editor's note

The Reminder's Dawson Bell has been following the battle between a proposed Lake Oakland Woods foster home as close as one can for the past several weeks. His latest report in this week's paper (see page 8) digs deeply into the charges and countercharges being levied by neighbors and MORC, the sponsoring agency.

Ironically, many of the same charges are being tossed around in neighboring communities. Almost every community in North Oakland County is experiencing a riff over the establishment of foster care homes. Watch for this issue to get even hotter as election day gets closer.

Also in this week's Reminder is a report on a lawsuit filed by Pine Knob against The Reminder, its publisher, a reporter and Hilton Hotels. Pine Knob is seeking $100 million in damages from each for alleged libelous statements made in an article when the Pine Knob Hotel issue was at its peak.

Frankly, that scares the "hell" out of me. At the time of the article, we, as a newspaper, were trying to present the public with the fairest, and most concise coverage possible, and I think we did just that. Never did we write an editorial detrimental to Pine Knob, nor did we intentionally slant any news article. Now, a year later, we're served with papers indicating we're being sued for $100 million.

Probably because of the Detroit Lion's fast start, this year's version of Sports Call has been extremely popular. Record numbers of entries were collected this week and last. For more information on how to win two Detroit Lion tickets see Sports in this issue.

The Reminder unveils a new contest next week. It's called The Cattle Rustler Contest and winners will take home $60 of free beef. Be sure to watch next week's paper for details.

The word sports is more and more being loosley applied to include a group of activities that bear no more relation to sports than the Pillsbury Bake-off.

I am referring specifically to those televised celebrity sports matches that pit stars against each other in some very silly competitions.

These very popular shows are starting to cloud the real meaning of the word sports. In an effort to clarify I offer the following observations.

It is not a sport if:

1. The chances of the contestants (and possibly the spectators) being injured are

2. You don't care who wins. 3. The contestants are dressed in cute, funny anglelittle costumes.

Conversely, it is a sport if:

1. The athletes make $200,000 a year doing it. 2. Broken ribs are considered a minor irritation.

3. The players care more about the game than life itself (someone elses). If you are still in doubt over whether or not you're watching real sports then maybe the following will clarify it for you.

You are watching real sports if:

Pine Knob Sues The Reminder, Hilton Hotels for $100 Million

by Dawson Bell

That as a direct result of the Defendants, The Reminder Zone 2 Inc., and Richard Michael Wilcox, publication of the slanderous, libelous, false, and defamatory statements, Plaintiffs were denied permits needed to allow construction of said hotel.

So read paragraphs 57 and 59 of a lawsuit filed in Oakland County Circuit Court by Pine Knob Investment against this newspaper and its publisher Mike Wilcox.

Also named in the suit, that stems from the publication of an article on October 4. 1979, are former Reminder reporter Caroi Balzarini, and the Hilton Hotels Corporation

The statements referred to in the charges were remarks made to Balzarini concerning the feasibility of a hotel operation in Independence Township by former Hilton Director of Sales/Corporate Accounts, Lloyd Stalcup, and the vice-president of Hiltor Inns, Salvatore Guarino. Both are named as additional co-defendants in the suit. In alldamages are set at $100 million.

The issue was raised at a time when Pine Knob's owners Joseph Locricchio and Gary Francell were scheduled to appear before the Township Zoning Board of Appeals and two weeks prior to the township referendum on whether to allow for height and use variances for their proposed hotel.

As expressed in the suit, Pine Knob feels that the statements reported to have been made by Stalcup and Guarino. which contained reservations about the profitability of a 600-room hotel at the site, unfairly prejudiced subsequent decisions to deny them the permits they required to start construction.

In the words of Anthony Locritchio, a Pine Knob attorney, "We're tired of reisstatements aimed at hurting our business

"In other words, we're mad as hell and we're not gonna take it anymore

Mike Wilcox called it "harrass ment"

"It's incredible that they would think a newspaper of the Reminder's size would have such political power." he sold "In a way, I'm flattered, but I'm also very concerned."

Neither Wilcox or contraction would comment on the specific charges.

The matter is not expected to be acted upon until sometime after the first of next year.

Yes, but remember: a will which has been properly drawn up and executed must never be changed in any personal or handwritten manner.

You can always change your will, but be sure to record those changes with the help of a lawyer to be sure that it still meets all the legal requirements of the state.

The court through which your will must be probated is directed to follow your instructions only so far as they are presented in the legal manner required by the legislature of your state.

These requirements vary from state-to-state and time-to-time. They are best handled under the guidance of a competent attorney. It is also recommended that, should you move to another state, you consult a lawyer to be sure your will meets the requirements of that state. Lake Oakland Woods Takes Foster Home to Court

by Dawson Bell

On October 8 residents of Lake Oakland Woods subdivision in Independence Township will be back in court in an attempt to convince Judge Hilda Gage to grant an injunction to stay occupancy of an adult foster care home in their neighborhood.

In order to win the motion, however, they must show cause" that occupancy of the home would constitute "irreparable harm". And they must do so on the basis of evidence that pertains specifically to the home proposed for Timberidge Trail.

In as much as the home has not yet been established, and given the difficulty of establishing the certainty of "irreparable harm", some of the residents are understandably pessimisstic about their chances of success.

Nevertheless, they remain convinced that the state is "taking them for a ride".

They feel, in the words of Bill Craig, 5139 Timberidge, that "the state is saying, 'This (adult foster care) costs us less than institutional care and that's as much as we need to know.'"

He says that the de-institutionalization program, of which the foster care homes are a part, ignores the needs and rights of both home residents and surrounding homeowners.

The home's sponsoring agency, Macomb-Oakland Regional Center, denies the charge that the bottom line for them is cost consideration. They say that integrating the mentally impaired into the mainstream of American life is sound therapy.

For many opponents of the foster care home concept, though, better treatment is just what state officials start talking about when they finish an unconvincing argument about why good citizens shouldn't react so negatively to the idea of having a foster care home next door.

Bill Craig has listened to quite a few lectures. "We were told that our only concern was our property values," he says,"....that we're not very humanistic towards our fellow man."

"We say, 'Wait a minute--people like Patrick Bossenberry (owner of the home) are after a profit.'"

Craig doesn't deny that one of his concerns is the resale value of his home. Nor does Frank Beam, next door neighbor to another Bossenberry-owned home in Dearborn, who claims a realtor told him the value of his property would go from $90,000 to $50,000 on the day it became the house next door to an adult foster care home.

What Craig thinks is so hypocritical of the state is their disdain for his financial state at the same time they are paying "almost double" the market value in their lease agreement with Bossenberry.

Craig says MORC told him they would be paying $1000 per month on the Lake Oakland home; Corey Krause at MORC now says the figure is closer to $900. The contract on the Dearborn home includes a three year lease from Bossenberry for $42,000.

Even allowing for slight variances in mortgage costs and incidental expenses, Craig says Mr. Bossenberry has to be realizing "A neat, clean profit renting his house to the state in an era when no one else is building rental units because they can't even cover their costs.'

Although Patrick Bossenberry could not be reached to either confirm or deny these figures, it would seem on the surface that the state has been forced into a position of paying exorbitant rents in order to find the facilities to implement its foster care program.

John Torrone, Community Relations Director at MORC, says that is not the case.

He calls the whole issue of profit-making and alleged rip-offs a " 'red herring', which clouds the real issues of prejudice and misunderstanding."

He says time and again his agency has asked people who objected to the homes on the grounds that they were really businesses if they would be satisfied if the state took the profit out and ran the homes directly, and they invariably say "No".

As long as the state does choose to lease rather than buy the homes, though, it seems apparent that the question of "corporate mini-institutions" will continue to crop up.

Corey Krause, of MORC, says that the state does have guidelilnes which set limits on the amount of profit a home owner could realize in a contract with the state. But what those limits are, in dollars and cents or percentage on investment, he could not specify.

It can't always be easy for the state to find the housing it requires for the adult foster care home program. Simply because the homeowner is one of the people who takes the heat when the neighbors get up in arms.

Craig says that Bossenberry has been aware of this from the first, veiling his visits to the home on Timberidge with vague references to "managing the home for the people who own it" and, as Craig discovered later, signing mortgage agreements and deed restrictions in which he had to omit mention of the home's potential use.

Craig admits that what he considers deceit and high-handedness will have little bearing on his group's "show cause" hearing. But he does think it is indicative of the state's whole attitude in the matter.

Equally intransigent, John Torrone says, "There comes a point when they (the opposing residents) just don't listen.

It's easier to confront deed restrictions and talk about profits than to admit that they don't want the mentally handicapped living next door."

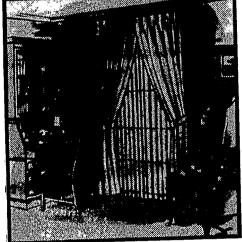

Whether Lake Oakland Woods property values will go down as Patrick Bossenberry's profits go up is not clear and will have little influence on Judge Gage's decision.

But Craig says his lawsuit to force compliance with the subdivision's deed restrictions will continue.

And John Torrone says his agency will continue to try to find the best possible treatment for those in its care.

pornography cause the couple to enlist the aid of a friend of the husband, a bungling cashier in the bank. They saddle him with the mission of disposal before Mum finds out, or worse still, the bank.

The hilarious bungling cashier dares feats of marvellous ingenuity, with the poise of a bull in a china shop. He dodges bank inspectors, bank managers, visiting policemen and the groom's mother, who already suspect him of being a little strange.

Disposal becomes comic despair. "It's family entertainment, in no sense dirty, and it's a hilarious evening."

Four cast members are recreating their roles of five years ago, Hugh Rose who is again playing the part of Peter Hunter, the assistant bank manager; Sandy Sanford as Peter's wife, Francis; Carol Arend as Peter's mother, Eleanor; and Pete Rose as Mr. Needham the bank inspector. Scott Meyers, new to the role, portrays the bungling cashier, Brian Runnicles. Other cast members include, Bob Arend, Jim MacArthur, Cheri Broome and Nancy Osmun.

Clarkston Shuts Out Potent West Bloomfield

by John Huttenlocher

The Clarkston Wolves showed everyone who's boss of the G.O.A.L. Friday night when they handed a well-fought 12-0 defeat to arch-rivals West Bloomfield. This was billed as the battle of the Oakland-Unbeatens. The game probably will decide the G.O.A.L. title, although Milford could pose to be a threat.

Clarkston started off slow. Almost too slow.

The Wolves couldn't seem to get the ball down the field.

But whatever coach Walt Wyniemko told his Wolves at halftime, it certainly worked. The Wolves came out onto the field and immediately took over. Clarkston quarterback Brad Sheldon started connecting with Kevin Krauss which ended in a 21-yard touchdown pass. The run failed, but Clarkston was on the board with 6. The next quarter it was Sheldon to score, this time on a 4-yard run.

Clarkston came up with 211 yards on the ground and 69 yards in the air, and the Lakers coughed up 58 yards on the ground and only 55 in the air.

With Rochester beating Milford, it looks like the Wolves are in sole position of first place in the G.O.A.L. league, and a perseems season fect possible.

children around".

CAYAC service is not limited to troubled children, however. Many of their programs are designed to foster a "favorable environment" at home and at school for all children.

Last year, with the dirction of Gary Pullins and the aid of outside agencies-Common Ground and BAIT (Business Association of Independence Township), the committee sponsored substance abuse programs for 9th and 10th graders at CHS and an anti-shoplifting film that was shown to area 5th graders.

Education is also targeted to local parents. Such topics as Identity and Search for Self" and "Communicating with your Adolescent" were featured in seminar sessions last fall. Coming up in November 1980 is a Saturday morning program aimed at fathers to help them define their parental responsibilities.

In all CAYAC, on a budget of under $45,000, reached 141 troubled children directly and thousands of potentially troubled youths indirectly, through the school and community programs, in 1979 alone.

Their continuing involvement promises to be every bit as extensive under the stewardship of newly sworn in chairman, Al Carter.
