Clarkston Man Arrested in Cocaine Bust

by Mike Wilcox and Al Wieling

Neighbors characterize Charles D. Boldin, who was one of seven men arrested last week in Georgia for having 647 pounds of cocaine in their possession, as a loner who often had expensive "toys" at his Clarkston residence.

Boldin, 43, is accused of helping a plane land at a remote northwest Georgia location. The plane was loaded with 647 pounds of cocaine, worth over $300 million on the street.

Undercover agents were waiting at the landing site when the plane came down. They exchanged gunfire with the seven men involved, but no one was hurt and after a short chase, all were arrested.

According to the FBI, Boldin communicated with the plane's pilot via a "little blue box" and gave the "all clear" sign for the landing.

Boldin, who lived at 41 Holcomb nine years until divorcing his wife this February, did not associate with his neighbors.

Next door neighbor Mrs. James Sinclair said, "He wasn't friendly with the neighborhood. He just kept to himself. And nobody had anything to do with him, because he was always nasty with everyone."

Mrs. Sinclair added, "He always had expensive play toys in the yard like large yachts. We couldn't figure out how he could pay for them."

Another neighbor, Mrs. Della Johnson had a slightly different opinion of Boldin.

"When my son was living (he died three years ago) he used to neighbor with them a lot. He and my son used to be quite good friends and at the time he was considered to be a nice fellow that worked hard," remembered Mrs. Johnson.

After the divorce, Boldin moved in with his parents in White Lake Township.

He has four children, three adults and a 13 years old son Boldin was granted custody of.

Court records show Boldin allegedly fell $8617 behind in payments on the Holcomb residence. He also was allegedly behind on child support payments to his former wife.

In 1980, Boldin filed suit, claiming he was defrauded when he purchased a Davisburg candy manufacturing business in 1979. Boldin, who had purchased the business for $142,000, said it was unprofitable. The suit was dismissed.

Boldin is being held in the Floyd County, Georgia jail. Bail has been set at $5 million.

Husband Claims Haggart Assaulted Seven

The man arrested for allegedly beating a Clarkston woman in her front yard has a history of violent activity, according to the assailant's husband.

Alvin Haggart has seven assault charges against him, but has never been convicted, said Vick Racowsky, husband of the assault victim, Jeanne Racowsky.

Racowsky said Haggart used to work as a bouncer in a Lake Orion tavern until moving to Belleville recently, where he was arrested.

"When Jeanne went to the line-up they brought out four or five people and when she saw Haggart, she went into hysterics. There was no doubt that was the guy," said Racowsky.

Mrs. Racowsky was dragged from her Paramus Street home and severely beaten in the face four weeks ago. She was rushed to the hospital, where she required plastic surgery.

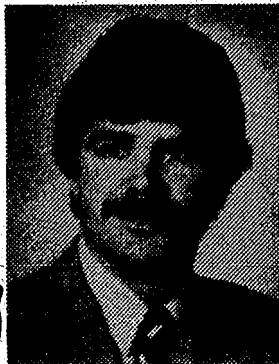

Haggart was bound over to Circuit Court for trial after waiving his preliminary hearing.

PAINFULLY STIFF NECK HELPED

Denise Curtis

I was walking on a balance team when I slipped and fell backward. I landed on my head and neck, but didn't feel any pain right away. The next morning I couldn't even get out of bed because the pain was so bad and I could barely move my neck. My Chiropractor had helped me with other health problems before so I went to him for help. After the first adjustment I could move my neck a little but still had the pain. After the second adjustment I could move freely again, but there was still slight pain. Now my neck moves good again and the pain is all gone.

I'm a cheerleader and my neck problem kept me from practicing. It also kept me out of school for a day, but now I'm back in shape.

Chiropractic Care had helped my cold and sore throat problems before. So I knew it could help with my neck.

"Royal Family" at OU

Jane Lowry and Marian Primont in Meadow Brook's forthcoming production of "The Royal Family" by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, opening Thursday, November 4 thru November 28 at Oakland University, Rochester.

The next area we want to cover is Benefits Planning. This is probably the one area of planning that everyone knows the most about and understands the least. How many of you have ever read through the fine print of your benefits booklet from work to find out the extent as well as the limitations of your benefits? And if you did, did you then translate those benefits to your own situation? It is impossible to think that the benefits all employees of one company have could address the unique nature of each individual and family. It just doesn't happen. Everyone is different. So it is absolutely essential that proper planning take place with regard to benefits.

The first point to understand is that there are three sources of benefits: 1. employers, 2. government, 3. self. And there are basically three situations that those benefits should address: 1. retirement, 2. disability, 3. death. And here is where things begin to get complicated, because different people have different priorities on these objectives. Additionally, everyone's situation is different depending where they work, how much they make, what expenses they have, etc., etc.

The professional approach to this area calls for first satisfying the family's objectives in the event of death, because death is so unpredictable. Disability is next. And retirement is last.

Please send your questions on financial planning to Financial Planning for the 80's c/o The Reminder, 6569 Dixie Hwy., Clarkston, MI 48016.

Author Burns at Town Hall

A Celebrity Luncheon will follow the lecture for season-ticket holders only. Those desiring luncheon reservations may call Mrs. Florence Zampol, 673-5733 by Friday, November 5.

Harris Speaks to PTO

As assistant director of the Social Studies program at Oakland Schools, Dr. Harris has done research and written on this topic. He is currently developing curriculum materials to stimulate ethical reasoning. Dr. Harris' talk is a part of the Positive Attitude Week planned for Davisburg Elementary Nov. 1-5.

Church Bazaar Nov. 13

The Calico Mission Bazaar will be held Saturday, November 13 at the Community United Presbyterian Church of Drayton Plains from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

IF DEATH OCCURS IN THE HOSPITAL

With the advances of modern medicine, even very ill people are being kept alive longer. When death does come at last, it's now most likely that it will come in the hospital.

Many people are uncertain about what action to take in such a circumstance. We recommend that you call your funeral director immediately, for this reason: He can begin to make the necessary arrangements for transporting the deceased and preparing for the funeral services you have selected. We as funeral directors have experience in dealing with hospital personnel and can handle all the necessary details in a professional and competent manner.

Once these arrangements have been made, proceeding with the appropriate memorials comes naturally, and the grieving family is not burdened with unnecessary, trivial details. We handle everything in accordance with your wishes.

We can tell you more about funeral services and the planning they entail. Please call or stop by.

Talk is Cheap... Now It's Time for Politicians to Act

Now that the election is over it's time to make note of some of the promises that were made during the heat of the campaign.

For instance we heard from the very lowest officeholders to the highest a need for more JOBS, JOBS, JOBS.

Each of the candidates claimed a good way to generate more jobs is to overhaul the single business tax, unemployment compensation and worker's compensation. By so doing they would hope to create an environment more favorable to business.

As a small businessman, I hope those statements were not "campaign rhetoric", used to attract votes and be forgotten once safely in office.

Michigan really does need to take a second look at some of its restrictive laws. Small business, as I so often heard throughout the campaign, is where most of the new jobs are going to open up. They won't open up, however, if the laws remain as they are.

The single business tax has been a point of contention ever since it was enacted a few years ago. It taxes businesses on their payroll, without regard to whether the business has made a profit or not. Most politicians have been campaigning with the platform that it should be repealed, or at the very least, reformed.

Now it's time that they start seeking those reforms. The same can be said for unemployment compensation and worker's compensation. It's time this State was brought in line with surrounding states. It's time we stopped being the welfare mecca of the entire nation.

Dead Boy's Grandparents Disspell Rumors

To the Editor and Friends of Robert Ogg Jr.:

I am writing this with very mixed emotions. We want to thank the people who have given their consolations, gifts, flowers and feelings. We want everyone to know that, as grandparents, we have a great loss. This child had everything to live for and nothing to lose. The "incident" is very hard on the family.

If this had been an accident, then last Wednesday he (Robert) would have been put to rest. This is not an accident, but a murder or homicide, however we want to put it. This will not be put to rest until the authorities have located the person and have done the "due process of law".

As you can imagine, I am very upset with the loss of my grandson, but we and the family will keep going on. We have been told we are a family of survivors. I have to thank many people that have helped Pat and me in this very trying time but all names could not be listed for fear of forgetting some.

For this fear I just wish to thank everyone who has helped and given support.

I do wish to make a comment in behalf of the family. I wish the rumors that have been going around about Diane being jailed for murdering her son will be put to rest. She has never been implicated in this matter. Yes, the father and mother have had to subject themselves to a polygraph test. The police have their reasons, but sometimes I don't comprehend the timing, the methods, the questions.

For the people of Ortonville, I am sorry because there is no way that I can say that your children are safe. The problem that keeps coming into my mind is that many parents will "protect the children in a glass house" or other means of protection. We have to remember that the children are also beings that have lives to live.

Because Bobby died, do not lock up your children. They have to live.

Rather than that carry on, I sincerely wish to thank the people who have helped. Thankyou very much.

LETTERS

Dear Editor:

As the November 1 cut-off date for petition signatures regarding the Waterford Courthouse referendum approaches citizens should be asking themselves some serious questions about the courthouse issue.

At first, the issue may appear to be anything but a personal one involving each and every citizen but at second glance you will find that it is.

The most obvious resident involved is the possibility of increased expenses to the resident township and possibly to the resident himself on his tax bill. It is being said by township officials that the budget can and does provide for the anticipated expenditures of constructing a one million dollar courthouse and maybe it does. But I doubt there are any citizens left who are not aware of the changing economic climate in this country and of its unpredictability.

The possibility of higher taxes in the near future cannot however be the only basis for such a decision as the courthouse one. The courthouse and how it performs its duty will eventually effect the entire community and the welfare and security of its residents.

The Waterford Township community will have to weigh for itself the benefits of maintaining an efficient and productive judicial system and support wholly whatever that choice may be.

As the referendum date draws near it does appear that this final decision will be left to the community at large. If that becomes the case all the facts involved will have to be reviewed by those who will choose to utilize their constitutional right to vote and as we have seen in the recent years the percentage of citizens who make that choice is slight.

All subjects of community interest that involve 'money' become political in their nature out of necessity. We, America, are a political exercise as are all other forms of government being applied across the world. The beauty of our particular system is that it honestly allows the citizen an opportunity to help create his destiny. The shame of our system is the populace and its depressing lack of interest in its own destiny. The shame is the citizen who does not honor his heritage and vote.

The Waterford courthouse may not be a national priority. It may not even have township priority in the public's view. Whether or not it will be constructed, left as it is or moved to a renovated building will not bother the world as a whole in the least. What does happen with the Waterford Courthouse will do one thing though. It will show with unblushing honesty just how informed and independent Waterford citizens are and how committed they are to shaping their own destiny.

The last township board came to office with the voter approval of less than 40 percent of registered township voters. They are doing their best to perform and carry out their duties as they see them. And that is a partially correct path to follow with the exception of one thing. Government in a Democratic society was never meant to contain the intentions and desires of a small group of people no matter how informed or well intentioned they may be. One man nor one small group of men should have to take on the moral, ethical or community responsibilities concerning so many. Democracy as our forefathers intended it to be was to voice the opinions and needs of many through the voice of a few elected persons.

What happens to Democracy when only a few voters are voiceful? What type of representation can the remaining majority expect if their wishes and needs are not heard or if those elected assume silence means non preference? Aren't those elected officials correct in their assumption that they are elected to decide for the people not with the people? How can public welfare and mandate be satisfied without anything but silence from the people?

The Waterford Courthouse is a small small concern in some respects that is true. Who cares where the judges and their staff work? Who cares how prisoners are held or lawbreakers dealt with? Who cares?

You, the citizen will care should you or someone you love or respect come before that judicial stand. Whether rightly or wrongly you will want your constitutional rights guaranteed. You will want the file complete. You will want the jury properly selected and advised and cloistered for impartial and intelligent review of your case. You will care if your life, your way of living or your freedom is threatened.

The Waterford Courthouse seems to have a valid need for improved conditions. The township officials, in trying to do your job and their job, have invested a certain amount of time and a sizable amount of money already in determining a course of action to remedy the adverse situation. Whether or not they have made a sound decision is not for any one person to say. It is for the township resident to say. The facts are muddled and hard to research initially but the local papers do their best to present, between them, a fair accounting of what those facts are. Yes it's political. Yes, it's a pain in the neck. But it is also your money, your township and your guarantee of judicial process. Please register to vote and then vote. Vote every time the opportunity presents itself. Any vote, cast in any manner, is a vote for Democracy and Freedom.

TRIVIA

by Mike Morrow

I knew it wouldn't be easy to quit smoking. That's why I didn't even try. Instead I concentrated on just cutting down. I knew that would be hard enough to accomplish without injuring innocent bystanders.

The first step was switching to a low-tar and nicotine brand of cigarette. Next I cut down on the number of cigarettes I smoked each day. How come everything sounds easier writing about it than it does living it?

The first time I smoked a low-tar and nicotine cigarette I anticipated a great tasting, much safer smoke. Boy was I disappointed. No one told me they made them safer by removing the flavor. I lit the first cigarette and inhaled deeply. Nothing happened. I checked to make sure it was lit. The hole in my new shirt told me it was, so I tried again. Still nothing, no flavor, no smoke, nothing. After making sure it wasn't torn I inhaled with all my might, breathing so deeply I got dizzy. Before I knew it, the cigarette was finished, my cheeks were sore and I still wanted a cigarette.

Vowing not to give up, I stuck with them reasoning that not only was I doing less damage to my lungs, but I was exercising my face.

Next I cut down on the number of cigarettes I smoked each day. Out of shame, I won't tell you how much I was smoking a day, let's just say that heroin addiction would have been a cheaper habit.

I hoped eventually to get down to smoking under a half a pack a day. That seemed enough like not smoking while still being able to smoke so that I wouldn't turn into a loon.

Well, I did it, turned into a loon I mean. The combination of less nicotine and fewer cigarettes made me crabby as hell. I looked forward to each cigarette, watching the clock feverishly until I could smoke. When it was time, look out, I made a bee-line to the cigarettes so fast I mowed down anyone in my way.

What began to happen was that I cheated and didn't wait long enough between cigarettes so that by noon I had smoked my entire days allotment.

It's gotten better now, but I'm still not completely used to it. As a matter of fact, I just realized I'm all "smoked out" for the day. I guess I'll call it a day and go to bed. I hope I can sleep, it's awfully sunny this morning.

Psychologist Explains How to Handle Situation Flasher Cavorts in Front of Thendara Youngsters

by Claudia Brazel

It's a typical day in Thendara Park, a neighborhood of sprawling, expensive-looking homes on the northeast side of Independence Township.

The day is peaceful. The weather is fair and sunny. The neighborhood seems especially alive as the air is filled with multiple sounds of people at play and work.

Small children cluster safely within carefully limited areas of parental consent while older children race by on their bicycles or lazily walk familiar paths in search of a particular friend or a game to join in.

Parents are within shouting distance. Warnings have been habitually given regarding speeding cars, traffic dangers and talking to strangers.

The points have been covered, the precautions taken, the immediate future seems secure. Secure, at least, until He comes.

In a car; On a motorcycle; Rarely on foot for He must be able to move away quickly; He comes to alter your day. Perhaps even to alter your child's life.

And He will be able to return; Repeatedly threatening the security of your own home; For although He is an exhibitionist, exposing himself to the unfortunate victim of the moment, his crime remains, uniquely hidden and largely unreported.

Children in Thendara Park have been exposed to such an exhibitionist.

The Sheriff's Department has been called, but as of yet, haven't caught the flasher.

There is talk in the neighborhood of forming a "parent watch", in which parents would become more active in keeping "tabs" on their youngsters. The neighborhood is concerned and anxious to see that the exhibitionist is caught.

Because of its sexual nature, the crime of indecent exposure is riddled with built-in cultural fears and anxieties that pressure those involved to refrain from public admission, choosing a course of passivity in hopes of avoiding further unpleasantness. The 'problem' however will not go away.

So, what do you do when the fair weather day becomes clouded with indecency? With the help of James Windell, MA of Clinical Resources in Clarkston, who has supplied the professional information, we will try to examine the effects of this crime of exposure on children, determine how as parents we should respond and find out why it often goes unreported and if that is wise.

Let's begin with a quick look at the person perpetrating the crime. It is fairly common knowledge that the person who practices indecent exposure is in need of help. His particular dysfunction is sexual in nature and on the surface may appear to be non-violent in expression. Windell tells us however that assuming a lack of violence in the person who 'simply' exposes himself is a common misconception which may lead people to believe that involvement with law enforcement agencies may not really be necessary in cases of indecent exposure. That can be a very dangerous opinion to hold on to.

In cases of emotional dysfunction, such as those underlying the exhibitionist's urge, the presence of violence or lack of it cannot be identified. Whatever gratification the exhibitionist receives from his exposure can reach an absorption point in which the act of exposure no longer satisfies his need for expression of his particular fantasy or problem.

It is a highly volatile nature we speak of here and each incident of occurrence should not be looked upon as an isolated act that has done no great harm and can be put aside, claims Wendell. The next child may not be so lucky and in fact the victim of exposure alone suffers emotionally and sometimes mentally and physically as well.

Children of various ages will usually react differently to this situation just as they do to others. The young child may demonstrate some concern over the accessibility to the stranger, especially if they have talked with him. Fear that he may know where they live or that they have done something wrong because they did not react correctly when approached by this stranger are common reactions but most always temporary and the incident itself is most often viewed as a 'one time thing' in the young child's mind.

Should the child express regressive behavior for any amount of time after the incident it may be a signal that other problems exist within the child and they may be affecting his ability to place this particular incident into proper perspective, said Windell.

Windell feels that the younger child generally has an easier time dealing with this type of occurrence due to his naiveness regarding the subject of sexual rights and wrongs.

The older child however, is aware or just becoming aware of biological changes and differences and has a clearer picture of what has actually taken place. She, and it usually is a she, is therefore more apt to be left with a deeper sense of fear.

Awareness of the possibilities that could have occurred in such close proximity and within familiar surroundings is an awakening to the cold harsh realities of the real world and can expand that already present fear by the added feeling of not being able to control what happens to them in their own immediate environment.

How should a parent react when their child tells them that they have become victimized in such a manner? The first thing, according to Windell, is to try to remain calm. A parent's initial reaction is one of anger and outrage frequently followed by their frustration at not being able to control outside experiences involving their child. It is not wrong to show concern of course or even anger as long as it is modified in the child's presence and does not result in the child feeling as though she was in some way to blame.

Talk soothingly to the child asking her if she is all right. Do not begin the discussion with questions such as: What did he do to you? as that immediately places the child in a situation where she views herself as a participant rather than a victim and can increase the severity of her reaction.

Instead, Windell suggests a more subtle approach, assuring the child that she has done the right thing in coming to you with the information following with a gentle urging that she tell you what did happen. The language and tone of voice should be non-threatening and the child should be allowed to set her own pace as she begins to open up and discuss the incident.

An experience of this type can often lead to questions concerning basic facts of life and they should be answered honestly with love and understanding at the time they are asked.

The parent is also advised to watch their child's reactions and to talk with her about her feelings regarding the experience pointing out that sometimes it helps to talk things out and share bad experiences as well as the happier ones with someone who cares about her.

Is gentle counseling and supportive love all that is required in handling a child's exposure to such socially deviant behavior? Unfortunately, not. Windell feels that in all cases public law enforcement agencies should be alerted. There are many positive reasons for this.

The first priority is to give the child a distinct picture of who is guilty and who is not. A unified effort of parent, child and enforcement official in attempting to identify and restrain the exhibitionist is a positive statement for the child as to where the fault lies. It can help lessen the child's fear too that such experiences are out of anyone's control and that she is at the mercy of outside influences always.

When law enforcement officers become involved parents often worry that the incident will be magnified in the child's mind that she will have difficulty handling it. This is generally not the case. In fact, the child's participation is often a maturing process that places her in the role of citizenship allowing her to experience the positive means a person has available in controlling and developing their own environment.

She recognizes a loyalty and duty to others, her friends included, by helping to prevent their being victimized in the future. She can feel some measure of control in reporting the incident, describing what occurred and knowing that she has done her very best to help increase the chance of stopping the individual before he does further harm.

The officers in general are very empathetic to the child's situation and feelings and usually lead the child into a quiet discussion and recitation of the facts again helping her to see clearly which side of the law she stands for, explained Windell.

SMALL TALK

by Rebecca Roberts

Unlike most how-to-bring-up-your-kids books, real parenting is full of discrepancies. There are whole chapters of compromise in real life, and dialogue that is not guided by prescribed formulas.

This is how it goes. Adam comes home one day and says "I have this friend. He and his dad go hunting."

Wince. I don't like guns, and I have struggled with this issue all my parenting life. Guns make me nervous. They represent to me a mentality -- a code of violence. Much as my logical mind tries to clean this picture up, the belief persists. Guns mean trouble. Not I might add an unfounded conclusion at which to arrive.

So, Adam wants a gun. I say no, no, NO. He says why, why, WHY? Because, I say -- I say all the things I've stated above, laced with the high pitch of impatience and the thud of finality. NO.

Adam says, "I'll take Hunter's Safety."

During these days, I am trying to pull my fears apart, examining their content. What are they made of? Why are they so resilient, even to the point of withstanding logic? Which ones are real, which ones must I keep, and which must I relinquish in order to get at the truth?

SAY YOU SAW IT IN THE REMINDER THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1982 PAGE SEVENTEEN

Hunter's Safety. Safety. A guideline. A way of approaching the issue with a cool head and the pragmatic eye of the skeptic. Oh Adam, you are so smart.

He takes the course. Four nights he must go, and if he misses one, he has to start all over. Four nights, every night a three hour drill; films, lectures, no horsing around. This is the big time, kid, the real thing. Not a gun in the room. Just words, and films. Big words. Responsibility. Caution.

For Adam, there was a moment here and there where the drag of the hours caused him some hesitation. But we knew he'd finish. He knew too. Thursday comes. Last night of the course. Test time. If he passes, he'll get his certificate. If he doesn't -- well, better to think positively.

The questions are all based on the material covered over those long twelve hours. Still, it is nerve-wracking. Adam knows if he passes, he will eventually get his gun.

Adam did pass. He saved up some money and recently got a 12-gauge shotgun. He knows the rules, the law that is, regarding the use of guns. I'm confident that Adam understands and respects those rules.

And here we have established a few of our own rules, rules that comply with our sensibilities, our personal philosophies.

No hunting without a responsible adult along. That's the main one.

Because his dad feels the same as I do about hunting, Adam will probably do that with his grandfather.

Adam and his dad plan to go skeet-shooting this weekend.

Some things just don't fit between the covers of a book.

Kids Learn Positive Attitude

self image goes up", the students and staff wore outfits reserved for special occasions. Confidence, energy, success, character and cheerfulness were to be the by words of the day.

Wednesday was dedicated to "see the good" - Good deeds and attitudes were stressed. All the students of the school filled out a "warm fuzzy" contract listing their plans to do something nice for someone.

Wednesday evening offered a chance for parents to become involved. Dr. David Harris, Assistant Director of the Social Studies Department at Oakland Intermediate Schools presented a talk on the "Development of Ethical Reasoning In Children" dealing with response to reasonable rules.

Thursday is "Dear Day" - (Drop Everything

Positive Attitude Week (P.A.W.) to be held at the Davisburg Elementary School. The week of November 1 through November 5 saw a multitude of activities held to emphasize positive attitude and respect for caring for each other.

Monday's theme was "Tip Your Hat Day" - The students and staff all wore hats in the school (a departure from the rules) so that they might emphasize compliments given to others with a tip of the hat. Friendship, humor, attitudes and caring were words to be demonstrated.

Tuesday was "Dress Up Day" - In an effort to demonstrate that "as you dress up, your and Read) - In an effort to bring meaning to the quotation "Those who do not read have little advantage over those who cannot read," bookmarks proclaiming "Those who do not read have little advantage over those who cannot read," were given to the children. P.A. announcements were made proclaiming Drop Everything and Read. Children and adults as well did just that for a twenty-minute block.

Friday is proclaimed as Red, White and Blue Day - Everyone is encouraged to wear red, white and blue on that day. The 600 plus students of the school will assemble on the school lawn and witness the flag raising and a mass "pledge of allegiance" given.

At a morning assembly red, white, and blue warm "fuzzies" will be passed out to students and staff.

The ideas for this Positive Attitude Week were derived from a committee composed of teachers, parents and the principal who were looking for ways to reinforce respect for self and others.

Their goal is to "afford experiences to students to grow academically, psychologically and emotionally. These experiences should afford challenges and successes and from positive feedback a liking or respect of one's own capabilities and talents."

Meet Your Community Businessperson: Building Company Specializes in Energy-Saving Homes

Five years ago, the Joseph J. Duran Building Company underwent a name change to become Energy Craft Homes. This change reflects the increasing demand for energy efficient construction and a commitment on the part of the company to supply energy-saving homes of contemporary design.

Along with the commitment to maximize energy savings, the homes are designed with the lifestyle of the residents in mind. The philosophy of Energy Craft can best be described in a recent quote by the President of the company, Joe Duran:

"The future of residential construction is dependent upon the reduction of utility & energy use. We feel that this can be best accomplished by the type of additional conservation features utilized in our homes, passive solar design

& partial use of active solar components."

Energy Craft homes have been constructed throughout Oakland County. These include many passive solar designs which add to the energy savings.

Energy Craft Homes specializes in photovoltaic

(conversion of sunlight to electricity) systems, solar space heating, solar hot water heating, energy conservation, custom solar homes & solar modernization.

Energy Craft is located at 4385 Dixie Hwy. in Drayton Plains. The office is open

Meet Your Community Businessperson Davisburg Home Builders Become Active Homes Dealer

Davisburg Home Builders was started in October 1943 as the Davisburg Lumber and Coal Co. by Charles Hillman. Marlan and Elwyn Hillman purchased the business from him.

The two brothers have a combined approx. 65 years in the business. Quality at a fair price has been the motto over the years. The first has been contracting new homes for 20 years mixed with kitchen and other remodeling. Service and satisfaction has sustained the longevity of the business.

Davisburg Home Builders (formerly called Davisburg Lumber Co., Inc.) has built more than one home for some of their customers. As time passed they not only built homes for Mother and Father but also some of their children when they grew up and left home.

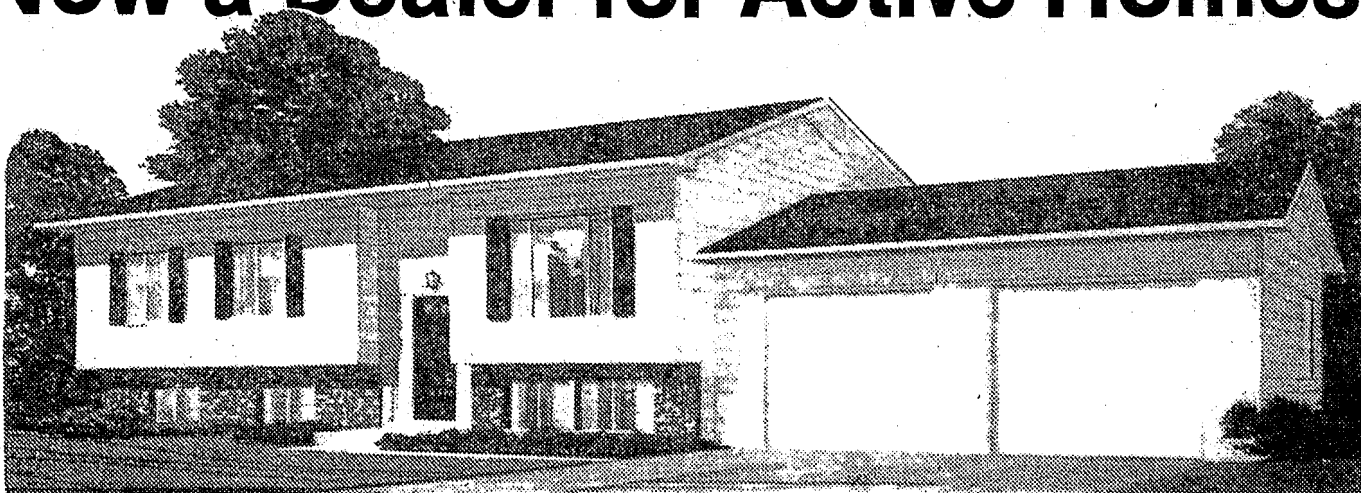

Davisburg Home Builders has taken another step in furnishing quality housing. They are now a dealer for Active Homes in Marlette, Michigan. This venture in homes has many models and prices to fit everyone's need.

Even with the addition of Active Homes the Davisburg Home Builders will still build to the customers prints or stock plans that are on hand. We look forward to serving you with quality workmanship and materials in the future as we have in the past.
