County, Church, Township Squabble

These straw bales were installed along the eastern edge of the St. Daniel's parking lot last week, ending a fight over soil erosion from the site that went all the way to circuit court.

by Dawson Bell

Push came to shove last week in a dispute over the construction of a new parking lot at St. Daniel's Catholic Church in Clarkston as Independence Township officials appeared ready to serve a restraining order to halt work at the site.

The order, issued by Oakland County Circuit Judge, John N. O'Brien, on Friday was withheld at the last minute when township building head Ken Delbridge received word from the County Drain Commission that a soil erosion permit for the construction had been reviewed and would be approved.

The issuance of the permit brought to official close the dispute which began some months ago and came to a head when extensive earth moving at the site was begun on July 27. Village residents claimed that subsequent rains, and the absence of soil erosion control measures had resulted in significant runoff to the upper and lower Mill Ponds.

Under the terms of the permit St. Daniel's was required to provide a straw bale berm around the perimeter of the work area and submit drainage plans on the site to the county. It was their failure to do so, even after a stop work order issued by the county on August 7, that led Delbridge to seek the restraining order.

Delbridge said, "I think we did the county's work for them. As much dirt as they were moving over there, it should have been nipped in the bud."

He also blamed the parking lot contractor,

Church Parking Lot Causes Erosion Problems

the Stolaruk Corporation, for "shuffling off" the permit responsibility to the church.

The permit in question is required under the State's Erosion and Sedimentation Control Act of 1972 and is designed to reduce the amount of soil washed from construction sites into adjacent streams and rivers.

In general law townships, like Independence, the act is administered by the County Drain Commission. According to Evelyn McNeillance, secretary of the County's Erosion Control Division, the church was contacted in February and told an additional permit would be required for the parking lot work. A soil erosion permit had been issued last year for the construction of the new church building itself.

She said repeated requests for the parking lot permit were ignored and the drain commission issued the August 7 stop work order to force compliance.

But Delbridge said the county had "dragged (their) feet" and that without a soil erosion permit, the project should have been stopped soon after it began. He said the first non-compliance letter sent by the drain commission to the church, on July 31, indicated they (the county) would continue to "work with" the church before issuing a "cease and desist" order.

"You wait on something like this and a guy like Stolaruk is going to have the whole thing done," he said.

Delbridge said it was after he visited the site last week and found that the work was continuing that he sought a court order. By Friday afternoon, however, the drain commission had received the plans and the straw bales were in place.

"They knew they were going to jail if they didn't do it this time," Delbridge said.

The resolution of the immediate problem, though, has raised some other questions in the minds of village councilwoman, Ruth Basinger, and township supervisor, James Smith.

Both would like some assurance that the absence of proper permit requirements would, in the future, result in more of a burden upon the applicant than on those affected by non-compliance.

In this instance, the village received the stormwater runoff from the site and the township had to pay its attorney to file papers seeking the restraining order.

Basinger has drafted a letter on the part of the Mill Pond's Association asking Delbridge to explore several questions on the responsibility for and the timing of the permit process.

And Smith said he intended to ask township attorney, Richard Campbell, if some form of bonding procedure could be established to protect against a repeat performance of the St. Daniel's incident.

Davisburg Finds Wastewater Disposal Expensive

Davisburg's wastewater disposal problems don't admit to an easy solution and the Springfield Township Board officially recognized that condition last Wednesday by tabling indefinitely any action on an expensive proposal to install a joint use sewer system to serve the downtown area. Engineering on the plan had been completed last month and submitted to the board for review. The wastewater study was commissioned by the township in February to explore possibilities for disposal which would allow for further development of the downtown district.

The Oakland County Health Department has refused to issue permits for the installation of any new, traditional disposal systems because of Davisburg's very high (only 2 feet-3 feet below the surface) water-table.

It was thought a joint use system which handled wastewater for the entire district might offer a solution. But cost estimates of between $160,000-$440,000 for the recommended alternatives, off site transport and disposal, seem to have put a near permanent damper on the board's hopes.

Glen Vermilye, in making the motion to table, said bleakly, "I think we found out what we wanted to know."

Engineer Robert Gaines did, however, offer some encouragement to prospective downtown developers. He said, while none of the full scale joint use proposals seemed economically feasible, the county might accept smaller alternatives if they could be properly formulated.

The most optimistic possibility, he said, might be a modest "mound" system, in which a septic field is raised higher above the water table by the construction of an earthen mound.

"If property owners get an engineer and sit down with the county with a specific proposal I suspect something might be worked out," he said.

He said the requirements for a small joint use mound system would probably be both physically and economically more feasible than any other system.

The board adopted Gaines suggestion to include some information on the scaled down alternatives in the full report, which is to be circulated to Davisburg property owners.

IS YOUR HOUSE IN ORDER?

No one really plans for his own demise. It is an untimely event at any time. A physical check-up annually is still a good idea. And so is a check-up financially.

Is everything in order TODAY, the way you would like it to be if you were suddenly to die? Is your will UP-TO-DATE, if you have one. And make one if you don't.

Have you appointed a personal representative? Is that person still capable and available?

Have you gone over your estate tax situation with an accountant? Your trust for grandchildren?

Is your life insurance coverage still adequate? Beneficiaries still named the way you want them to be named and to share in your death benefits?

Have you indicated to your family the whereabouts of very important papers, safe deposit box and key, and your wishes for a full-service funeral and what its costs should be?

You can make all of these arrangements in advance, including your specifying your funeral service and its cost. We can help you do that. We have booklets that may help, too. Call or stop by for copies. And have a health and financial check-up soon.

Clarkston School Board Tables Gifted Children Allocation

The Clarkston Schools Board of Education tabled a recommendation from Superintendent Milford Mason to establish a program for "gifted" children in grades 4-6 at last Monday's monthly meeting.

Board members requested further information on the program, which was to have begun by October, from Elementary Schools Administrator, William Neff, prior to making a decision on the program.

Mason, in making his recommendation, referred to a 1979 board resolution which made the gifted program a district priority. He said those priorities should be acted upon if they were to maintain credibility.

But some board members were reluctant to go ahead with the special program in light of recent budget paring.

Ferdinand Sanchez said he felt the community had voted three additional operating mills (in a June 8 election) for the district to restore threatened basic programs, rather than for the establishment of new ones.

The estimated cost of the gifted program, which would serve 31 students in 1981-82, is $51,200, although Mason said that figure was probably higher than actual cost.

The gifted program would be designed to serve those children who might not be sufficiently challenged by the school's regular curriculum.

Two teachers from the district's present staff would be hired to serve as instructors (and their positions filled by teachers presently on layoff). Students would travel to North-Sashabaw Elementary, where the gifted classes will be held, two days each week.

Students in the gifted program would be selected on the basis of teacher recommendation and test scores. The data on each student would be anonymously reviewed by a committee of teachers, administrators and parents. No student would be admitted to the program without parental permission.

Neff said he feels the time for a gifted program in the Clarkston Schools has come.

"We conduct all sorts of special programs for students in special education, but virtually nothing for students who are capable of doing more."

He said the delay would probably push back the initiation of a gifted program to November, and lead to a greater disruption of classrooms, but that he was still hopeful the idea would be adopted by the board.

Sanchez, however, indicated he would like to see the gifted program integrated with a community education program (which was approved by the board, see related story). And another board member, Addison Hubbard, said another district goal, of establishing physical education in the elementary schools, might be deserving of attention.

The tabling motion was passed on a 4-3 vote -- board members, C. Vincent Luzi, Carolyn Place, Sanchez, and Hubbard voting aye, and Janet Thomas, Steven Werner, and Mary Jane Chaustowich nay.

The question is expected to be re-submitted at the September 14 meeting of the board. Meetings are held at the administrative offices, 6389 Clarkston Road and begin at 8 p.m.

Community Ed Coming in January

Until January of 1982 the Clarkston Schools will continue to be one of the only districts in Oakland County without a community education program.

But not after that, by virtue of a decision made on Monday, August 10, when the Board of Education approved the establishment of the program, effective January, 1982, and the hiring of a director to administer it.

Although some start-up costs will be incurred by the district in initiating the program, the board is working under the assumption that community education will become self-supporting within the first year of operation.

The program will be based on the recommendations of a committee which studied the issue through the course of the 1980-81 school year. It is designed to allow the district to better serve the needs of the whole community, rather than only those involved in K-12 education.

A full slate of credit and non-credit course offerings are expected, with the initial emphasis on high school graduation credit courses. Students in credit courses provide the district with state aid revenue which would be required to help pay for the program's costs.

The board followed the recommendation of Superintendent Milford Mason in adopting the community education program, who said the director interviews would be too time-consuming for the program to begin with September's school opening.

Community education in the Clarkston system has previously been administered part-time by Clarkston High School teacher Howard Webster.

Time
It's strange how years whiz by so fast, yet days are long and slow.
Some afternoons seem like a week,
and still the sun's not low!
And, then again, the seasons pass,
before you even know!
The days of raising children seem to drag and drag on so,
But the years go by so fast, you ask,
"When did my babies grow?"
You plant the trees and flowers, spend long hours with a hoe,
A few short years go by and their fruits begin to flow.
It surely is a miracle - God planned
our time just so!
The long days give us time to see each sorrow and each glow,
While the short years let us remember only things that helped us grow!

mike morrow's trivia

by Mike Morrow
I am about as light on my feet as a rhinoceros stuck in the mud. I've wounded so many people on the dance floor that my feet have been legally certified as deadly weapons.

A friend of mine, after seeing me dance and wound several people in the process, pulled me aside and gave me the following hints on dance floor etiquette.

1. Very few people are talented enough to do the splits while dancing on a crowded dance floor, and you most likely are not one of those people. So if you suddenly feel the urge to do the splits, please sit down as you are drunk.

2. After a full evening of dancing it is a risky proposition to raise your arms above your head to clap along with the music, because, even if you do use Dial this may cause the death of a few innocent people who are standing near you.

3. It is not considered cool to dance with your drink in your hand. In fact, it is generally frowned upon by people who do not enjoy wearing a Tequilla Sunrise on their clothes.

4. It is best to ask your partner before hand how good of a dancer she is before trying any of your exotic moves (especially if you have been drinking) or you just might "dip" your partner into unconsciousness.

5. Smoking cigarettes on the dance floor is prohibited. At the very least it is irritating. At the most it could lead to a broken nose from the date of that woman whose dress you burned.

6. Do not swing your arms wildly about as an unconscious date is not a fun date. People do not react well to being knocked out while dancing.

The cardinal rule of dancing, my friend told me, is to remember that you are not John Travolta. You are a mere mortal. Any attempt to prove otherwise will end up with you in traction.

Springfield Halts Gravel Mining Permit

For twenty-three years various parties have been mining sand and gravel from a parcel of land on the southeastern border of Springfield Township without a permit.

Last week, the Thompson-McCully Company appeared before the township board to request the issuance of a permit and they may end up sorry they tried to be honest.

The company wants the township to sanction continued mining on the site, which is located northwest of White Lake Road, to periodically serve their asphalt plant, which lies in Independence Township.

But the township board's discussion of the question last week brought to light a condition which could serve to make the issuance of a permit more difficult than had been anticipated.

Thompson-McCully officials told the board that no mining has taken place since last year and it is possible that the site's status as a non-conforming use may have lapsed. The property, owned by the Detroit Edison Company, is zoned residentially and mining has been allowed since the township adopted its mining ordinance in 1973 only because it was an existing non-conforming use. But if the use has been discontinued for more than six months under the terms of the ordinance it could be void, according to township attorney Tim Patterson.

He said the company could then be required to seek rezoning and, in contrast to an existing non-conforming use, be required to meet the full terms of the mining ordinance. The ordinance carries fairly strict guidelines for the development and reclamation of mining sites, and empowers the township to require a performance bond from the developer.

Patterson said the company had offered to comply with the terms of the ordinance under the permit, but the township's regulatory power would be reduced. Three sand and gravel mining operations presently operate in Springfield, all under "grandfathered", non-conforming clauses.

Thompson-McCully wants to extract the aggregate material over a period of 10 to 20 years for contingency use at the asphalt plant. They say the mining would probably take place on three different occasions of eight weeks each over that period. Approximately 300,000 tons of sand and gravel would be removed.

Township supervisor Collin Walls said the company had come in of its own accord to seek the permit, and that he had not known, prior to their request, that the property was distinct from another mining site in the same area.

"It wasn't something where they got caught and then came to see us," he said.

The board tabled a decision on the permit request until the question of continued use could be looked into.

Go Carts Too Loud -- Race Cancelled

A nationally sanctioned go-cart race scheduled for last weekend at the Waterford Hill raceway in Clarkston was cancelled when race officials conceded they could not meet township noise ordinance requirements.

The cancellation of the race came after Independence Township had agreed to allow it if noise levels could be kept at minimum levels established in test trials Tuesday.

The township's ordinance prohibits off-site noise levels of higher than 55 decibels. Two go-carts in the trials registered at 76 decibels, but township officials agreed to permit the race anyway if that level was not exceeded.

The township first became involved when neighboring residents to the Waterford Road track complained of the noise generated in practice by the high-powered go-carts.

There have been long standing disputes between those neighbors and the track's operators over the weekend racing. And the track is regulated under a court ordered consent agreement which specifies number of races and practice days per month.

CHS Marching Band Picks Up Fall Tempo

The Clarkston High School Marching Band began the first phase of the 1981 fall season last week with a five-day band camp held on the school's athletic fields.

105 students attended the camp which began Monday morning at 8:15 and ended late Friday in Ypsilanti at a Star Spangled Banner concert competition.

Each of the sessions began at 8:15 and lasted until 8:30 p.m., as band members worked on the music and marching that will serve them throughout the football season.

The marching band and the school's color guard will perform at all home football games and, by special invitation, at the home opener of Eastern Michigan University on September 12 in Ypsilanti.

Pictured above, at left, the troops close ranks in a practice formation. And, at right, Chapman directs the rifle carrying arm of the color guard.

Bids Out on Fire Station No. 2

It may be only one piece at a time but Springfield Township is committed to the construction of a second fire station.

And with that condition in mind the township board moved last Wednesday to authorize the bidding process for the facility to be located at the corner of Dixie Highway and Rattalee Lake Road.

The board has been socking away funding for the new station from federal and fire fund monies for the past two years, but township officials still fear that the cash on hand ($98,800) may not be enough to cover the costs of a completed building.

Plans for the new station include 3 bays, a hose tower, a dispatch room, bathroom facilities and a community room. Original estimates for construction were pegged at around $148,000.

But by leaving some portions of the building unfinished or by self-contracting construction the township could cut costs significantly, according to supervisor Collin Walls.

He suggested the project be put up for bids, with breakdowns included for phased construction. Both the hose tower and the community room could conceivably be completed at a later date, Walls said.

Trustee William Whitley agreed: "We need to know what the whole thing is going to cost and then trim whatever is necessary."

Walls cautioned that the self-contracting concept could present deceptive savings if it also required the township to hire someone to handle construction supervision.

But, he said, "We can definitely build an apparatus room and put a bathroom in it."

The township presently has two new fire department vehicles, a tanker and an emergency medical van, that will remain homeless until the new station is erected.

Correction

A typographical error appeared in last week's Reminder interview with Clarkston Schools Superintendent, Milford Mason. The opening day of school year 1981-82 was given as September 7; the correct date is Wednesday, September 2. We apologize for the error.

LARGE HOME PLAN ALL ON ONE FLOOR

© By W.D. FARMER

Porch entry is to separate foyer. A formal dining room is shown but no formal living room. The dining room has a unique bow window.

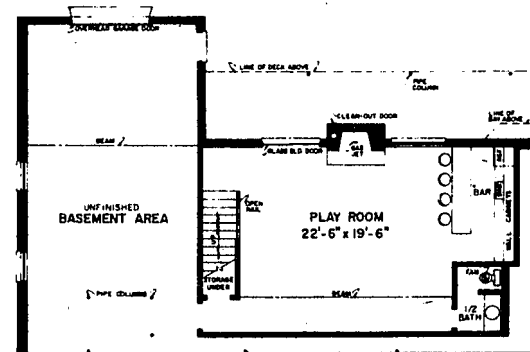

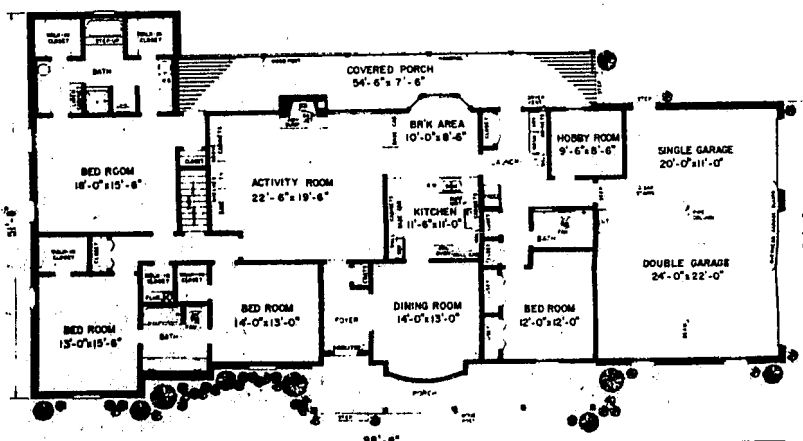

The activity room includes a fireplace, TV area, and base cabinets with shelves above.

The square kitchen provides exceptional work space, built-in appliances, and a breakfast area with a bay window. The laundry room, a special hobby room, a full bath, a maid's room (or in-law room), occupy the full depth between the kitchen and triple garage area. Storage space is unbelievable and there is a laundry tub and disappearing stair from the garage.

Three additional bedrooms are at the other end. Each bedroom has direct access to a bath and again, closet space is exceptional. The master bedroom suite has covered porch access and a dream bath with separate tub and shower, two vanity areas, and two walk-in closets.

The long covered porch can be reached through the laundry or master bedroom. Stairs to the playroom are central.

The exterior construction is brick and wood with columned front porch, bay window, gable roof with offsets, and diamond and multi-lite shuttered windows.

FOUNDATION PLAN
PLAN NO. 2822

The plan is number 2822. It includes 2885 square feet of heated area on the main floor and 700 additional square in the basement playroom. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency, and are guaranteed to meet all F.H.A. and V.A. requirements.

For further information on plan 2822, write W.D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P.O. Box 49463, Atlanta, Ga. 30359.

Corvette Carnival at Rademachers

The North Oaks Corvette Club held their 5th annual Concourse D, Elegance, car show at Rademachers Chevrolet in Clarkston last Saturday. More than fifty corvette owners brought their personal gems out in the weekend rain to the Radmacher showroom.

The 1957 Corvette pictured above belongs to Jerry Wood, 6150 Waldon, in Clarkston. Wood says that since the car was restored five years ago it hasn't suffered from a minute's abuse of a Michigan winter.

The cars and their owners vied for trophies and national points in the show which lasted all day.

WHIPLASH INJURIES

In many cases, the symptoms of whiplash injuries do not appear for months or years. Actual changes in the spine may have occurred by that time -- permanent, irreversible damage.

If you've been in a recent auto accident, have your spine checked right away by your chiropractor.
