. The time to prevent this is in the early stage of widowhood.

They Fight Compulsive Overeating with Companionship

by Kathy Rush

Although the trend of overeating, so prevalent in the 50's and 60's has tapered off to some degree, the tendency towards gluttony still plagues many Americans. Sugars and fats compose a major portion of our diet while Eastern countries lack for enough

The reason? Probably part of the answer. can be found in these questions. Is it possible to drive down Dixie Highway without seeing, "All you can eat" in neon -- to open a newspaper without finding a coupon that says, "Buy one pizza, get one free" -- or to turn on the TV and not hear a loud CRUN-CH and the phrase, "Betcha can't eat just one".

Certainly a good part of the problem lies with our tendency to associate food with love, with happiness, with satisfaction and even status.

"Do you eat when you're not hungry?"

"Do you eat to escape from worries or

Are you always going on a diet?"

Do you have feelings of guilt and remorse after overeating?'

"Is your overeating affecting the way you live your life?"

These are the questions asked in a newcomer's guide to Overeaters Anonymous. O.A. is a fellowship of people who meet to share their experience, strength and hope with one another in order that they

CHS Student Makes Sure "Titanic" Isn't Forgotten

Editor's Note:

For almost 8 years now, Clarkston High School student Dallas Keffer, since he was first exposed to the movie, Titanic, on TV, has relentlessly pursued the subject-obtaining every possible bit of information on the famous ship and the history surrounding

The Reminder has followed his career with great interest being the first newspaper to publish his writings. Later he was published in several other newspapers. He currently is producing a movie on the subject. We've consented to print Keffer's latest effort called "Titanic...The Unsinkable Ship" on the eve of the ship's 68th anniversary. The story includes a number of photographs from the private collection of the Titanic Historical Society.

by Dallas Keffer

"Her name like everything about her gave promise to something mighty and splendid. They called her "Titanic". She was the longest, tallest; most luxurious ship in all creation. Before her initial Atlantic crossing was to end, she would achieve another but this time unexpected distinction; as the first ship to use the code signal SOS.

"At noon, April 10, 1912, she steamed out of Southhamption (England), into the English Channel. That night she stopped in Cherbourg, France, and again the next morning in Queenstown, Ireland to receive additional passengers and cargo. Then she took to the open sea. At 11:40 p.m. some 500 miles from Newfoundland, calamity struck. Within three hours, the magnificent, "unsinkable" Titanic vanished forever in water more than 21/2 miles deep. Only the swift and courageous action of a small passenger liner, the Carpathia, prevented a greater devastation. Even so, it was, and remains to this day, the worst maritime disaster in the history of the North Atlantic.'

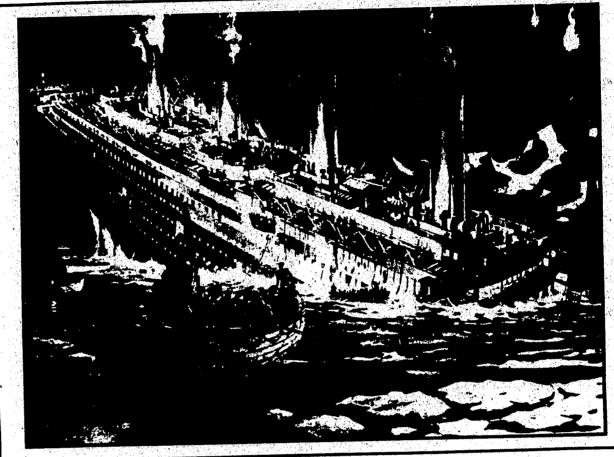

On the morning of April 10, 1912, the Ocean Dock at Southampton was swarming with people who had come to board the liner or just to get a glimpse of "the eighth wonder of the world". The South-Western Hotel and every other hotel in the vicinity had been crowded for nearly a week.

The superstructure of the Titanic towered high above the tops of the sheds, warehouses, shipping offices, and other local buildings.

Millionaires John Jacob Astor, and his wife Madeline; W.T. Stead; George Widener; Benjamin Guggenheim; Colonel Archibald Gracie; Major Archibalt Butt, Military Aid to

The first class dining salon

"End of a Dream." is a 1963 painting by William Muller which depicts the sinking of the Titanic.

President Taft, and hundreds of other people representing great wealth, including the Countess of Rothes, came aboard. All of the First Class passengers were extremely wealthy, many being multi-millionaires.

As the mammoth liner passed through the exit the tremendous force from her three huge propellors, each 25 feet in diameter, began to pull the large liner New York away from her moorings. The ship,-dwarfed by the immensity of the Titanic, heeled far over the crowds abroad her screamed in panic. All of her mooring lines snapped and a 60-foot gangway plunged into the water. The ship strove to follow the Titanic and a collision seemed unavoidable. Captain Smith quickly ordered the engines stopped. Some tugs raced to the side of the New York as she approached the Titanic, they took hold of her just in time to stop her from crashing into the passing liner. She came within a matter of inches of the Titanic's port side when she finally stopped and was pulled back to her

Mrs. Harris, wife of the American impresario, was looking down the side of the ship when she was addressed by a stranger.

"Do you love life?" he asked. "This is a bad omen. If you love life you'll get off this ship at Cherboug-If we get that far."

Mrs. Harris never saw the man again. He probably carried out his intentions and disembarked in France. But she would remember that conversation for the rest of

That evening, as the sun sank below the horizon in a brilliant sunset, the coast of France came into view. The Titanic sailed on past the sandy shore of Cape de la Hogue and dropped anchor in the harbor. There was a hasty transferrence of passengers and cargo from the new White Star tenders, Nomadic and Traffic, which had been built especially for the Titanic and her sisters.

After waiting patiently, Miss Edith Russel started across the gangplank between the liner and tender. She noticed how the tender rolled and swayed in perfectly calm water along side the monster. She looked up the side of the liner and thought for a moment.

"I'm not going on that ship, it's too big," she said to the White Star official behind her. "I have a feeling..."

"Oh come on now, there's nothing to be afraid of. What could possibly happen on a bugo ship like this?" he implored.

huge ship like this?" he implored.
"I don't know, I just have a feeling that I'll never arrive in New York on this ship."

He finally convinced her that it was safe and she went on.

The ship had now taken on almost her entire compliment of First Class passengers. There would be a few more in Ireland, but mostly steerage. The Countess of Rothes had even decided to sail on the ship.

Finally there came a tremendous blast from the ship's whistle and the anchor was raised. One more stop; Queenstown, Ireland, the next morning.

The ship went on to Ireland and took on the last of her passengers and cargo then took to the open sea.

By 11:00 p.m. the air temperature had dropped to 33 degrees Farenheit, and the water to 28 degrees; Second Officer Lightoller ordered the fresh water tanks below to be watched carefully for fear of freezing. The night was as clear as possible and the water was perfectly calm-there was no wind or haze and the glassy surface of the water was not disturbed by even the faintest ripple.

The bell in the crowsnest range seen bells; 11:30. Lookouts Fredrick Fleet and Reginald Lee stared into a remarkable night. They had been warned to look for ice of any kind.

The Titanic pushed on. Her long rows of portholes and lofty promenade decks were ablaze with light. Less than six miles away lurked the enemy. The ship went on at a speed of more than 23 knots (about 30 M.P.H.) with a long wake spreading from her bow.

Fleet and Lee were now getting ready to be relieved, their watch was almost over. The watch on Lee's wrist read 11:40 p.m. Suddenly, Fleet's eyes widened. About 550 yards ds away something appeared in the darkness. It was a mammoth iceberg, about 275 feet high and glistening in the starlight. It was dark blue in color where it had been rolling in the water. Fleet rang the bell three times, warning of danger ahead, and lifted the telephone. "Iceberg, right ahead!" he shouted.

On the bridge Sixth Officer James Moody replied calmly, "Thank you," and repeated the message to First Office William Murdock. "Hard-a-starboard! Full speed astern! Close all watertight doors!" shouted Mur-

Fleet and Lee prepared for a crash when finally the bow began to turn slowly to port (left) and the iceberg drifted by the starboard side. It seemed as though the Titanic had missed the berg. But under the water a section of the berg protruded and as the immense hull came by it began ripping a gash in the ship. The ice was dense and harder than steel and ripped the hull like a tin opener leaving a gaping wound 300 feet long.

On the bridge nothing was felt but an ominous grinding noise was heard coming from far below. In the empty first class dining room and the smoking room where some men were busy with a game of Bridge the jar was just enough to rattle some glasses and silver. In third class, located deep within the hull, there was a tremor that caused some passengers to fall from their bunks. In the boiler rooms and engine rooms, located in the very bottom of the ship, the workers were thrown to the floor and tons of coal spilled from one of the bunkers.

Captain Smith ran onto the bridge and asked Murdock what had happened. When he was told the horrifying news he sent for Cold temperatures and soggy conditions were the main weather features in Southeastern Michigan during March. Snowfall and precipitation in general were both above normal, as precipitation totals ranged from a low of 2.2 inches at Bishop Airport in Flint to 5.09 inches at Elizabeth Lake/Waterford Township. Locally, the northern Clarkston station reported 3.16 inches, and the eastern Clarkston station reported 3.26 inches of precipitation during March.

March was the snowiest month of the winter season to date, as the Clarkston area received 16.6 inches of snow during the month. Seven inches of that total fell on the 8th of the month, and another 4 inches fell on the 21st. The snow that did fall during March did not say on the ground for very long, though, as measurable snow on the ground was recorded on only 13 days during the month at the eastern Clarkston station. Through the end of March, the Clarkston area has recorded a total of 44.2 inches of snowfall during the winter season, and has experienced 58 days with 1 inch or more of snow on the ground.

Temperatures in March averaged nearly 3 degrees below normal per day. Based on degrees, producing 1070 heating degreedays. Temperatures ranged from a low of 5 degrees below zero on the morning of the 2nd to a high of 59 degrees on the 20th. For those home gardeners who are looking forward to spring planting, the average date of the last frost in spring is May 9 for our area. In my January and February reports, I gave some figures for new 1950-1979 climatological "means" for the Clarkston area. During this past month, I have decided to alter the methodology of determining these "means". Because of some urban influences which appear to affect the data at the Pontiac climatological station, I have decided to revise the figures for monthly mean precipitation and snowfall for our area. The table below presents both the old 1940-1969 and the new updated and revised 1950-1979 climatological "means" for temperature, precipitation and snowfall for the Clarkston area.

data from the eastern Clarkston station, the mean temperature for the month was 30.5

Andrews. The two of them went below and examined the damage. Then they went up to the chart room to do some figuring. After going over some elevation plans of the Titanic Andrews told the captain that the ship had about two hours to stay afloat. He was the builder, and he knew.

Captain Smith's heart sank. He had served the White Star Line for 38 years and had never lost a ship. He remembered that the ship had only 20 lifeboats—enough for only 2/3 of the ship's capacity. The British Board of Trade had ruled that any ship over 16,000 tons must carry 16 lifeboats. The Titanic weighed 46,328 tons, so White Star provided 4 extra lifeboats.

These were hopelessly outdated safety regulations.

Captain Smith went into the wireless station and ordered operators John Phillips and Harold Bride to send out the call for assistance. So those ominous letters CQD (distress signal at that time) flashed out into the cold, black, Atlantic night. Soon afterward Bride suggested that they send the new signal, S.O.S.

The first and second class passengers were reluctant to get out of bed and get up to the boat deck, but soon changed their minds; some thinking it was a party celebrating the Titanic's unsinkability. The women put on their clothes and some dressed their best with long dresses and large hats for fear of being seen in scanty night clothes.

They gathered on the boat deck as the ship's orchestra came up and began playing ragtime. Wallace Hartley and his orchestra were the finest available and their music was marvelous.

Finally, the crew began filling the boats. The passengers were reluctant to get in and some even refused to get in. "Why should we leave a big, warm ship like this just to get into a small open boat on a freezing night."

In the wireless room, the operators had contact with many ships, but the nearest was the Carpathia, 60 miles away and coming at beyond full speed. Phillip told the captain that she should arrive within four hours. But that was not soon enough. The water was now swirling around the fore mast and slowly rising.

The lifeboats lined up in the distance, awaiting the end which was so near. The Titanic was down hard by the bow and her lights now had an orange glow.

The ship's orchestra now stopped the ragtime and changed to the Episcopal hymn "Autumn". The hundreds of passengers still aboard stool silently and were ready to meet their death. Benjamin Guggenheim and his valet stood on the deck, dressed their best. Earlier he said to a lady in a boat, "If by any chance I am not a survivor would you please tell my wife that the last time you saw me I was wearing my English dinner jacket. I was prepared to die like a gentleman. It will make a nice story for her to tell her friends."

Captain Smith walked onto the bridge and looked up at the American flag hanging lifelessly from the mast, the country of the ships destination. He knew that the Titantic would never reach New York.

The bridge plunged beneath the water and still the band played on. The forward funnel stood high above the slanting deck. Suddenly, its guy wires snapped and it collapsed on top of hundreds of swimmers. The orchestra went under, still playing their instruments. Then, with a final reddishflare, the lights went out.

The bow began to settle quickly now. The slant grew steeper and steeper. People slid into the icy water and tried to swim away, but most died quickly in the extremely low temperature. The Titantic was standing at a slant of 90 degrees, straight up from the third funnel aft. With a final cry of agony the boilers and other machinery tore loose from their beds and crashed through the ship. The roar grew to a crescendo. Then all was quiet. The liner stood, poised, as if trying desperately to remain afloat. For over 60 seconds she hung there at 90 degrees. Then settled back slightly to stern (to a slant of 78 degrees) and began to slide beneath the glassy surface of the water. Slowly, but steadily, the great ship went down until the stern disappeared leaving a great effervescence and scattered wreckage where she had once been. A cloud of smoke and steam hung over her grave. Then the lifeboats started to row pack to pick up the few people still living in the cold water. The time was 2:20 a.m.

1,512 people died out of the 2,217 that were aboard her. The 705 survivors were picked up by the Cunard liner Carpathia the next mornina.

We want your child to have a super start in school, pre-kindergarten screening is essential in planning your child's education.

A birth certificate is required for each youngster to register for Kindergarten at the screening.

Parents should take their child to the elementary school they will attend in the fall.

In the event of a boundary line change, students should be registered in their new building.

may solve their common problem and help those who still suffer to recover from compulsive overeating. The only requirement is the desire to stop eating compulsively.

ARRANTS FORD SALES INC.

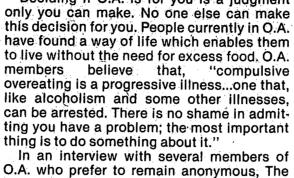

968 M-15 ORTONVILLE 627-3730

Deciding if O.A. is for you is a judgment members believe that, like alcoholism and some other illnesses, can be arrested. There is no shame in admit-

Reminder gained insight to the organization. Alice and Jean, current members of the program both claim that O.A. is the only thing that has helped them overcome their

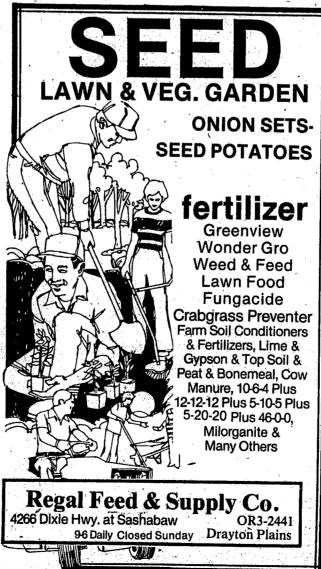

"I've been a compulsive dieter since age eighteen," said Alice, "trying every diet that's ever been heard of, yet not one of them has worked. I would lose the weight but put it back on as fast as I shed it. This is because no diet actually changed my ideas about food. None, that is, but O.A.

Many times," Alice recalled, "I'd think of myself as a foodaholic. Once I would start eating I just couldn't stop. I didn't know what was wrong with me. I just thought I was a very weak person with no willpower or selfcontrol. Everytime I would overeat, I'd hate myself and go eat more.'

Jean remembering those arduous times added, "Many difficult days and moments of frustration.'

Now these are just memories for both of them. There is a mutual agreement that,

"Since discovering O.A., not only has there been a change in weight but also personality."

Alice's husband, nodding in agreement added, "Unbelieveable. Before O.A., Alice wanted to live in a snail's shell. She has progressively become much more outgoing and self-confident...she just radiates. She's almost like a different person."

Compulsive overeating is a disease that can never be cured but can be controlled, believe O.A. members. They stress eating just three moderate meals a day.

During the first thirty days O.A. members are asked to call food sponsors (people who have belonged for some time), and report what they intend to eat for that day. It's this commitment to another person along with the group support that makes "Bingeing" an easier thing to resist.

Jean remembers a time before O.A. when she would "never forget to eat a meal, not to mention all the snacking." Now she finds herself sometimes accidentally forgetting to eat a meal.

Referring to her family, Alice said, "Eating was and still is a very important part of their lives. My mother weighs over 200 and my sister probably closer to 300 pounds. It worries me. Since eating habits are formed very early in life, I think compulsive overeating, in most cases, is a product of one's environment. It's not surprising that 80% of all compulsive overeaters have at least one overweight parent."

She is frequently called by new members of O.A. who are struggling through the rough moments. "It's a real joy to help other people, especially young people." Alice Added, "When I see an overweight person, I want to reach out to them and say, 'there is help -- but you just can't do that.'

Overeaters Anonymous meet every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Clarkston United Methodist Church, 6600 Waldon Road, Clarkston. For more information, call 623-9824 - Alice, 673-0325 - Jean, or 623-6504

Compassion, Understanding Most Helpful in Sexual Abuse Cases

Dear Carolyn,

About two months ago my husband and I found out our teenaged daughter had been sexually molested by a couple in the neighborhood who she babysits for. They doped her up and took her to a motel. She finally told her older sister. We reported it to the police but they told us they were going to pick these people up for shooting someone, anyway. So we just forgot about suing them. Our daughter remembers a lot about it, she says, but won't talk about it. Now she says she'll never marry because of this. Do you think these people are sick or just evil? And what should we do about our daughter?

Worried

Dear Worried,

These people are sick. Shooting at people and sexually molesting children are behaviors of very disturbed people.

Taking this to court could be very traumatic on your daughter. The courtroom hearing would drag out in detail just what went on. You must consider this effect on your daughter if you ever decide to prosecute.

I would encourage you to take her to a therapist so she can talk out all her feelings about this incident. Children who have been sexually abused have many guilt feelings and many fears. The longer she lives with those unresolved feelings the deeper her emotional scars.

Try not to over-react with her as this will increase her trauma. A matter-of-fact attitude coupled with compassion and understanding is the most helpful stance you can take.

Try to help her understand it was not her fault. Further, these people who did this to her are sick. Healthy sexual relations occur; (a) between two adults, (2) who care for each other, and (3) in private.

Thoughtfully, Carolyn

AAUW Talks About Goals

The Waterford Branch of the American Association of University Women will meet at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 17 at the homes of members Nancy Alberry and Vangie Chase.

The evening's program will be discussions on the personal goals of each of us-are we meeting them now? Are we likely to? What approach should we be using to achieve these goals? There will be no business meeting.

All Waterford-Clarkston area women who are college graduates are welcome to attend. For further information, call 673-7162 or 681-

Exploring on Display

The Exploring Division of the Clinton Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America will present "Explor-Expo", April 14 through 26 at Pontiac Mall Shopping Center in Waterford Township.

Over ten Explorer posts sponsored by business, service, and industry concerns in the community will offer career interest related exhibits, according to show coordinator Ann Berryman, a senior at Waterford Mott High School. Post sponsors represented in the Mall Show include Fleet Ambulance, Pontiac Police Department, White Lake Township Police Department, Oakland County Bar Association, Oakland County EMS and Disaster Control, Pontiac General Hospital, and Drayton Plains Nature Center.

Explo-Expo activities include blood pressure screening, para-medical exhibits, camping crafts, fire building, scuba diving, and information on police work careers. A mock tornado disaster will be staged on Saturday, April 26 sponsored by Fleet Ambulance and Oakland County EMS and Disaster Control explorers.
