editor's note

Although the major thrust of this week's Reminder has to do with energy saving methods, it's worth noting another problem we as Americans will have to deal with in the 1980's.

Everyone seems to be aware of the necessity to conserve energy. That's been a major goal of this country and its citizens for a couple of years now.

But looming on the horizon is a far more ominous problem and the people of Davisburg and surrounding areas experienced it first hand a year ago.

The problem is toxic chemical wastes and how to dispose of them. Time Magazine in its cover story this week revealed some frightening claims.

The dumpsites on Shindler and DeMode Roads are not uncommon. There are thousands larger nationwide. Nor is the contamination of drinking water. That too is happening all over. In Michigan alone, inspectors have found 300 sites where wastes have polluted ground water.

Clearly, private industry with government aid, must construct safe disposal sites. Legislation currently being considered could provide up to $4 billion for clean-up of waste spills and dumps. But despite having the necessary technology available, very little has been done to build safe waste sites.

One of the major hold-ups is that people and governmental units across the nation are refusing to allow their neighborhoods to be used for chemical waste dumps. Everyone seems to agree they're needed, but no one wants them in their backyard.

Clarkston High School's rise to the top in football seems to parallel the achievements of the Detroit Lions.

After winning only two games last year (the Lions were 2-14) the Wolves have won their first three this season.

And they've done it largely behind the running of little 5'9" Mark Hughes (aka Billy Sims). Last Friday against Rochester Hughes ran for an astounding 160 yards in the first half.

On one particular dash down the sidelines at least four defenders threw their arms around the stocky legs of Hughes, only to have him bounce off and continue on for a 40 yard gain. Hughes and Clarkston are definitely contending material this year.

Dear Sir:

With great regret, we must inform you, the School Board, and the Athletic Director that we will no longer be able to be present as a physician at athletic events held by Clarkston Schools. We will also be unable in the future to do the football physicals in a group examination prior to the school year.

Having done these things on a voluntary basis for close to thirty years, we find that our exposure to a lawsuit, as demonstrated by your recent suit, exceeds any liability which either of us can obtain for our protection.

We are very sorry to have to write this letter but in this day of a litigation conscious public the atmosphere for physicians has become fraught with danger.

Enjoying the sports at Clarkston, we hope to be able to continue attending the events as spectators, and we sincerely hope that situations such as you are confronted with do not mean the end of sports for aspiring young athletes in this area as well as statewide since, as we all know, every day living carries a risk at all times.

Sincerely,

The physicians who have provided coverage for Clarkston sports.

mike morrow's trivia

When it comes to home repairs I'm at a total loss. I'm great at breaking things but lousy at fixing them.

The last time my washing machine broke is a perfect example.

It was just chugging along when I heard something snap. This was followed by a gusher of water that made Niagara Falls look like a dripping faucet.

My first instinct was to ignore it. That became increasingly difficult as the furniture started washing out the front door. When I saw the dog float by I knew something had to be done so I swam to the phone and called a repairperson.

By the time he arrived the flood waters had receded, (a lot of water can dry up in three weeks). I led him to the laundry room by saying, "just follow the path where the tiles used to be".

He spent fifteen minutes fixing the washer and forty-five lecturing me on proper washing machine maintenance. It was apparent he felt sorry for any washer that had to live with me. I began to feel slightly criminal and cruel as if I had abused my washer. No amount of talking could convince him that I didn't mistreat it. I'm sure he had this picture of me kicking the thing while pouring in a harsh, high-phosphate detergent and cackling wildly.

The bill came to $47.50. 50 cents for the part and $47.00 for labor and the service call.

It lasted a week before old faithful blew again.

The first thing this repairperson (from a different company) said was, "who put this thing in here?" He held the replacement part the last man had put in. "The last repairperson" I replied. He threw it away and put in a part that looked suspiciously like the one he had just tossed in the garbage.

This time the bill was $57.50. 50 cents for the part, $47.00 for labor and the service call, and $10.00 for removal of the old part.

It lasted two weeks before it blew again.

I became determined to fix it myself. I took it apart and repaired it according to the owners manual (which I realized too late was written in Japanese).

When I was done I found several parts that I forgot to put back in. Fortunately they didn't look very important so I just kicked them under the dryer.

That was three weeks ago and it hasn't leaked a drop since then.

Now if I could only get it to start.

SHOULD CHILDREN ATTEND FUNERALS?

One answer to this question is provided by Rabbi Earl A. Grollman, D.D. who has written extensively on death and how it relates to a child. In the prologue of his book Explaining Death to Children, he states: "Recognized child authorities have come to the conclusion that not only is it correct to permit a child to attend a funeral, but from approximately the age of seven, a child should be encouraged to attend."

A child is an integral part of the family and as such it is important that he or she participate with the family on all important occasions. The funeral, although a sad occasion, is one of such importance.

It will help the child learn how to react to death and how to handle the grief experience. To be excluded from any such important family experience could be the beginning of great emotional distress.

Exclusion can provide the breeding ground for destructive fantasies and can crumble the feeling of security a child enjoys as an accepted member of the family.

Call us if you'd like to discuss this in greater depth.

Tax Plans Explained at Clarkston Debate

Tisch Wins Most Applause

by Mike Wilcox

Representatives of the three tax proposals to appear on the November General Election ballot, debated, in front of an audience of 80 people last Thursday in the Clarkston High School Little Theatre.

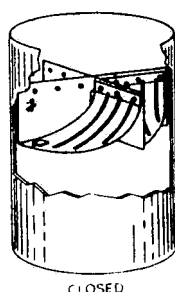

Although the audience politely applauded Kay Cushman, Michigan League of Women Voters President, who spoke on behalf of the Smith-Bullard Plan, and Pat McCarthy, executive assistant to the State Budget Director, who supported the Coalition for Property Tax Reduction, most of the applause was reserved for Dick Jacobs.

Jacobs, a manufacturer's representative from Grand Blanc and a member of the Libertarian Party, spoke forcefully for the Tisch Tax Cut.

Jacobs said he jumped on the Tisch bandwagon because he was upset at how ineffective the Headlee Amendment, which he supported in 1978, has become.

According to Jacobs, "In 1979 expenditures exceeded 1978 by 23%, and that's supposed to be his (Governor Millikin) most austere budget since he's been in office (12 years)."

"I think it is time we put our foot down and called for changes," added Jacobs.

The changes Tisch has proposed are vast. At the heart of the plan is a 50% cut in assessed valuation based on 1978 S.E.V. That cut is extended to 75% if household income is between $5000 and $10,000. Those with less than $5000 income would pay nothing.

Another important aspect of the plan is that the legislature would not be able to approve a new tax or an increase without first taking it to the public and receiving 60% approval in an election.

Senior citizens, if the Tisch Tax Cut were to pass, would be exempt from paying that portion of taxes that go towards school operating millage.

Finally, under the Tisch Tax Cut, the State would be required to return 100% of the property tax monies collected to the local area in which they originated.

McCarthy claimed, "The Tisch Amendment would leave the State with $1.5 billion to spread over programs now costing $3.5 billion."

He further stated, "They would smile on us in Washington because we would get one billion less in federal aid."

Proposal C, said McCarthy, was drafted as a direct response to the Tisch Tax Cut. The Governor and others felt there should be a responsible alternative, he said.

Proposal C is actually a tax shift, on the one hand reducing property tax, but on the other hand, increasing sales tax from 4 to 5.5%.

The proposal could save homeowners making $20,000 a year as much as $250, because the increase in sales tax would mean business and tourists would be paying for more of the tax burden.

Proposal C, also called the Responsible Property Tax Cut Plan, has been endorsed by both major political parties.

Cushman claimed the major thrust of the Smith-Bullard (Proposal A) "is to provide an equal opportunity for public education for every child in Michigan."

A second goal, she said, "is to provide a bit fairer kind of taxation structure."

This she said would be achieved through Proposal A, because it calls for a 50% rollback in property taxes. Losses in property taxes would be made up in an increased income tax.

Despite the likelihood that the State would assume more responsibility in financing schools through income tax collections, Proposal A would constitutionally guarantee local control over hiring of personnel and determining programs.

Ms. Cushman said the League had taken no position on Proposal C, but flatly rejected the Tisch Tax Cut because "it offers no rational plan for funding services."

California Suite Pure Physical Comedy

Playwright Neil Simon seems to be on a first-name basis with the human psyche. His plays are like handbooks on How To Understand Why We Do The Things We Do and Laugh Besides.

"California Suite," one of Simon's more recent comedies, falls neatly into the handbook.

It's this 'play for fun, but remember the rules' style of Simon's that makes his comedies so right for dinner theatre production. Jack Shuelke, Brandon S.T.A.G.E., agrees. He's directing California Suite for S.T.A.G.E.'s upcoming dinner theatre at Spring Lake, Clarkston.

Jack says "Suite" is the easiest play he has ever directed, due to "an excellent cast." With a Simon-ish grin, he adds, "This is my first effort at directing."

First effort notwithstanding, Shuelke has bonafide director-like observations to make about California Suite:

"Two of the scenes are pure physical comedy, but one of those scenes combines the slapstick hilarity with poignancy."

"California Suite" is actually four separate

'playlets' with different characters in each of the four scenes. The opening playlet has in it a divorced couple (played the Warrens, by Andy and Betty DeWilde) Jack describes the scene as "funny but riveting. It's a dramatic confrontation between the divorced couple over their teen-aged daughter."

Another playlet involves a British couple named Diann and Sydney: "It's a disclosure of human behavior in time of failure--with an added element of mystery thrown in."

With Simon's sleight-of-hand comedy tricks that turn heavy stuff into huge laughs, that last scene promises to be funniest of all.

"California Suite" opens Sunday, November 2 at Spring Lake Country Club in Clarkston, and will run consecutive Sundays through December 7. For reservations or information, call 625-3731.

Football Lawsuit Prompts Doctors to Discontinue Sideline Service

by Dawson Bell

After thirty years of pacing the sidelines at the Clarkston Wolves' football games, area physicians have decided they can no longer risk the possible liability of acting as "team doctors".

In a letter dated September 15th, Doctors Rockwood Bullard, Durand Benjamin, Robert Buehrig, Al Hamilton and James O'Neill informed the school that "we will no longer be able to be present as a physician at athletic events held by Clarkston Schools."

Neither will they be able to provide the free, pre-season physical examinations which had also been customary.

The doctors feel that to continue to provide these services would require an unacceptably high exposure to potential suits for injuries resulting on the field.

One such lawsuit (although it does not name any of the physicians as defendants) has already been filed against various parties in the Clarkston system.

Presently, insurance premiums which would provide enough coverage to protect doctor's actions on the field are so high as to be unaffordable either by the physicians personally or through the school system.

Dr. Bullard, speaking for the group, said, "We're talking about potentially terrible injuries, with suits into the millions of dollars."

"You could be paying a premium of up to $200,000 for coverage of that kind."

The Clarkston suit, which involved a knee injury incurred in a football scrimmage, is asking for one million dollars in damages.

Bullard pointed out that only last week a Waterford athlete suffered a neck injury that resulted in almost total paralysis.

"In Florida a similar injury ended in a 7 million dollar settlement," he said.

Bullard also expressed the fear that, if litigation becomes commonplace, "So far, at least here it hasn't", the future of all contact sports in the school system may be in danger.

High schools, unlike their professional and collegiate counterparts, may not be able to afford the kind of coverage required, he said.

In the meantime, Bullard said he expects to continue to attend some athletic events - but only as a "spectator".

And, if a situation should arise in which a physician's services were required on the spot, he said the Michigan "Good Samaritan" law would probably protect him from liability.

He said he would also continue to provide physical exams in his office on an individual basis or that the school could, as has been done elsewhere, hire a resident to come in from a local hospital to perform the physicals for some nominal fee.

Clarkston High School Athletic director, Paul Tungate, said that the on the field responsibilities previously attended to by the doctors would now be in the hands of the fire department's EMS unit.

But the "bedside manner" of Bullard, O'Neill, Hamilton et. al. is apparently gone from the Clarkston High School Grid Iron for good.

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Davisburg Jaycettes I would like to express our appreciation to Mike Wilcox and The Reminder for their articles and picture on our Crazy Carnival for SCAMP.

Mike was most helpful in setting up an appointment for pictures, and I'm sure this publicity is one reason we had such a good turnout this year.

Thanks again,
Cindy Carr

Dear Mr. Trim and The Reminder

It is with great disappointment that I read in the Spinal Column of your intent to reject my challenge to a series of debates upon the issues confronting the people of the 60th District. I sincerely hope you will reconsider.

Your refusal is especially disappointing in light of the pride you take in your reputation for responding to the questions and letters of your constituents.

Unless you have become too insulated from this district by your stay in Lansing, you must know there are serious questions being raised as to your performance and your philosophy of government. Clearly, these are not just partisan questions designed simply to put you on the spot for political advantage. They are at the very foundation of the health, safety and welfare of the people of our district.

For example:

1) The 60th District lies at the headwaters of the Huron, Shiawassee and Clinton watersheds. Those waters eventually supply not only the drinking and recreational water for our district but also for the bulk of the population of Michigan. You have known for 10 years of dumpsites in Springfield and Rose Townships containing PCB, PBB, and TCE and yet it is only recently that any action to remove these threats to our health and very lives has been taken. And then only because of the outcry of the people and their local governments, not because of your leadership. What else is so important in Lansing that the health and lives of the people in our district come second?

Groveland Township is faced with a similar threat in the making. Even if one accepts that the original Stablex process works well in England (and even there they've had accidents), that process has been changed to make it more dangerous here, by the inclusion of organic matter. The Groveland site is one of the worst possible places to construct such a facility. Why haven't you used every bit of your power and persuasion to stop this attack upon the safety of the people of this district?

2) Why did you campaign last time in favor of Headlee and then when three key votes came up, why did you fail to voice and vote your opposition to the "fraud" that the other legislators then perpetrated upon the public? Don't you believe that we are entitled to have you fight on our behalf, even in a losing cause? Do your good graces with your party bosses mean more to you than the honor of our votes and your office?

Despite the overwhelming majority of your party's control, why can't the taxpayers of Michigan get a reformed Worker's Compensation law, Unemployment law, Single Business Tax, or a property tax cut? We all know the drastic impact that the failure to achieve progress in these reforms has upon the employment picture in the State of Michigan. Why haven't you been a key leader in these reforms?

3) In the face of obvious school financing problems that not only occur throughout Michigan, but are all too prominent throughout our district - such as in Waterford, Highland, Brandon and Holly - why has your legislature failed to devise a better method of financing schools to insure their proper operation, promote a sound education and provide those activities, such as music, art and athletics, which all help to make the total person?

4) Most of us agree with the sound and humanitarian intent of the legislature that no person should be confined in a mental institution if a better place can be found for him. But how could you, as Chairman of the Mental Health Committee, allow such an ineptly drafted bill to get through your committee, so that in its implementation, even its other sponsors can't recognize their original purpose accomplished? Why are you so dead set against any local control in the creation of what some now call mini-institutions - those businesses set up in residential neighborhoods primarily for the benefit of the owners and not for those unfortunate people who live there? Why must it take two years for proper screening rules to be implemented?

I believe you must admit that these questions, in one form or another, are paramount in the minds of the people. The answers to these questions are necessary for an informed electorate to wisely choose its representatives. Were I not running against you, I would still want the answers to these and numerous other questions which I, as a citizen, do not believe you have successfully addressed.

I proposed a series of debates because there are thousands of people in this district who also want to know the answers to these questions. If you are proud of your performance and secure in your philosophy of government, you should not be afraid to defend them.

I respectfully urge you to reconsider your refusal.

Very truly yours,
Sharyn Gidday

Independence Residents to Pay Nearly 7 Mills in Local Taxes

With the approval Tuesday, September 16, of a one mill levy for sewer bond payments the Independence Township board finalized township tax rates for the coming year.

The sewer millage brings the total assessment to something just under 7 mills.

An anticipated debate over the issue failed to materialize after George Anderson, DPW head, produced a letter from financial advisor, Robert Bendzinski, which discouraged board members from utilizing county held funds to make the sewer bond payments in lieu of the millage.

At the previous board meeting trustee, William Vandermark, had argued that the millage was unnecessary when reserves of 1.7 million dollars were available from the county.

Bendzinski's letter, however, stated that those reserves had been anticipated in his firm's initial projected schedule of payments. That, in fact, the fund was expected to grow to 2.4 million dollars by 1990, when it would begin to be utilized to meet debt service payments.

Although Vandermark stuck to his claim that the Bendzinski projections were "way, way, way low", another board member, Clerk Chris Rose, who had previously supported the immediate use of the county funds, reversed his position.

"I'm impressed with Bendzinski," he said, "I'm willing to accept his opinion."

Both Rose and supervisor, Whitey Tower, expressed interest in having Bendzinski return to the township to reassess the "total program".

As George Anderson admitted, interest rates have changed "dramatically" in the five years since the plan was drawn up. And the possibility that the assessment will be readjusted again in the future appears fairly good.

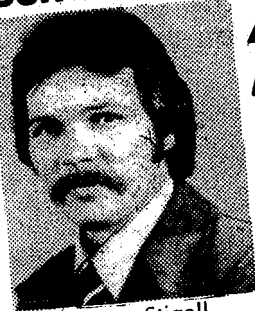

For now, property holders in Independence Township outside the Village of Clarkston (which has a separate structure) will be funded as follows:

Fire--2.86 mills
Police--.93 mills
General fund--1.31 mills
Safety paths--.5 mills
Land purchase--.29 mills
Sewer--1 mill

A hypothetical taxpayer, holding property assessed at $40,000, can then expect to pay approximately $280 in township taxes for 1981.

Michigan National Bank representatives and local political figures help cut the ribbon to officially open the Bank's Clarkston Branch.

Michigan National Opens Clarkston Branch

Those aren't mushrooms you see cropping up at the interchange of Dixie Highway, M-15 and Maybee Road, they're banks.

The latest, Michigan National, held its grand opening ceremonies on Wednesday, September 17. The event featured apple pie, coffee and a collection of local notables and bank officers. On hand for the ribbon cutting (a string of dollar bills) were Oakland County prosecuting attorney, Brooks Patterson Independence Township supervisor, Floyd Tower and Waterford supervisor, Jim Seeterlin.

The Clarkston branch of Michigan National is actually an office of Mid Michigan, one of the 24 different banks in the Michigan National family.

Its operations are limited by Michigan Law which requires banks to open branches no farther than twenty-five miles from the home office, in this case Flint.

President of Mid Michigan, Robert Dailey, points out that there are, however, advantages to operating under the Michigan National umbrella.

Privileges usually reserved for bank account holders, like check cashing, savings transfers and money card transactions, can be performed by customers of Mid Michigan at any of the Michigan National locations across the state.

The Clarkston branch will also offer "full service" on the spot, including safety deposit boxes, trust services and real estate mortgages.

Dailey says, "Our branch offices are out here on their own. We don't want to say to them, 'Look this is how we do it in Flint.'"

Our branch managers can make their own decisions."

The manager of the Clarkston bank will be, Bert Bojesen. In seven years with Mid Michigan Bert has opened three branches.

He hopes that experience will give him the competitive edge in the new market.

Chances are he'll need it. With four new banks within shouting distance of each other, prospective customers can afford to be selective.

But President Dailey says he isn't worried. "We're good enough to compete."

All You Need to Know About Woodstoves

One energy resource this country isn't short of is a variety of reliable wood stoves. The choice of style and design is staggering, with new models and manufacturers appearing every winter. But if you've never owned a wood stove and are thinking about buying one, it's easy to be overwhelmed by the flood of claims of efficiency, convenience of operation, and innovative design. The list of possible choices is far too large to cover in a brief article, but asking yourself the following questions may make it a bit easier to discover what sort of stove fits both your needs and your pocketbook.

1. How much space do you want to heat?

Wood-burning furnaces will heat entire houses, but if you're looking to cozy up just a room or two, there's no point buying a stove so large it leaves you sweating. Although the size of the fire is adjustable to some degree in all stoves, a small fire burns less efficiently in a large stove, and a smoldering fire (the method modern airtight stoves use to control the heat they produce) generates more creosote than a roaring fire. More creosote means more frequent chimney cleanings. Or more frequent chimney fires. On the other hand, a stove which is too small for your heating needs is going to need loading more often and will probably leave you shivering just when you most want to be warm.

Wood stoves are sized both according to the BTUs they produce and the amount of space they're supposed to heat, either in

ALASKA KODIAK WOODSTOVES

Woodstove Heat By the people who know cold.

Fireplace Insert

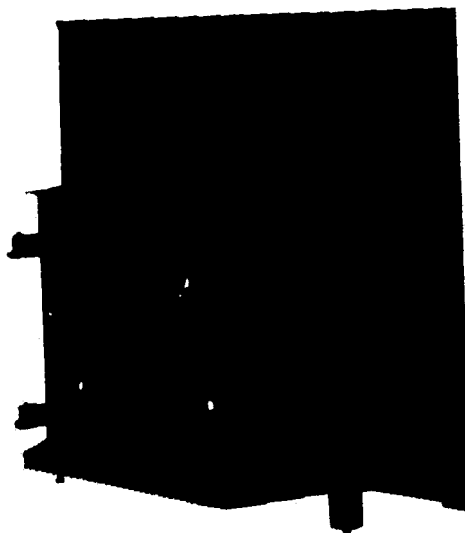

Design inspired by America's coldest and most unforgiving climate, ALASKA KODIAK WOODSTOVES offer an alternative solution to rising costs and in some instances actual shortages of conventional home heating fuels; WOODSTOVE HEAT - BY THE PEOPLE WHO KNOW COLD.

Designed to fit easily into your existing fireplace, the Fireplace Insert comes complete with blower for even greater efficiency. Available in two sizes; large size heats up to 2500 square feet for *10-12 hours while small size heats up to 2000 square feet for *8-10 hours. Heavy duty 5/16" and 1/4" steel construction, air tight solid cast iron doors, and the unique Alaska Kodiak Baffle System makes the Fireplace Insert an economical and efficient home heating device.

All You Need to Know About Woodstoves

square or cubic footage. Cubic footage is a more accurate measurement because it takes into consideration the height of the ceilings, but remember that all the manufacturer's measurements are based on better conditions than are generally found in the average home and are as accurate for mortal use as the E.P.A. mileage estimates.

Any stove's heating capacity is as much determined by such variables as the tightness of the house, the outside air temperature, and the location of the stove as much as it is determined by the stove itself. In fact, two other factors are at least as important as the stoves: The quality of the wood you're burning and the condition of the chimney you're hooked up to. Wet, poor quality wood and a dirty or inadequate chimney can turn the most expensive, efficient, finely-crafted wood stove into a poorly-heating, hard-to-light, back-puffing disaster. Conversely, a person who learns how to pack a stove with the right wood can coax a surprising amount of heat out of a seemingly inefficient stove home-built from an oil drum.

2. How important is efficiency to you?

A wood stove's thermal efficiency is based, theoretically, on the percentage of BTUs it is able to deliver to the home from a given quantity of wood. No stove is going to improve the amount of potential heat in your woodpile, but in the past few years significant advances have been made in the designing of airtight box stoves. These stoves increase burning efficiency by controlling the combustible process to burn as much as possible of the volatile material contained in the wood. In addition, they increase the ambient heat transferred into the surrounding space, with either a system of internal baffles or an increased surface area of the stove. Surprisingly, though the difference in efficiency between the most modern airtight and an open free-standing fireplace is about 50 percent, no stove manufacturer can claim much more than 75 percent efficiency for one of his products.

An efficient stove makes a substantial difference both in the amount of wood you use and the frequency with which you have to fill your stove. You can expect it to heat effectively for eight hours on a cold winter night without reloading. An open Franklin type parlor stove won't hold a fire for more than a couple of hours under the best conditions, but that may be all you need for some romantic heat in the evening. There are parlor stoves on the market which combine the best of an open fire and an airtight stove with little sacrifice in efficiency. If you have time and wood to burn, and an open fire is what really makes you happy, then get a Franklin or a parlor stove and stop feeling guilty about the sacrifice.

3. How much money do you want to spend?

Obtaining a safe, relatively efficient wood-burning system doesn't have to break your budget, but if you want the best, you're going to have to spend some serious money. Dealer prices for new high-quality stoves varied last year from under $300 to more than $1,000. An expensive model won't necessarily do a better job of keeping you warm than a bargain stove, but it may look better and last longer. That's not to mention the internal rosy glow that comes from owning and operating a piece of beautiful equipment. Quality construction always costs more, but a well maintained stove can often be resold for its original purchase price, even after years of use. If money is a problem, there are a wide variety of simple box stoves (some imported from the Far East and sold in chain discount stores) that can get you through the long night. Wood stove dealers can be a great help, especially at the beginning of your love affair with wood. Some offer service and parts in addition to advice. Some offer only their consolation. If you've got any talent with tools, there's nothing overly complicated about buying, installing, or operating a wood stove by yourself.

It is possible to find the right wood stove without buying a nationally advertised brand. In some areas of the country, very serviceable stoves are made by local welders and foundries. These stoves are usually of simple design, which makes it easier to tell what sort of care has gone into the construction. Locally manufactured stoves often run half the price of the nationally advertised brands. If you're at all handy with a welding torch, or have a good friend who thinks he is, there are plans available for do-it-yourself stoves made of everything from recycled oil drums to quarter-inch iron plate. People have been known to build very satisfactory stoves with no plans at all, but we wouldn't recommend this for the novice.

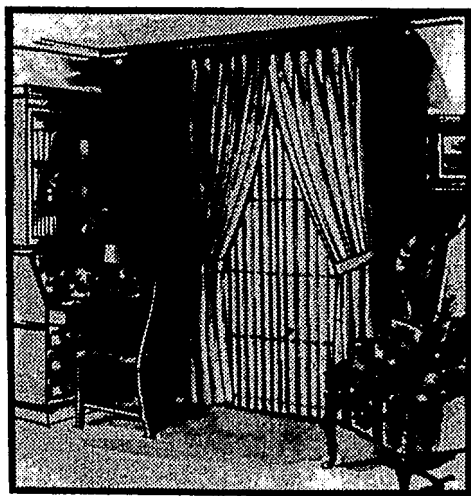

Looking through local penny-savers, garage sales, flea markets, and the like is another potential stove source if your budget is limited. The used wood stove market varies from pot-bellied antiques of questionable thermal value to modern airtights whose owners have been transferred to Caracas.

Buying a used wood stove carries all the same risks associated with buying a used car, but it is entirely possible to find wonderful wood stoves this way. Misuse in a wood stove is much more obvious than misuse in a car. Avoid stoves that require extensive repairs or replacements; spare parts can be hard to come by. Be suspicious of people asking high prices for "antiques." When buying antique wood stoves, it is possible to get burned.

4. How important are aesthetics?

If you've done any shopping at all, you know wood stoves vary in appearance from squat metal boxes with the aesthetic appeal of a shoeshine box to finely wrought pieces of exquisite design and construction. There are stoves that are covered with colorful tiles and stoves that look like capsized centipedes. Some wood stoves provide you with a view of the fire inside while other resemble overgrown humidifiers. Think a bit about how the stove you're eyeing in the store will look and fit in the space you want it. No matter how neat you are, the area around your wood stove is going to get messy in proportion to the amount you use your stove. Chances are, you're going to be a lot more dissatisfied if your stove doesn't look right than you will be if it doesn't work right. On the other hand, there's no point in paying a high price for aesthetics if you're going to put the stove down in the center of the cellar next to the woodpile.

5. What other considerations are important?

Does the stove provide an easy way to load the wood? Is the door tight-fitting and large enough to maneuver a flaming log eight inches in diameter? How deep is the firebox? Eighteen inches and two feet are standard sizes for firewood. Is the stove cast iron or rolled steel? Both are suitable materials if of good quality and sufficient thickness. Three-eighths of an inch is minimum. Iron plate will crack with misuse, and joints will require occasional resealing if the stove is to be kept airtight. On the other hand, steel plate will warp and burn out if not shielded from the fire, either by metal baffles or firebrick. Poorly welded joints can make airtight stoves less than airtight, which may be a problem if efficiency is important to you.

Does the manufacturer provide a convenient method for the removal of ashes? Some models are equipped with removable drawers; others must be raked out from time to time. If the stove is lined with firebricks, can they be replaced when they crack and crumble? How simple is the stove to operate? In general, simplicity is a virtue, especially if you haven't had much experience burning wood. And speaking of simplicity, how is the draft air controlled? Many airtight stoves are equipped with self-regulating bimetal thermostats which are wonderfully convenient as long as they're working properly. Not much can go wrong with manual, screw type dampers or the sliding ports.

Is your stove a radiant heater or a circulating heater? Single wall radiant heaters rely on direct heat transfer through the metal. Circulating heaters enclose the firebox in a secondary shell that stays cool. Air between the firebox and the shell is heated and rises, warming the room by convection. Electrical blowers are available with some models to distribute the warm air. There are dealers who think a separate fan does a better job. Circulating heaters are better in well-insulated houses with small children.

Coal can be burned in some stoves, which might prove handy. Have provisions made to let you cook on the stove? Setting a kettle on top of some stoves can focus heat unevenly and prematurely burn out the stove. Internal baffles are a feature of many airtight stoves. They lengthen the flame path and occasionally provide a secondary air source, the value of which is sometimes debated. Many wood stoves provide a method to heat either house water or separate radiators, with either externally fitting water jackets or internal piping.

Don't Be Careless When Burning Wood

When firemen found Meta Diesing, the 70-year-old Roseville woman was hunched against the front door. Her husband, Roy, 71, had collapsed upstairs near an open window after screaming for help.

Neighbors had called the police, but not the fire department because they observed no smoke and did not hear that vital word, "Fire!" By the time police notified the fire department, it was too late.

The Diesings were among the 18 people in the Detroit area who died last winter while using wood heat, nearly triple the number of such fatalities as had occurred the preceding winter.

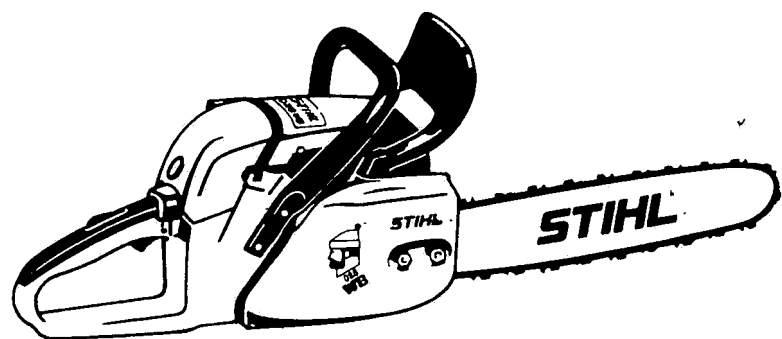

They are statistical verification of an ominous trend that seems to be spreading among suburban folks more used to flicking up the thermostat to generate heat than stoking a fire.

Unlike ruralists who've burned wood safely for years, many suburbanites intent on cutting gas and oil bills are installing or maintaining wood stove improperly.

"For many people, it comes down to a choice of either eating or keeping warm during the winter. Unfortunately, many people are also cutting costs on stove installation, and that's causing problems," says Henry Huber, a Michigan State University professor heading a Cooperative Extension Service project to educate the public about wood heating.

Burning Wood

generation or two to pick up the knowledge about wood stoves that people had back then," he says.

In the Dieslings' case, installation was not the problem. Awareness, possibly carelessness, was. Paper and kindling found within a foot of the Ashley stove the couple had installed two years ago had ignited from the stove's heat. The fire was minimal, put out almost immediately without hook-up to a fire hydrant. But there was still enough smoke to overcome the couple, say firemen.

According to the State Fire Marshal's Office in Lansing, wood burning as a heat source is becoming a major winter killer now that an estimated 200,000 woodburning stoves are being used to take the winter chill off the state. By 1981, the number of stoves could be as high as 300,000, according to the Michigan State Cooperative Extension Service and the insurance industry.

The number of fires, loss of lives and property caused by the devices has likewise escalated.

The Michigan State Fire Marshal's Office reports that, during winter 1979-80, fires caused by woodburning stoves and fireplaces totaled 1,199, with 774 due to stoves alone. That was up from 786 fires in winter 1978-79, 471 of which were linked to stoves. That total in turn had soared 100 percent from 1977-78.

Last winter, fires caused by woodburning devices killed 18 Michiganians, injured 235 and caused property damage estimated at just over $6 million. In 1978-79, woodburning fires in the state killed seven people, left 137 injured and caused property damage of $4 million.

"We anticipate the trend is going to continue, to 1,200-1,400 fires caused by woodburning devices, and 700 to 800 incidents from solid fuel stoves alone," says fire prevention officer Tom Campbell of the State Fire Marshal's Office.

Although woodburning stoves, rushed into production by increasing demand, vary greatly in construction and materials, Campbell is cautious about faulting the stoves themselves. Less than 10 percent of the fires actually were caused by defective stoves.

The blame in most cases was laid in improper installation and maintenance. The careless disposal of ashes, storage of wood near the stove, the installation of chimney connectors or smoke pipes through combustible walls or ceilings, rafters or joists are the woodburner's most deadly sins, according to analysts of accidental fires.

"As long as the cost of wood in urban areas remains reasonable, we can expect this trend in urban areas to continue. It's not a method of heating for someone who's lazy," says Campbell. "Anyone using a woodburning stove must constantly check the ashes and the creosote buildup in the chimney."

But laziness is rivaled by ignorance. Many homeowners assume it is safe to use the existing duct work in older houses, built to be heated by gas or oil. Yet many chimneys of this era were not built to withstand the extreme heat of burning wood.

As creosote builds up in dirty chimneys, the residue may catch fire, thus subjecting the chimney to a blast-furnace type fire that generates 3,200 to 3,300-degree heat. In a masonry chimney, the intense heat may cause the mortar to crumble, allowing the fire to get behind the chimney or into the wood structure of the house.

And, as Campbell points out, "Once your chimney is on fire, there's very little you can do to stop it. Some people have described the sound it makes as being like a jet airplane taking off. It really roars. The danger is that the chimney will fail."

Thus, even before buying a woodburning stove, a homeowner should have the chimney checked to make sure all linings and chimneys are intact, free of soot and blockage. Chimneys should also be cleaned at least once a year.

Hughes Leads Wolves to 3rd Straight

Led by the superb running of Mark Hughes, the Clarkston Wolves rolled to another victory, 18-0, over the Rochester Falcons.

The game started out slow, but mid-way into the second quarter Hughes scored on a 2-yard run. Rochester held the Wolves on their extra point try and the half ended 6-0.

The Wolves ran over Rochester the whole second half, scoring in each quarter. In the third it was senior Carl Fritzing on a bulldozing 3-yard run.

Then in the fourth quarter it was Hughes again, this time on a 9-yard run. Clarkston's extra point attempt failed for the third time, so, the game ended 18-0.

The Wolves racked up 345 yards on the ground and 16 in the air. Clarkston's awesome defense yielded only 96 yards on the ground and 56 in the air.

Friday the Wolves travel to Bloomfield to play their longtime rivals the West Bloomfield Lakers. Game time is 7:30.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

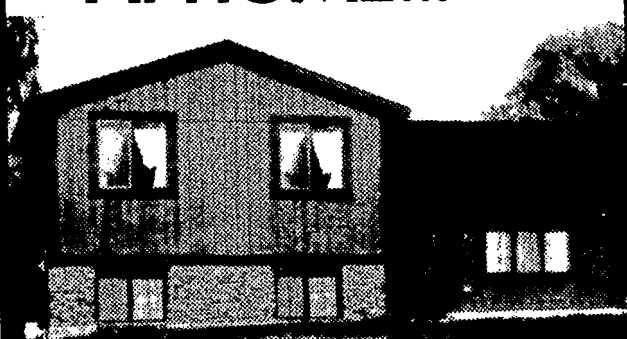

Beginning October 1, 1980, an additional penalty of $5.50 will be added to each 1978 and prior years delinquent tax that appears unpaid on the records of the county treasurer. This amount is added according to the provisions of Section 211.59 and 211.60 compiled laws of Michigan to cover the expense of sale at the next May tax sale. Immediate payment will save you this additional penalty and keep your property from appearing in the public list of lands to be offered at tax sale.
